

BR 742 .H16 1819
Hales, William, 1747-1831.
An essay on the origin and purity of the primitive

A N E S S A Y

ON THE

ORIGIN AND PURITY

OF THE

PRIMITIVE CHURCH

OF THE

British Isles,

AND

ITS INDEPENDENCE UPON

THE CHURCH OF ROME.

---

BY THE REV. WILLIAM HALES, D.D.

RECTOR OF KILLESANDRA, &c.

---

---

SERVETUR AD IMUM,
QUALIS AB INCEPTO PROCESSERIT.

---

“ *May it be preserved to the end,
As it set out from the beginning!* ”

---

---

London:

Printed by R. WILKS, 89, Chancery Lane;

AND SOLD BY F. C. & J. RIVINGTON, BOOKSELLERS, ST. PAUL'S CHURCH YARD, AND WATERLOO PLACE, PALL MALL.

1819.

TO

FRANCIS MASERES, Esq.

CURSITOR BARON OF THE EXCHEQUER,

LEARNED HIMSELF,

AND A PATRON OF LITERATURE;

This Essay,

WRITTEN ON HIS RECOMMENDATION,

AND PUBLISHED AT HIS EXPENSE,

IS GRATEFULLY DEDICATED,

BY HIS OBLIGED

AND OBEDIENT SERVANT,

WILLIAM HALES.

10. Leucosia leucostoma Wolff 1867, p. 137.

1. Leucosia leucostoma leucostoma leucostoma

P R E F A C E.

---

THE following is a sketch of the plan of this Publication. In the INTRODUCTION, is detailed circumstantially that artful and refined system of policy, by adhering to which, under a succession of able, ambitious, and persevering Pontiffs, the Church of Rome was at length enabled to domineer over her Sister Churches in the west of Europe, and to establish her usurped supremacy over them for many ages, till the blessed Reformation, which emancipated the Protestant Churches from her despotic dominion.

In the ESSAY itself, the primitive Churches of the British Isles are considered as composing the integral parts of one National Church; and that Church a venerable branch of the Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church, renowned for the purity and simplicity of its Faith and Discipline. Acts. ii. 42.

Rejecting unfounded traditions, in the first Section, the knowledge of Christianity is shewn, in the second, to have been introduced into Britain about A.D. 57, by Bran, the father of Caractacus, and his associates, who had been converted to the Christian faith, during a seven years' residence at Rome, as a hostage for his son's fidelity, when liberated, and restored to his kingdom in Britain, by the emperor Claudius, A.D. 50. Bran was probably converted by Aquila and Priscilla, St. Paul's fellow-labourers in the Gospel, who were then resident at Rome, and formed a Church there. (Rom. xvi. 3—5.) The British Church appears to have been established in the reign of Lles, or Lucius, the great grandson of Caractacus, about A.D. 177.

The knowledge of Christianity is shewn, in the third Section, to have been introduced into Ireland also, by means of a noble Irishman, surnamed Mansuetus; who is said to have been converted by St. Peter; and afterwards sent by him to preach the Gospel in Gaul, where he was appointed the first bishop of Toul in Lorraine; and is celebrated also for having planted Christianity in his native country, by his historians, Adso, &c. If St. Peter preached in Spain, as is probable, in St. Paul's stead, about A.D. 64; he might there easily have met Mansuetus, either as a traveller, or a trader, from Ireland. The Irish nation, however, were not fully converted from paganism to Christianity until the days of their illustrious apostle St. Patrick, about A.D. 432. He was a north Briton, born near Dunbarton. And the Irish saints of his school, Aidan, Finan, Colum-kille, those venerable missionaries, amply repaid the inestimable benefit, by planting the Gospel, in turn, among the Caledonians, Picts, and Saxons.

The intimate union and connexion of the British and Irish Churches, and the purity and simplicity of their doctrines and discipline, and their joint and strenuous opposition from the earliest times, to the innovations and encroachments of the modern

Church of Rome, down to the present day : are detailed in the third, fourth, and sixth Sections.

In the fifth Section, are recorded the precautionary measures of ecclesiastical regulation, adopted by foreign states, to counteract the usurped supremacy of the Church and Court of Rome, in holding intercourse with their Roman Catholic subjects. In this article, two valuable documents have been carefully consulted and abridged. 1.—The Report of a Committee of the House of Commons, folio, 1817 ; which furnishes a curious and authentic mass of information on the subject : And, 2.—A Correspondence between the Courts of Rome and Baden, in the year 1817 ; relative to the election of Baron Wessenberg, by the Chapter of Constance, to be Vicar Capitular of that See, on the demise of the former Bishop, which was approved by the Grand Duke of Baden, the sovereign, but arbitrarily rejected by His Holiness, Pius VII. ; in consequence of which, His Royal Highness published a dignified Memorial to the German Powers, stating the Papal encroachments, both on the rights and privileges of the Secular Princes, and on the liberties and immunities of the Catholic Church in Germany, May 17, 1818.

The APPENDIX to the Essay contains some curious and interesting articles of antiquarian information.

The first is designed to shew, that Ireland was better known than Britain, to the early navigators and traders of Phœnicia, Carthage, Greece, and Spain; and to amend, and modernize, Ptolomy's ancient Geography of Ireland, about A.D. 150, by correcting mistakes, and annexing the modern names of places, in the Map of Ireland published by Bertius, and republished by Dr. O'Conor in his Rerum Hibernicarum Scriptores veteres, Vol. I. quarto, 1813.

The second is intended to explain the origin and design of the ancient Round Towers of Ireland, from their resemblance to the Round Pillars of Palestine, which were erected in honour of the Baals, the Sun and Moon, the earliest species of Idolatry, (Job xxxi. 26—28. Deut. iv. 19.) and to shew, that the Catacombs under the latter, were principally intended for sepulchres of their sacred animals, the Bull, the Crocodile, &c.

The third contains an improved edition of St. Patrick's Confession, or Epistle to the Irish; written in Latin, not long before his decease, and republished by that eminent Irish scholar Dr. O'Conor, from two of the oldest Irish MSS.—the Cottonian of 800 years standing, and the Armagh of 1000.

The fourth contains also an improved edition of Fiech's Irish Poem, or Panegyric on St. Patrick, written soon after his death, and republished also by Dr. O'Conor, ibid. from the old Donegal MS., with a New Latin Version. From his Version, chiefly, is given a New English Translation; with Notes, explanatory of obscurities and difficulties, by the help of Vallancey's Collectanea de Rebus Hibernicis, Vol. VI. and other Irish documents.

The fifth gives an account of some Antique Medals of our Blessed Saviour, both Silver and Brass, found in the British Isles, whose age and authenticity is examined.

May the mass of evidence adduced in this Essay, from original and authentic sources, to prove the purity and simplicity of the Primitive Religion, and independence of the Ecclesiastical Regimen of the British Isles, contribute, with the Divine Blessing, to bring back these “lost sheep, who have erred” from the good old way, and “strayed” into the deceitful and dangerous paths of Popery; so that with “the remnant that is left” of the Reformed Church, we may quickly become, one fold under one Shepherd, JESUS CHRIST THE RIGHTEOUS, the true Shepherd and Bishop of our Souls.

Killesandra,
13th April, 1819.

---

CONTENTS.

---

INTRODUCTION. Original independence of the primitive Churches, planted by the Apostles, p. 1.—recognized, and confirmed by the four first General Councils, p. 2. Early ambition of the Church of Rome, p. 2; her aggrandizement, by a refined and systematic course of policy, p. 3. Establishment of the modern Church of Rome, by the Council of Trent, p. 4. Gregory the Great, his excellent definition of the Holy Catholic Church, p. 7.—I. The Roman Church, not the Holy Catholic Church, p. 7, 8.—II. not the mother and mistress of all Churches, p. 8, 9.—III. not founded by St. Peter, p. 9. St. Peter visited Rome after St. Paul, and for a short time, p. 11—26.—IV. The Church, not founded upon Peter, but upon the rock CHRIST, p. 27—35.—Peter's privileges, not exclusive, p. 36—38.—V. The Roman Pontiff, not the Vicar of Christ, p. 38. Historical survey of the rise of the pontifical title and power, p. 38—59. Sir Edwin Sandys' description of the worldly policy of the Romish Ecclesiastical Government, p. 59—63.

ESSAY, &c. its necessity, and plan, p. 55, 56.

SECTION I. UNFOUNDED TRADITIONS RESPECTING THE ORIGIN OF THE BRITISH AND IRISH CHURCHES, p. 67. 1. Not founded by St. John, p. 67, 69; nor by St. James the elder, p. 68;—3. nor by St. James the less, p. 69;—4. nor by Simon Zelotes;—5. nor by St. Peter;—nor by Joseph of Arimathea, p. 69;—6. nor by St. Paul, or Aristobulus, p. 69. Ancient Authorities in support of St. Paul's visit to Britain, examined, p. 71;—Clemens Romanus, p. 71;—Irenæus, p. 73;—Tertullian, p. 73;—Eusebius, p. 73;—Jerome, p. 73, 74;—Theodoret, p. 74;—Venantius Fortunatus, p. 75;—Athanasius, p. 75;—Ludovicus Capellus, p. 76. Authorities against St. Paul's visit, Jerome, p. 78;—Pope Gelasius, p. 79—84;—Thomas Aquinas, p. 80.—Scriptural objections, p. 82—84. St. Peter's visit to Spain, probable, p. 84, 85. Baronius's hypothesis of St. Paul's travels for nine years, refuted, p. 87—96.

SECTION II. INTRODUCTION AND ESTABLISHMENT OF CHRISTIANITY IN BRITAIN, p. 97. British documents referred to, p. 97.—1. Gildas explained, p. 97—108;—2. British Triad, p. 102;—3. Ricardus Corinensis, p. 102. Conversion of Bran, the father of Caractacus, at Rome, p. 104;—first preached the Gospel in Britain, p. 105. Conversion of Pomponia Gracina, p. 105, 106. Lles, or Lucius, established Christianity in Britain, p. 107;—styled Vicar of Christ in his own dominions, by Pope Elutherius, p. 108. British Church fostered by the Roman Emperors, Constantine, &c. p. 109;—harrassed by the Picts and Scots, p. 211. Dynasty of British Princes, p. 112. Purity of the Religion and Discipline of the Primitive British Church, p. 114, 115.

SECTION III. INTRODUCTION AND ESTABLISHMENT OF CHRISTIANITY IN IRELAND, p. 116. Intended invasion of Ireland by the Romans, p. 116—118;—cause of its failure, p. 119. —Account of Tacitus confirmed by the Irish Annals, p. 119. The knowledge of Christianity when introduced into Ireland, and by whom, p. 121, 122. Early and close connection between the British and Irish Churches, p. 123. The Heresy propagated by Pelagius and Celestius, p. 123—127;—opposed by Sedulius, p. 127—131;—repressed in the British Isles, p. 131, 132.—Missions of Germanus and Lupus to Britain, and of Palladius and Patrick to Ireland, falsely imputed by the monkish writers to Pope Celestine, p. 132—136. St. Patrick's existence and mission vindicated, p. 136—137;—his Confession or Epistle to the Irish, p. 137, 138. Fiech's Irish Poem, or Panegyric on St. Patrick, p. 139;—St. Patrick's History, given by himself and by Fiech, p. 140, &c. Tuatha Erin, the meaning of, p. 151. Druidth, meaning of, p. 153. The Diviners and Druïds, Sabian idolaters, p. 156. Grand festivals, of Baal and Sunhim, the Sun and Moon, p. 157—174;—proofs of this idolatry from the names of places, p. 157. Druidical Temples, p. 158, 159. Worship of Images, when introduced in Ireland, p. 159, 160. Round Towers of Ireland, whence derived? and their use? p. 161—164. Miracles falsely ascribed to St. Patrick, p. 166, 167;—the miraculous day of a year's continuance after his death, explained, p. 169, 170, &c. Progress of St. Patrick, p. 170, &c. The four principal Druidical festivals, p. 170—174. St. Patrick's supposed expulsion of serpents, &c. from Ireland, unfounded, p. 176;—held a Synod at Cashel, A.D. 450, p. 178;—regulations there, p. 179;—his faith in the Holy Trinity, p. 183;—his unaffected piety and charity, p. 185;—his intimate knowledge of Scripture, p. 188;—Fiech's account of his decease, p. 189;—his disbelief of Purgatory, 191—193. St. Brigget, p. 194. St. Columba, p. 195;—his evangelical religion afterwards corrupted by the disastrous connexion of the Irish Church with the Church of Rome, p. 197. Ireland formerly a great school of literature, p. 198—200.

SECTION IV. OPPOSITION OF THE IRISH AND BRITISH TO THE USURPED SUPREMACY OF THE CHURCH OF ROME, p. 201. When the Papal jurisdiction was introduced into the British Isles, p. 201;—first opposition to the Claim of Supremacy, by the Irish, p. 201;—Sedulius's interpretation of our Lord's grant to Peter, Matt. xvi. 18, 19. pp. 201—203;—exposition of Claudius, p. 203—206;—of Gildas Badonicus, p. 207—209;—Gildas probably an Irishman, pp. 207—208, note. Opposition of the Irish Bishops to Pope Gregory the Great, p. 209. Opposition of the British Bishops and Abbots to his emissary Austin the Abbot, p. 211;—massacre of twelve hundred Bangorian Monks, by his means, p. 213. Further opposition of the Irish Bishops and Abbots, to the Papal authority, p. 214;—the spirited admonition of Columbanus to Pope Boniface IV. pp. 215—218. Further opposition of the British Church to the Papal authority, p. 219. Welsh poems of Taliessin, against the Pope, p. 220. Conversion of the Saxons, principally owing to the Irish Missionaries, Aidan, Finan, &c. p. 221. II. Opposition of the Saxon Kings to the Papal claims, p. 223. Union of the Church and State, strenuously supported by the laws of Ina, p. 224;—first introduction of Papal encroachment, in his and Offa's reigns, pp. 224, 225. Laws of Ethelbert, p. 225;—of Alfred the Great, p. 225;—of Edmund, p. 226;—of Edgar, p. 226;—of Ethelred, p. 226;—of Canute, p. 226;—of Edward the Confessor, p. 227. III. First introduction of Papal jurisdiction in England, p. 228;—the views of William the Conqueror therein, 228. King Edward the Confessor's vision, note, p. 229. Description of the duty of a King in the English Laws of that period, p. 230. William adopts the Canon Law in preference to the Saxon, p. 231. William Rufus prohibited Appeals to Rome, p. 232. Encroachments of the Pope, during the reigns of Henry I. and Stephen, p. 232. Parliament of Henry III. complain of the Exactions of the Legate, and of the Papal impositions, pp. 232, 233.—Wise regulations of Edward I. to counteract the Papal usurpations, p. 233;—and of his grandson, Edward III. pp. 234—236;—followed up by Richard II. in whose reign the statutes of Provisors and Præmunire were enacted by Parliament, p. 237;—and confirmed in Henry IV.'s reign, p. 239. Opposition of Chichesley Archbishop of Canterbury, to the Papal jurisdiction, pp. 239, 240. Spirited letter of Henry VI. to the Pope, p. 240, 241. Henry VIII.'s proceedings towards the abolishing the ecclesiastical supremacy of the Church of Rome in England, pp. 241—248;—Cranmer's protest against the persecuting clause, in his oath of consecration to the Pope; and against any temporal allegiance to him, note, pp. 245—247. Suppression of the monasteries by Henry VIII. pp. 248, 249;—enaction of the bloody statute of the six Popish articles, p. 249;—Reformation promoted by Edward VI. p. 250;—established by Queen Elizabeth, p. 250;—Archbishop Whitgift's bold remonstrance to her against the further alienation of the Church lands, note, pp. 251—254;—Hooker's complaint of the lay impropriations, p. 254;—Bishop Jewel's sermon, before the Queen, against these abuses, p. 254. James I.'s objection to Papery, p. 256;—sagacious description of its genuine spirit and effects by his Parliament, p. 256. Papal Bulls of excommunication against Henry VIII. p. 257;—against Elizabeth, p. 257, 258;—against James I. p. 258, 259. Bishop Bramhall's letter, stating the serving of Romish ecclesiastics in the Parliament army against Charles I. p. 259—262. IV. In Ireland, the first opposition to the primacy of Armagh, p. 263;—the Dublin Clergy preferred the jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Canterbury, p. 265;—Papal jurisdiction, when introduced into Ireland, and by whom, pp. 265—267. Ingratitude of the See of Rome to the Irish Church and Nation, in the Bulls of Adrian IV. and Alexander III. sanctioning the subjugation.

tion of Ireland, p. 267. Early nomination to the See of Dublin by the Crown, p. 268. Wretched state of Ireland in the reign of Henry III. in consequence of her subjugation to Rome and England, p. 268;—exactions of the King and Pope, p. 269. Opposition to the Reformation in Ireland, pp. 270—272. Archbishop of Mentz's letter to O'Nial, stirring him up to rebellion, p. 272. causes of the failure of Reformation in Ireland, pp. 273—276. Usher's remarkable prediction of the Irish rebellion of 1641. V. Opposition of the Roman Pontiffs to every demonstration of allegiance on the part of the English and Irish Roman Catholics, p. 277 :—1. In the reign of James I. by Pope Paul V. p. 278: 2. On the Restoration of Charles II. in the Irish Recognition of 1666, p. 279: 3. On the bill for registering Popish Priests in Ireland, in 1775 and 1776, p. 209: 4. On the Oath of Allegiance proposed for the Irish Roman Catholics in general, in 1768, by the Nuncio Ghilini, pp. 280—284;—insufficiency of Pope Pius VI.'s apology, pp. 285—287;—how far Faith is to be kept with Heretics, p. 288;—where it is considered as null and void, p. 288;—proved, from the practice of the Popes, p. 288, 289: 5. On the Irish Act of Allegiance in 1774, p. 289;—Cardinal Castelli's letter of censure of it, p. 290: 6. On the Act for Relief of the English Roman Catholics, in 1778;—declaration of the English Catholic Dissenters, p. 291;—opposition of the three Vicars Apostolic thereto, p. 292;—case on the obnoxious clause respecting the Pope's ecclesiastical or spiritual authority submitted to the foreign Universities of Louvain, &c. and to Serjeant Hill, pp. 293—295;—spiritual primacy confounded with ecclesiastical supremacy, p. 296;—spirited protest of the Roman Catholic Committee against the seceding Vicars Apostolic; and appeal to the Apostolic See rightly informed;—their mottos from Lord Somers and Locke, pp. 297—299.

SECTION V. PRECAUTIONS OF FOREIGN NATIONS TO COUNTERACT THE USURPED SUPREMACY OF THE CHURCH OF ROME, p. 300. No distinction, anciently, between the supreme head of the Church, and the supreme head of the State, p. 300. The joint power assumed by Constantine the Great, p. 301. Report of the Committee of the House of Commons in 1817, respecting the system of ecclesiastical polity in foreign states, as to the intercourse between their Roman Catholic subjects, and the Church and See of Rome, p. 302. FRANCE, p. 303;—the Popes patronized by the first kings, p. 304. Subservience of the Popes Adrian I. and Leo III. to Charlemagne, pp. 304—306. Correspondence between Pope Boniface VIII. and Philip le Bel, p. 306. Pithou's statement of the nature and foundation of the ecclesiastical supremacy of the crown of France, p. 307, 308. Liberties of the Gallican Church, p. 309—313. SPAIN, p. 313;—restriction of the Consecration Oath, p. 316;—opposition of the Regent Archbishop of Toledo to the Pope's Nuncio, p. 318;—reestablishment of the Jesuits by Ferdinand VII. p. 320. PORTUGAL, p. 321;—jealousy of the Portuguese government respecting the Papal claims, pp. 321—323;—remonstrance of the Prince Regent against the reestablishment of the Jesuits, pp. 323—325. GERMANY, p. 325;—Austria, Bohemia and Hungary, p. 325;—restriction of the Consecration Oath, p. 326. Congress of Embs, p. 327—330;—Baden, p. 330. Correspondence between the Courts of Baden and of Rome, p. 331. Regulations introduced by Wessenberg into the diocese of Constance during his vicariate, pp. 332—335;—the Pope requires his dismissal, from the Bishop of Constance, p. 335;—the Bishop vindicates him, p. 336;—the Pope rejects his appointment to be Vicar Capitular of the diocese of Constance, p. 337;—the Pope opposed by the Chapter of Constance, p. 338;—and by the Duke of Baden, p. 340;—Wessenberg goes to plead his cause at Rome, p. 341;—his correspondence with Cardinal Gonsalvi, pp. 342—349;—his cause warmly espoused by the several Chapters of the diocese of Constance, pp. 349—350;—and by the Duke of Baden his sovereign, p. 350;—Papal encroachment on the rights of the diocese of Constance in Switzerland, p. 351;—Spirited remonstrance of the Chapter of Constance to the Pope, p. 351—353;—haughty and imperious Papal brief, in answer thereto, p. 355;—complaint of His Holiness to the Duke of Baden, p. 357;—resisted by the Duke, p. 357; Probable effects of the bigotry and pertinacity of the present Pontiff, in finishing the reformation of the German Church, begun by Luther, p. 358. ITALY, p. 359;—the Milanese and Lombardy, p. 359;—Venice, p. 360; Tuscany, p. 361;—Naples and the two Sicilies, p. 363;—importation of Jesuits from Sicily to the British Islands, p. 363;—Sardinia, Piedmont, and Savoy, p. 363;—Switzerland, p. 364. RUSSIA, p. 365.—Toleration of the Jesuits by the Empress Catharine II. in 1782, p. 366;—made a pretext for their recent restoration by Pius VII. in his Brief of July 30, 1804, p. 367;—Ukase for their expulsion by the Emperor Alexander, Dec. 20, 1815, p. 368. PROTESTANT STATES, p. 369.—Denmark, p. 369;—Sweden, p. 371;—Prussia, p. 372;—Holland and the Netherlands, p. 374;—Hamburgh, p. 376;—Saxony, p. 377. BRITISH COLONIES, p. 377;—Canada, p. 377,—dissolution of the order of Jesuits there, in 1770, p. 378;—St. Domingo, p. 379;—Malta, p. 379;—East Indies, p. 380;—United States of America, p. 381. INTERCOURSE OF THE COURT OF ROME, AT PRESENT, WITH THE ENGLISH AND IRISH PAPISTS, p. 381;—alarming increase of Papal intercourse of late years, since 1782, p. 381;—letters of Monsignor Quarantott's, in 1814; and of Cardinal Litta, in 1816, upon the political disquisitions pending between the British Government and the Court of Rome, p. 382;—the rēto offered by them, nugatory and delusive, p. 382;—afford no securities against Papal usurpations, p. 385. Correspondence of His Holiness Pius VI. with the Catholic Board of Dublin, p. 387;—Dr. Troy's refusal to communicate the Pope's letter to them, p. 389. Servile degradation of the Popish ecclesiastics of England and Ireland, instance in the recantations of Gandolphy, p. 390, and of Hayes, p. 391. Clandestine introduction of the Jesuits into the British Isles of late, p. 394;—their removal would not be unacceptable to the Romish prelates and secular clergy, p. 395. Discontents of the Irish clergy at the Pope's disposal of ecclesiastical dignities, p. 396. Advantages that would result from Catholic emancipation, in the abolition of the Pope's ecclesiastical jurisdiction, p. 396.

SECTION VI. p. 398. PURITY OF THE DOCTRINES OF THE PRIMITIVE CHURCH OF THE BRITISH ISLES, p. 398;—The Holy Scriptures, p. 398;—Grace, Faith, Works, Justification and Sanctification, p. 403;—The Lord's Supper, p. 410;—the Romish doctrine of Transubstantiation revolting to common sense, and contrary to Scripture, critically explained, and confuted by the Romish Missal itself, p. 413;—the sacramental doctrine admirably explained by Elfric, Archbishop of Canterbury, A.D. 979, p. 415;—Prayers, p. 419;—Welsh paraphrase of the Lord's Prayer, in the sixth century, p. 419;—Prayers to Christ, p. 420; Maxims and Triads, p. 422. Instructions of Cadoc the Wise, p. 424. Cambrian Society, for the preservation of ancient British Literature, instituted in 1818, p. 426;—similar institution recommended for Ireland, p. 427. Interesting Letters of the late Gen. Vallancey, p. 427;—and of Dr. O'Conor, p. 429.

POSTSCRIPT, p. 433. Vindication of the Report of the Committee of the House of Commons, 1817, from the strictures of Luther, in the Times newspaper, p. 433. Milton's warning against the introduction of Popery, p. 438.

APPENDIX, p. I. I. Ptolemy's Ancient Geography of Ireland Amended and Modernized, p. 3;—the coasts and harbours of Ireland better known to ancient traders and merchants, than those of Britain, p. 3;—Ireland, whence called the Sacred Island, by the Carthaginians, p. 5;—Ptolemy's ancient geography of the British Isles, whence taken, p. 6;—his geographical merits and defects, p. 7;—useful Tables for correcting his geography, I. Table of Climates, p. 9;—II. Table of Degrees of Longitude, p. 11;—rectification of his leading mistakes in Irish geography, p. 9;—mistakes of Mercator and Bertius in some modern names of his ancient places, p. 13;—Ptolemy's outline of the coasts, promontories and rivers of Ireland, p. 16;—of its cities, p. 17;—of its inhabitants, p. 18;—of the adjacent isles, p. 19. Colonization of Ireland, p. 20;—Phoenician settlements on the southern and western coasts to be traced in the names of places, rivers, &c. p. 21;—Iberian or Spanish ditto, p. 28;—Scythian or Celtic, on the eastern and northern coasts, p. 29;—arrival of the Milesians from Spain, B.C. 1072, according to Coenhan's system of Chronology, p. 32;—of Fenius, or the Tyrian Hercules, their ancestor, about B.C. 1768, p. 33;—of the Firbolgi from Gaul, B.C. 1302, p. 35;—of the Damnonians, B.C. 1222, p. 36;—introduction of idol worship, B.C. 90 $\frac{1}{2}$ ;—shortness of the reigns of the Irish kings of the Firbolg, Damnonian and Milesian races, a proof of the unsettled and turbulent state of society in these early times, p. 37.

II. ANCIENT PILLARS IN PALESTINE, AND ROUND TOWERS IN IRELAND, p. 38;—ancient pillars and a pagan temple near Tripoli, described by Maundrell, p. 38;—catacombs under the pillars, designed chiefly for sepulchres of their sacred animals, the bull and crocodile, p. 42;—by whom, and at what time were they excavated? p. 47;—round towers in Ireland, their use, p. 51;—not erected by the Danes, p. 51;—numerous in Iceland, p. 52.

- III. S. PATRITII CONFESSIO, sive EPISTOLA AD HIBERNOS, p. 53;—remarks thereon, p. 80.
- IV. FIECH'S IRISH POEM, or PANEGYRIC ON ST. PATRICK,
p. 84;—the Irish text, p. 84;—remarks thereon, p. 91;—
Latin version of O'Conor, p. 93;—English translation thereof, p. 103.
- V. ANTIQUE MEDALS OF OUR BLESSED SAVIOUR, FOUND IN THE BRITISH ISLES, p. 113.
- I. A brass medal found in the Isle of Anglesey, about
A.D. 1702, p. 113;—its Hebrew inscription explained, p.
113.
- II. A silver medal, belonging to the Rev. T. Symonds of Ensham, Oxfordshire, p. 115;—its inscription explained,
p. 116.
- III. A brass medal, belonging to Mr. Corlet of Cork, p. 117;—its inscription explained by the help of the second medal, p. 119.

Varieties in the inscriptions of these medals noticed by the German antiquaries, Wagenseil, Waserus, Leusden, Hottinger, &c. p. 119;—generally supposed to be spurious and of modern fabrication, by Wagenseil, Joubert, Pinkerton, &c. p. 122;—the general likeness of the profile, seems to intimate some original and genuine prototype, p. 126;—
traditional descriptions of the visage and person of CHRIST, attributed to Lentulus, &c. might, perhaps, be more justly attributed to Pilate, p. 126.

---

DIRECTIONS FOR PLACING THE PLATES.

---

PTOLOMY'S MAP OF IRELAND *to face Page 3 of
the APPENDIX.*

ROUND TOWERS IN IRELAND *to face Page 38 of
the APPENDIX.*

ANTIQUE MEDALS to face Page 113 of the APPENDIX.

---

ON THE ORIGIN
OF THE
Primitive British and Irish Churches.

---

INTRODUCTION.

---

THE several primitive Churches planted by the Apostles, throughout the world, were originally independent of each other, and governed by their own respective Ecclesiastical Constitutions. This was the natural and necessary result of the equality that subsisted between the Apostles themselves; none of whom had any jurisdiction over the rest. Hence, the Apostles of the circumcision, or of the Jews, and the Apostles of the uncircumcision, or of the Gentiles, had all their separate provinces or districts, within the sphere of which they preached, without “building upon another's foundation,” or encroaching upon the Churches founded by others. Gal. ii. 7; Rom. xi. 13; xv. 20. And accordingly, we learn from Scripture and Ecclesiastical History, that Peter preached to the Jews of the Dispersion in Pontus, &c.; Matthew, in Palestine; Theudas, or Jude, in Persia; Thomas, in India; Paul, in Asia Minor, Greece, and Rome, &c. &c.

And the four first and purest of the General Councils of Nice, A. D. 325; of Constantiōple, A. D. 381; of Ephesus, A. D. 431; and of Chalcedon, A. D. 451, recognized, and confirmed this equality and independence of the Original Churches; only allowing to the Church of Rome, as the ancient Imperial City, a precedence of rank, as prima inter pares, “first among equals,” but not of jurisdiction.

But the Church of Rome was naturally high-minded, or aspiring, from the very beginning; Rom. xi. 20, and soon began to encroach on the rights and liberties of the Sister-Churches, and to domineer over their Prelates. Hence, in the first Controversy of importance, A. D. 255, about Re-baptizing Heretics after their Conversion to the Faith; for the propriety of which, the Asiatic and African Bishops contended, in opposition to Stephen, Bishop of Rome; after he had branded Cyprian, Bishop of Carthage, with the epithet of “False Christ,” False Prophet, and Deceitful Worker, &c. Cyprian replied in the following truly Christian strain, accompanying the protest of a Synod of 87 African Bishops against Stephen’s arbitrary proceedings*.

* Hæc ad conscientiam tuam, Frater charissime, et pro honore communi, et pro simplici delectione pertulimus; credentes etiam tibi, pro religionis tuæ et fidei veritate, placere quæ et religiosa pariter et vera sunt Cœterūm, scimus quosdam, quod semel imbiberint nolle deponere, nec propo-

“ These considerations, Dearest Brother, we offer to your conscience, both from public respect and private affection: believing (such we presume is the truth of your Religion and Faith) that what is equally religious and true, is also pleasing to you. But some there are, we know, who are not easily brought to relinquish what they have once imbibed, or change their purpose; but (saving the bond of peace and concord, between colleagues) still retain some peculiarities which they have once adopted. In which matter, neither do we offer violence to any one, nor impose law; since every Prelate should have the use of his own free will in the administration of the Church; being accountable for his conduct [only] to THE LORD.”

Such mild expostulations, however, had but little weight with the turbulent Stephen, and his Successors. They watched all opportunities of aggrandisement; and under a succession of artful and enterprizing Pontiffs, acting by a refined and systematic, and undeviating course of policy, the See of Rome, from small beginniugs, situm suum facilè mutare, sed (salvo inter collegas pacis et concordiae vinculo) quædam propria quæ apud se semel sint usurpata, retinere. Quà in re, nec nos vim cuiquam facimus, aut legem damus; quando habeat in Ecclesiæ administratione, voluntatis suæ liberum arbitrium unusquisque præpositus, rationem actûs sui DOMINO redditurus.

Vid. Cyprian Epist. 72. Edit. Rigalt, Paris.

realized Daniel's “little horn,” which sprouted in the last stage of the Roman empire, “with eyes like a man,” in the character of a Seer, Overseer or Bishop; and a mouth speaking great things, fulminations or blasphemies”—“whose look was more stout than his fellows,” the other bishops, Dan. vii. 8, 20, at length attained to a pitch of political supremacy, both ecclesiastical and temporal, conferred by the old Dragon; at which, “all the world wondered,” Rev. xiii. 2, 3.

And such was her overweening pride and arrogance, that at length, that last and most degenerate of the general Councils, the Council of Trent, after five-and-twenty Sessions, beginning A.D. 1549, and ending A.D. 1563, and acting, all along, under the Pope's controul and direction, finally established the modern Church of Rome, upon its present basis; and sanctioned a confession of Faith, by Pope Pius IV. drawn-up chiefly for the use of the Clergy, but extended to the Laity, also, requiring “the Roman Church to be acknowledged, as THE HOLY, CATHOLIC, and Apostolic CHURCH; the Mother and Mistress of all Churches:” and the Roman Pontiff to be obeyed as the successor of St. Peter, Prince of the Apostles; and the Vicar of JESUS CHRIST*.”

*Sanctam, Catholicam, et Apostolicam, Romanam Ecclesiam, omnium Ecclesiarum Matrem et Magistrum, cognosco; Romanique Pontifici, B. Petri, Apostolorum principis, successori, et Jesu Christi vicario, veram obedientiam spondeo et Juro.

These exorbitant and unchristian claims of the Church and See of Rome, have been, over and over again, refuted by the Learned of the Reformed Churches of Europe ; and by none more ably, or successfully, than by the Protestant Divines of Great-Britain and Ireland. Still they are repeatedly urged by our Popish opponents, Milner and Troy, Gandolphy and De la Hogue, &c. &c. and therefore require to be as repeatedly answered, in this interminable and never-to-be-abandoned Controversy, as it is justly styled, by one of our most zealous and powerful Champions, the Editor of the PROTESTANT ADVOCATE; which is nicknamed by Mr. Gandolphy and his associates, “The Devil’s Advocate * !” And, strange to tell! Popery, (though prostrate, and well nigh expiring, on the Continent of Europe,) still rears her head aloft in the British Isles, and once more threatens the overthrow of the PROTESTANT ESTABLISHMENT in Church and State, which she has often attempted before !! And the present hoary and wily Pontiff, Pius VII. though “fallen, fallen, fallen from his high estate,” and, like a meteor, shorn of his rays, —See the Oath at large, in Hales’s Letters to Doctor Troy, &c.; or Marsh’s Comparative View of the Churches of England and Rome, p. 122.

* See Letters to the Rev. P. Gandolphy, in the Protestant Advocate, May, 1815, p. 357.

does not relax one jot, or one tittle, of the loftiest pretensions of his predecessors, in the zenith of their power: In defiance of all the Sovereign Powers of Europe, he has had the hardihood, lately, to revive the Inquisition, and the Order of the Jesuits, though formally suppressed by a foregoing Pontiff, those tremendous firebrands of the See of Rome!!!

Wishing, therefore, to expose these unwarrantable claims more clearly and concisely, than I have hitherto seen it done, for the information of Protestants, (both in, and out of, Parliament,) unacquainted with this vital Controversy, and to guard them from delusion, and prevent them from blindly surrendering the main barriers of the Constitution, to the audacious reiteration of “Catholic Claims,” perpetually returning to the charge, though repulsed ever so often; and for the reformation of such irgenuine Roman-Catholics as dare to think for themselves, and examine the grounds of their profession of faith; I shall attempt to analyze these grounds in this Introduction; and then shall proceed, in the Essay itself, to prove the true origin of the primitive British and Irish Churches, and their total independence on the See of Rome; in order to rouse, if possible, their degenerate posterity of the Popish persuasion, to emancipate themselves from their spiritual bondage, and to re-assert their ancient liberty and independence.

I. “The Roman Church” is NOT “THE HOLY CATHOLIC CHURCH” of the Apostles Creed, nor “THE APOSTOLIC CHURCH” of the Nicene.

The word Catholic signifies Universal; but for any particular Church to call itself the whole, is a grammatical solecism, and a downright absurdity. The best refutation I have anywhere seen of it, is furnished by an authority that must be decisive with Roman-Catholics, even the infallible authority of Gregory the Great himself, both Pope and Saint; in his celebrated letter of censure to his brother John, the patriarch of Constantinople, for assuming the synonymous title of Ecumenicus, or “Universal.”

“Certainly Peter, the Apostle, is the first member of the Church; our Paul, Andrew, John, what else are they than heads of particular congregations? And yet they all are members of THE CHURCH under one head [CHRIST]. And, to comprise the whole in a short compass of expression,—the Saints before the Law, the Saints under the Law, and the Saints under Grace, all these, composing the body of THE LORD, are appointed members of the Church. But none of them ever wished to call himself Universal*.”

* Certè Petrus, Apostolus, primum membrum sanctæ et universalis Ecclesiæ est: Paulus, Andreas, Johannes, quid aliud quam singularium sunt plebium capita? Et tamen sub uno capite, omnes sunt membra Ecclesiæ. Atque, ut cuncta brevi cingulo locutionis astringam, Sancti ante legem, Sancti

In this admirable and enlarged definition of the Catholic Church, Gregory justly included the Patriarchal, Mosaical, and Christian Churches, comprehending the whole corporate body of the Saints or of the Faithful, from the beginning to the end o' the world. And, in this sense, the word Church is frequently used in the New Testament, Heb. xii. 23 ; Acts vii. 38 ; Col. i. 18 ; Matt. xvi. 18, &c. &c.

By a similar absurdity, the particular Apostolic Church of Rome claims to be the general Apostolic Church, founded by all the Apostles ; excluding all her sister Churches from any share in the title !

II. “ The Roman Church, is not the Mother and Mistress of all Churches.”

“ The Mother of us all, was the original Church of Jerusalem,” Gal. iv. 26, which was founded on the memorable day of Pentecost, or Whitsunday, A.D. 31, by the conversion of 3000 prejudiced Jews to the Christian Faith ; and afterwards rapidly increased : for “ THE LORD added daily to the Church, such as were desirous to be saved.” Acts ii. &c.

sub lege, Sancti sub gratiâ, omnes hi persipientes corpus Domini, in membris sunt Ecclesiæ constituti; et nemo se unquam universalem vocare voluit. See the whole letter, in the earlier editions of St. Gregory's works, Basil, 1564, or Antwerp, 1615, or in Hales' Observations on the Pope's Supremacy, 1787, p. 12, Appendix

The mother of the Gentile Churches especially, was the Church of Antioch, founded by Barnabas and Paul, about A. D. 43; when the converts, (before called “Nazarenes,” in contempt,) were first honoured with the title of “Christians.” Acts xi. 26; xxiv. 5. This Church was jointly established by Peter also, when he went thither, after his miraculous deliverance from prison in the second Jewish persecution raised by Herod Agrippa, A. D. 44; Acts xii. 1—17. But this Church of Antioch was founded and established long before either Peter or Paul visited Rome.

Nor is the Roman, the mistress of any of the Churches.

This is evident from what was said of the independence of all the primitive Churches on each other; as ratified by the first four General Councils, which “Gregory the Great professed to reverence as the four Gospels.”

III. The Roman Church was NOT founded by St. Peter.

Among the first fruits of the Mother-Church of Jerusalem, we read of ὅι επιδημεύτες Πωμαῖοι, “the Roman sojourners, or Jews, residing at Rome. Acts. ii. 10. These, we may presume, on their return home, formed the embryo of the Roman Church. Of this Church were Aquila and his wife Priscilla, Jews of Pontus, settled at Rome, and expelled from thence, with “all the Jews," for insurrection, by the emperor Claudius, Acts xviii. 1, 2, about the ninth year of his reign, A. D. 49, according to Orosius. Aquila and Priscilla associated themselves with Paul in planting the Gospel in Macedonia and Greece, 1 Cor. xvi. 19; Acts xviii. 5—11, and accompanied him to Syria, where they converted Apollos, Acts xviii. 18—26. They afterwards returned to Rome, before Paul wrote his Epistle to the Romans, A. D. 58; at which time, there appears to have been a numerous and respectable Church, or congregation of Christians there, of which Priscilla and Aquila seem to have been the head; as we may collect from the Apostle's salutations to the Roman Saints, at the end of the Epistle; among which this is the first and most strongly marked;

"Salute Priscilla* and Aquila, my fellow-labourers in Christ Jesus, (who laid-down their own necks for my life; to whom not only I, but all the Churches of the Gentiles, give thanks) and the Church in their House." Rom. xvi. 3—5.

This early Roman Church was principally composed of Gentiles; for, though "Mary, Herodian, and the household of Aristobulus, were * Priscilla is ranked before her husband, probably on account of her greater success in making converts, among the Roman women especially.

Jews;" the rest, "Epænetus, Andronicus, Amplias, Stachys, Apelles, the household of Narcissus, Tryphaena, and Tryphosa, Asynurus, Hermas, Patrobas, Hermes, Philologus, Nereus, Olympos" were evidently Greeks from their names; and "Urbanus, Ru'us, Junia, and Julia," Romans, ver. 5—15. Narcissus was probably the favourite freedman and secretary of the emperor Claudius; and if so, we may infer that Christianity gained a footing among the most respectable families in Rome, some years before St. Paul's visit.

Scripture is silent respecting St. Peter's visit to Rome. And hence principally, some eminent writers, Salmasius, Spanheim, &c. have maintained that St. Peter was never at Rome; and they have been followed by several respectable writers in the Romish controversy, endeavouring to prove from thence, the fabulous foundation of the Papedom, as built on St. Peter's primacy; and one of the best and latest, Professor Marsh, in his excellent Comparative View of the Churches of England and Rome, 1814, has adopted the same opinion, and adduced some arguments to support it, p. 207—212.

But the defect of Scripture evidence is abundantly supplied by Ecclesiastical history, vouching the visit of St. Peter as well as of St. Paul, to Rome, and their martyrdom there. This will appear from the following chain of historical testimonies *.

* The following are the original authorities :—

1. Clemens Romanus.

Αλλ' ία των αρχαιων ὑποδειγμάτων παυσικεδά, ελθώμεν επὶ τας εγγίσα γενομένας αθλητας λαβώμεν της γενεας ήμων τα γενναια ὑποδειγμάτα. Δια γηλον και φῶνον, εκκλησιας πιστον και δικαιοτατοι συλοι εδιωχθησαν, και ἐως θανατοι δεινα. Λαβώμεν προ οφθαλμων ήμων τας αγαθας αποβολης. Πετρῳ δια γηλον αδικον ωχ ἐνα ώδε δυο, αλλα πλειονας ὑπεμεινεν πονες, και ἐτω μαρτυρησας επορευθη εις τον οφειλομενον τοπον της δοξης. Δια γηλον ὁ Παυλῳ ὑπομονης Θραβειον απεχεν, ἐπτακις δεσμα φορεσας, ραβδευθεις, λιθαθεις, κηρυξ γενομενῳ εν τε τη ανατολῃ και εν τη δυσει, το γενναιον της πιστεως αυτω κλεψεν ελαζεν, δικαιοσυνην διδαξεις όλον του κοσμου, και επι το τερμα της δυσεως ελθων, και μαρτυρησας επι των ἡγεμενων, ἐτως απηλλαγη τω κοσμω, και εις τον ἀγιον τοπον επορευθη, ὑπυμονης γενομενος μεγιστος ἰπογραμμος. Epist. I. ad Corinthios, § 5. Cotelarius Patris Apostol. Vol. I. p. 148.

2. Dionysius, Bishop of Corinth.

Ως δε κατα τον αυτον χρονον αμφω εμαρτυρησαν κορινθιων επισκοπος Διογουσιος εγγραφως Ρωμαιοις ομιλων, ώδε πως παρισησιν. Ταυτα και ύμεις δια της τοσαντης ιερεσιας, την απο Πετρῳ και Παυλῳ φυτειαν γεννηθεισαν Ρωμαιων τε και Κορινθιων συνεκεκρασατε και γαρ αμφω και εις την ἡμετεραν Κορινθου φυτευσαντες ήμας, ὅμοιως εδιδαξαν· ὅμοιως δε και εις την Ιταλιαν ὄμοσε διδαξαντες, εμαρτυρησαν κατα τον αυτον καιρον. Euseb. Eccles. Hist. Lib. ii. Cap. 25, p. 68.

3. Irenaeus, Bishop of Lyons.

Τα Πετρῳ και τω Παυλων εν Ρωμη εναγγελιζομενων και θεμελιωντων την εκκλησιαν—Θεμελιωσαντες εν και οικοδομησαντες οι μακαρεις αποβολοι την εκκλησιαν, Λιγω την της επισκοπης λειτουργιαν ενεγκειρησαν. Pearson de annis primo-

1. Clemens Romanus, the intimate friend of both these Apostles, of whom Paul makes ho-rum Romæ Episcoporum, Cap. 2; or, Bishop Burgess's first Letter to his Clergy, p. 10.

4. Tertullian, of Carthage.

Ista quam felix Ecclesia! cui totam doctrinam Apostoli cum sanguine profuderunt; ubi Petrus passioni Dominicæ adæquatur; ubi Paulus Johannis exitu Coronatur De Praescrip. Hæres. c. 36, p. 245; or Lardner, Vol. ii. p. 268.

5. Caius, a Roman Presbyter.

Ἐγώ δε τα τροπαια των αποστολων εχω δειξαι εαυ γαρ θελησης απελθειν επι τον Βατικανον, η επι την ὁδον την Ωσιαν, εὑρησεις τα τροπαια των ταυτην ἴδρυσαμενων την εκκλησιαν, Euseb. Hist. Eccl. Lib. ii. cap. 25, p. 67.

6. Origen.

Πετρος δε εν Ποντω—κεκηρυχεναι τοις εν διασπορα ειδοις εοικεν. 'Ος και επι τελει εν Ρωμη γενομενος, ανεγκολοπισθη κατα κεφαλης, ὥτως αυτος αξιωσας παθειν. Euseb. H. E. lib. iii. cap. 1, or Lardner, vol. vi. p. 541.

7. Lactantius.

Cumque jam Nero imperaret, Petrus Romam advenit, et editis miraculis — convertit multos ad justitiam, Deoque templum fidele ac stabile collocavit. Quâ re ad Neronem delata — et primus omnium persecutus Dei servos, Petrum cruci adfixit, et Paulum interfecit; De morte Persect. Cap. ii. or Lardner, vi. p. 541.

8. Eusebius, Bishop of Cæsaria.

Πετρος ο κορυφαιος, την εν Αυτιοχεία πρωτην θεμελιωσας εκκλησιαν, εις Ρωμην απεισι κηρυτιων το ευαγγελιον. Euseb. Chron. Can. p. 204, or Lardner, vi. p. 544.

9. Ephrem, the Syrian.

Quia similiter Apostoli provincias sortiti sunt, Simon Romanum docuit, Johannes Ephesum, Matthæus Palestinam, et nourable mention (Phil. iv. 3.) furnishes the following panegyric on both.

Indorum regiones Thomas. Vol. i. p. 453, or Lardner, iv. p. 437.

10. *Jerom.

Simon Petrus — princeps Apostolorum, post episcopatum Antiochenis Ecclesiae, et prædicationem dispersionis eorum qui de circumcisione crediderant, in Ionto — secundo Claudii imperatoris Anno, ad expugnandum Simonem Magum Romanam pergit. Lardner, vi. p. 544.

Paulus — post passionem Dominicam vicesimo et quinto anno, id est, secundo Neronis, eo tempore quo Festus procurator Judææ successit Felici, Romanum vincere mittitur; et biennium in liberâ manu custodiâ, adversus Judæos de adventu Christi quotidiè disputavit — Hic ergo, decimo quarto Neronis anno, eodem die quo Petrus, Romæ pro Christo capite truncatus; sepultusque est in viâ Ostiensi, anno post passionem Domini trigesimo septimo. Lardner, v. p. 45, 46 and vi. p. 544.

11. *Chrysostom.

Ἐγ γαρ καὶ τότε πλεονεκτήμα τῆς ἡμετέρας πόλεως το των αποσολῶν κορυφῶν λαβεῖν εν αρχῇ δίδασκι λογο. — Αλλα—εκ εἰς τέλος κατεχομεν, αλλα παρεχωρησαμεν τη θαυματηρίᾳ Ρωμη. Vol. iii. p. 70, or Lardner, vi. p. 544.

12. Theodoret. Lardner, v. p. 201.

13. Isidore. Lardner, v. p. 309.

14. *Nicephorus.

Οἱ εν Ρωμῃ επισκοπευσαντες απὸ Χριστοῦ καὶ των αποσολῶν Πέτρος αποσολος, ετη δύο.

In Nicephori Chronographiâ legimus—“ Qui episcopatum gesserunt à Christo et Apostolis. Petrus Apostolus, annis duobus.” Quibus consequens est, Petrum, biennium circuiter ante mortem, iter in urbem direxisse. Secundus diutur-

*“ Omitting ancient examples of noble wrestlers for the faith, let us proceed to modern examples, in our own age; to those faithful and most upright pillars of the Church, who, through [unjust] zeal and envy, underwent persecution, even to a cruel death. Let us place before our eyes the good Apostles: Peter, through unjust zeal, endured not one nor two, but many labours, and then, having suffered martyrdom, went to his merited place of glory. Paul likewise, through [unjust] zeal, bore-away the prize of patience: after he had borne chains seven times, been scourged, and stoned, and had been a preacher [of the Gospel] both in the East and in the West, he obtained the glorious reward of his faith; for, after he had taught the whole world righteousness, and had gone to the termination of the West, and had suffered martyrdom by the Rulers, he was thus re-* niorem ei episcopalum vindicassit Nicephorus. Basnage, Anon. 42, num. 10. Lardner, vi. p. 543.

15. Simeon Metaphrastes.

Επιμενας τε, (Scil. Petrus,) εν Βρετανιᾳ ἡμερας τινας, και πολλοις τω λογω φωτισας της χαριτος, εκκλησιας τε συστησαμενος, επισκοπες τε, και πρεσβευτερες, και διακονες χειροτονησας, δωδεκατω ετει τω Καισαρος Νεφωνος, αυθις εις Ρωμην παραγινεται· ενδια και τον Λιγον τελειωθεντα έυρυκως τον Κλημεντα αυτυ αυτω κεχειροτονηκεν απαναινομενον και την προσασιαν παραχιτημενον——οι δι γρατιωται παραχημα παντας (Christianos) συλλαβομενοι επι την των καταδικων αγυστι τοπον, και τω μεν Κλημεντος, ως συγγενες πε Καισαρος, φειδογυται. Cotiler, Patres, Apost. vol. i. p.148, not. 39.

leased from the world, and went to the holy place, becoming the greatest pattern of patience."

Here Clemens speaks of the martyrdom of St. Peter and St. Paul as an acknowledged fact, but without stating where; this, however, appears from the expression "the Rulers," to have happened at Rome, the mistress of the Western world; as fully attested by the succeeding witnesses.

2. Dionysius, Bishop of Corinth, A.D. 170, in his epistle to the Romans, writes thus: "You have joiaed together the plantation of the Roman and Corinthian (Churches) made by Peter and Paul. For they both, coming to our city of Corinth, planted and taught us, (1 Cor. iii, 6--22) and in like manner, going together to Italy, they taught and suffered martyrdom there, about the same time."

Here Dionysius, perhaps from a motive of delicacy, in addressing the Romans, only mentions Italy, as the scene of martyrdom, it being unnecessary to point-out to them the precise place. But this is supplied by,

3. Irenæus, Bishop of Lyons, A.D. 178, who relates, that "the blessed apostles, Peter and Paul, having preached the Gospel at Rome, and founded the Church there, committed the administration of the episcopacy to Linus; who was succeeded by Anacletus, and he by Clemens who wrote an epistle to the Corinthians.

4. Tertullian of Carthage, the most learned of the Latin fathers, A.D. 200, thus celebrates the Church of Rome: “How happy is that Church, to which the Apostles delivered the whole Evangelical doctrine, along with their blood! where Peter suffered the same death with our Lord; and Paul was crowned with the death of John [the Baptist].”

5. Caius, a presbyter of the Church of Rome, A.D. 212, thus speaks of their tombs: “I am able to shew the trophies of the Apostles: for whether you go to the Vatican, or to the Octian-way, you will find the trophies of the establishers of this Church.” N.B. Peter was buried in the Vatican; Paul in the Octian-way.

6. Origen, the most learned of the Greek fathers, A.D. 280, says, that “Peter, after having preached the Gospel to the Jewish converts of the Dispersion in Pontus, came at last to Rome, and was crucified there with his head downwards, for so he deemed himself worthy to suffer, [according to his adorable Master’s prediction, John, xxi. 18, 19, to which he himself alluded, 2 Pet. i. 14].”

7. Lactantius, a Latin father of note, A.D. 306, says, that “Peter came to Rome, in the reign of Nero; wrought many miracles, and converted many to the Faith there; where Nero, first of all [the Roman Emperors] persecuted the Servants of God : He crucified Peter, and slew Paul with the sword."

8. Eusebius, who was Bishop of Cæsaria, and a learned Ecclesiastical Historian, Antiquary, and Chronologer, A.D. 315, says, that " Peter, Prince of the Apostles, having founded the first [Gentile] Church at Antioch, went from thence to Rome, preaching the Gospel."

9. Ephrem, the Syrian, A.D. 370, says, that " the Apostles allotted to themselves distinct provinces ; Simon [Peter] taught at Rome ; John at Ephesus ; Matthew in Palestine ; and Thomas in the regions of India."

10. Jerom, (that Oracle of the Roman Church, who spent three years at Rome, as Secretary to Pope Damasus, A.D. 382—385,) writes, that Simon Peter, Prince of the Apostles, after his Episcopate of the Church of Antioch, and his preaching to the Faithful of the Circumcision dispersed in Pontus, proceeded to Rome in the second year of Claudius, (A.D. 41,) to oppose Simon Magus.—That " Paul was sent bound to Rome, when Festus (who succeeded Felix) was procurator of Judea, in the second year of Nero, (A.D. 55,) that is, the five-and-twentieth year after our Lord's Passion, (A.D. 31 + 24 = A.D. 55.) And that in the fourteenth year of Nero, (A.D. 67,) being the seven-and-thirtieth year after the passion, (A.D. 31 + 36 = A.D. 67.)

Paul was beheaded at Rome for the name of Christ, on the same day with Peter, and was buried in the Ostian-way." And elsewhere, Jerom says, "CHRIST was with Thomas in India; with Peter at Rome; with Paul in Illyrium; with Titus in Crete; with Andrew in Achaia."

11. Chrysostom, the celebrated bishop of Constantinople, A.D. 398, says, "This is one prerogative of our city [Antioch], that we had the Prince of the Apostles for our teacher, at first; for it was fit that the place which was first honoured with the name of Christians, should have the Prince of the Apostles for its pastor. But, though we had him for our teacher awhile, we did not retain him to the end; but resigned him to imperial Rome. Or rather, we have him still: for, though we have not his body, we have his faith."

12. Theodoret, a Syrian bishop, and Ecclesiastical writer, A.D. 423, says, that "Nero put to death two of the principal law-givers among the Christians, but was not able to extinguish their laws."

13. Isidore, bishop of Seville, in Spain, A.D. 596, says, in his Chronicle, "that the Apostle Peter went to Rome, in the reign of Claudius, to oppose Simon Magus." But he afterwards refers it, more correctly, to the reign of Nero, "by whose command, Peter was crucified, and Paul was beheaded."

14. Nicephorus, patriarch of Constantinople, A. D. 806, relates in his Chronography, that “Peter was bishop of Rome for two years only.”

15. Simeon Metaphrastes, a Monkish writer of the tenth Century, says, that “Peter spent some days in Britain, and enlightened many by the word of Grace, and having established Churches [in the West] and elected bishops, presbyters, and deacons, came again to Rome in the twelfth year of Nero, (A.D. 65,) where, having found that Linus was dead, he elected Clemens bishop in his room, who accepted the station with great reluctance, and was afterwards spared in the ensuing persecution, because he was a kinsman of Nero.”

16. And this testimony of Metaphrastes, seems to be confirmed in part, by a remarkable inscription found in the village of Marcasia, in Lusitania, or Portugal, shewing that Nero's persecution of the Christians extended to that province.

NERONI CL. CAIS. AUG. PONT. MAX.
OB. PROVINC. LA FRONIB. ET HIS QUI
Nov. GENFRI HUM. SUPERSTITON.
IN CULCAB. PURGATAM.

“To Nero, Claudius Caesar Augustus, Chief Pontiff,
For purging the province of Robbers,

*And of [Christians] who inculcated
A new Superstition to the Human race."*

See Lardner, vol. vii. p. 248 ; or Hales's New Analysis of Chronology, vol. ii. p. 1257.

17. And to crown this mass of external evidence in support of the tradition, St. Peter's first epistle seems to furnish internal evidence that it was written from Rome, under the mystical title of Babylon, 1 Pet. v. 13, for the following reasons :—

1. The Apostles allotted to themselves distinct provinces, as we have seen before ; and the travels of Peter and Paul appear to have been limited to the Roman empire. There is no early evidence whatever in Ecclesiastical History, that Peter went beyond it, either to Babylon in Mesopotamia, or Babylon in Egypt. Cosmas of Alexandria, A.D. 535, states expressly, that the Apostle Thaddæus, or Jude, preached the Gospel in Persia. Lardner, v. p. 272. Hence, it was the prevailing opinion of the earlier Greek and Latin fathers, Papias, Eusebius, Jerom, Tertullian, Œcumanius, Cosmas, Beda, &c. that the word, Babylon, is used here by the Apostle, in a figurative sense, as denoting Rome, which so strongly resembled “Babylon the Great” in her idolatries, her abominations, and persecutions of the Saints. And this is corroborated by the usage of the Apocalypse, in which the mystical application is unquestionable. St. John, either borrowing it from St. Peter; or rather both, by inspiration, from Isaiah's prophecy of the Ancient Babylon, xxi. 9, &c.; Rev. xiv. 8; xvi. 19; xviii. 2, &c.

2. The bearer of St. Peter's epistle to Pontus, was “Silvanus, the faithful brother,” 1 Pet. v. 12; but he was also the faithful associate of St. Paul in his Travels, 2 Cor. i. 19; 1 Thess. i. 1; called Silas, in Hebrew, Acts xv. 22—34—40; xvi. 19; xvii. 4; but ψλυ, signifies Tertius in Latin; under which name, as the amanuensis of St. Paul, in his Epistle to the Romans, he joined in the salutation to the Saints there; “I Tertius, salute you, who wrote this Epistle in the Lord.” Rom. xvi. 22. He might, therefore, naturally be sent by these Apostles from Rome, shortly before their decease, to “Water,” or confirm the Churches of Asia Minor and Pontus, which he had jointly contributed with them to “plant,” or found. See some further Arguments in support of this interpretation of Babylon, in Hales's New Analysis, &c. vol. ii. p. 1145, &c.

But, though we are constrained by this accumulation of evidence, to admit, that St. Peter actually visited Rome, and suffered at Rome about the same time with St. Paul; yet we are fully warranted to deny the fabulous account of his Episcopate of five-and-twenty years duration, fabricated by Jerom and other partizans of the

See of Rome; they supposing that he went to Rome, in the second of Claudius, A.D. 41, and suffered martyrdom there, in the fourteenth of Nero, A.D. 67.

1. Peter could not have gone to Rome so early as A.D. 41: for he was then either at Jerusalem, or employed in visiting and confirming the Churches in the home-district of Judea and Samaria, Acts viii. 1; ix. 31—43; x. 1—48; xi. 18; until the Second Jewish Persecution, A.D. 44, when he went to Antioch.

2. From Antioch, he proceeded to visit the Jews of the dispersion in Pontus; and employed some years there, and in the adjacent districts, before he went to Greece, which he evidently visited; for he made Converts at Corinth, before St. Paul's first Epistle to the Corinthians was written, A.D. 57, Chap. i. 12; iii. 22.

3. Peter had not visited Rome, at the time that Paul wrote his Epistle to the Romans, A.D. 58. For, had Peter been already at Rome, there would not have been the same necessity for Paul's wish to visit them, and communicate to them “some spiritual Gift,” Rom. i. 11; nor would he have obtruded himself to build upon another’s foundation, Rom. xv. 20; neither would he have omitted the mention of Peter's name in the Salutations addressed, at the end of the Epistle, to the principal members of the Church of Rome, if Peter had been there at that time.

4. Peter had not visited Rome before Paul's arrival there, about A. D. 62. This is evident, from his inviting the Roman Jews to a conference the third day after his arrival, who appear to have had no official information of the sect of the Christians, but that it was “every where spoken against;” Acts xxviii. 17, 20.

5. Paul's ill success, however, with the Roman Jews, which induced him, as he frankly told them, to “turn to the Gentiles,” Acts xxviii. 28, rendered it necessary for Peter also to visit Rome. For Peter was in the highest estimation with the Jews in general, as the prime Apostle of the circumcision; whereas Paul was peculiarly offensive to them; for, after his conversion—they considered him as an Apostate; and therefore persecuted him every where, throughout the whole course of his ministry. And there seems to be a marked reference to Paul's co-operation, in Peter's salutation to τοις εκλεκτοις, “the elected” of the dispersion, from ἡ εν Βαβυλωνι συγεκλεκτη, “the co-elected Church in Babylon,” or the Gentile Church at Rome; 1 Pet. i. 1; v. 13. We may date Peter's first visit to Rome, A. D. 63, in the second year of Paul's residence in that city, as will be shown afterwards, which he was prevented from executing himself, after he wrote that epistle, by his subsequent confinements at Cæsaria and Rome of four or five years. The testimonies of Clemens Romanus, and also of Irenæus, that the Gospel was planted by the Apostles and their disciples, to the ends of the Earth, εν ταῖς Ἰεραῖς, “in the Iberias,” or Spain and Portugal; and εν τοῖς Κελτοῖς, “among the Celts” of Gaul, Germany, and Britain, both concurring with Metaphrastes and the Marcesian inscription, noticed before, warrant the supposition that Peter visited the western part of the Continent of Europe, at least, (though not the British Isles) because it fell within the period of his travels during Nero’s reign.

6. It is highly probable, however, that Peter made no long stay at Rome, but that he proceeded westwards to fulfil his beloved brother Paul's intentions of visiting Spain, Rom. xv. 24;

And Peter’s short stay at Rome seems to be strongly confirmed by the silence of Paul respecting him, in his later Epistles from Rome, to the Colossians, Ephesians, Philippians, Hebrews, and Philemon, written before he left it; and even in the Second Epistle to Timothy, written after his return to Rome from his Syrian expedition, and shortly before his decease, he says expressly, “only Luke is with me.” Chap. iv. 9—11. Peter’s return to Rome, therefore, from his western expedition, must have been after this epistle was written.

7. But it could not have been so late as A.D. 67, assigned by Jerom. For Lactantius, Jerom himself, Theodoret, and Isidore, all agree, as we have seen, that he suffered under Nero; and Tacitus has fixed the date of Nero's persecution in the year A. D. 65. Annal. xv. 33, 34, which is the precise year in which Metaphrastes dates his martyrdom. Nicephorus also, as we have seen, reckoned that Peter was only two years bishop of Rome; and therefore he first came thither in A. D. 63, when he and Paul, jointly, might have appointed Linus the first bishop, according to Irenæus; and at the second visit, Clemens Romanus, according to Metaphrastes. And it is highly probable that the martyrdom of Peter, was occasioned by the success of his labours in planting the Gospel in the western provinces of the empire; of which success information might have been brought to Nero against him; as of Paul, for his similar success at Rome.

From this historical detail, it appears, 1. that Peter was no more than a passenger at Rome, and exercised only a transient and divided jurisdiction there; 2. that the Roman Church was not founded by either of the Apostles; and, 3. that it was jointly and principally established by Paul, who visited Rome before Peter, and resided longer there. And, consequently, that Peter's supposed Episcopate of five-and-twenty years is fabulous.

IV. Admitting that St. Peter was “Prince of the Apostles,” he had no supremacy, or jurisdiction, over the rest.

He is indeed ranked “first” of the glorious company of the Apostles, in several passages of the New Testament, viz. Matt. x. 2; Luke vi. 4; viii. 5; ix. 28; Matt. xvii. 1; xxvi. 37; Mark v. 37; ix. 2; xiv. 33. An honourable precedence due to his distinguished zeal and attachment to his Master; and, especially, to that noble and explicit profession of faith, which he made, first of all the Apostles; and for which he received an appropriate blessing and reward from CHRIST. The whole may thus be more clearly rendered, and more critically explained. “ JESUS —— asked his disciples, Whom do men say that I am,—THE SON OF MAN? And they said, Some say that thou art John the Baptist, some Elias, and others Jeremias, or one of the prophets. He saith unto them, But what say ye that I am? Simon Peter answered and said, THOU ART THE CHRIST, THE SON OF THE LIVING GOD. And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou Simon, son of Jona; for flesh and blood, (or man) hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father, who is in heaven. 1. And I say unto thee, that thou art Peter (a stone); and upon THIS ROCK will I build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it; and, 2. I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven; and, 3. whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven. Matt. xvi. 13—19.

The title of THE SON OF MAN was assumed here by our blessed Lord, not merely out of humility, expressive of his human nature, as some suppose, without sufficient grounds; but chiefly, as characteristic of his Divine Mission, like Daniel's Son of Man, (or divine personage in human form) coming in the clouds of heaven to the ANCIENT OF DAYS, and solemnly invested by Him with universal and everlasting dominion. Dan. vii. 13, 14; and, in this sense, it is chiefly used by our Lord and his Apostles. Matt. xiii. 41; xvi. 27, 28; xxiv. 27, 30, 37, 39, 44; xxv. 31; xxvi. 64; Mark viii. 38; Luke xii. 8; xvii. 22; xxi. 36; Acts i. 11; vii. 56; Rev. i. 13, &c.

The import therefore of our Lord's first question is, Whom do men say that I am? Do they say that I am THE SON OF MAN? or, Does the world acknowledge me to be the MESSIAH, or CHRIST? They answered in the negative. Our Lord then required of them a declaration of their own faith, “But whom say ye that I am?” But they were silent, not decided in their own opinions, and hesitating what to say: Simon Peter, therefore, answered for himself, “Thou art, &c.” and this without any communication with the rest, but as the result of Divine illuminanation, to which alone he owed his information: for “no one intimately knoweth THE SON (επι-γνωσκει) save THE FATHER.” Matt. xii. 27. For this exclusive profession, therefore, Peter received an appropriate blessing, “Blessed art thou,” &c.

The first privilege conferred on him, has been variously interpreted by Romish and Protestant Divines. Thou art Peter ( $\pi\epsilon\rho\sigma$ ) and upon this rock ( $\varepsilon\pi\iota\tau\alpha\upsilon\tau\eta\tau\eta\pi\epsilon\rho\eta$ ) will I build my Church; and the gates of Hell, or the powers of darkness, shall not prevail against it, to destroy it.

The word πετρος signifies a “stone” or “rock,” as well as πετρη and λιθος; for which we have classical authority:

Εισω δ' ασπιδ' εαξε, βαλων μυλοειδεί πετρω.

"Inwards he broke his shield, striking it with a stone like a mill-stone." HOM. ILIAD, vii. 270.

The Romanists apply both these terms,  $\pi\epsilon\tau\beta\sigma$  and  $\pi\epsilon\tau\rho\eta$ , to the Apostle; and triumphantly represent Peter as the Rock upon whom Christ's Church is to be built.

But, surely, the terms are not perfectly synonymous :  $\pi\epsilon\tau\eta$  is the genus, and  $\pi\epsilon\tau\varrho\varsigma$  the species ; and had Peter been meant, the phrase should have been,  $\varepsilon\pi\iota\tau\varsigma\tau\omega\tau\omega\pi\epsilon\tau\varrho\omega$ , “upon this stone,” which would have removed all ambiguity, as has been judiciously remarked by Augustin formerly, and by Lightfoot in modern times. See Poole’s Synopsis.

Relinquishing, therefore, the Romish interpretation as untenable, the great majority of Protestant Divines, apply the phrase  $\varepsilon\pi\iota\tau\alpha\upsilon\tau\eta\tau\eta\pi\varepsilon\tau\eta$ , “upon this rock,” to Peter’s profession of Faith, “THOU ART THE CHRIST,” &c. To this, however, it may be objected, that it is rather incongruous, to apply  $\pi\varepsilon\tau\eta\Theta$ , to a person, and  $\pi\varepsilon\tau\eta$ , contrasted therewith, to a declaration; for there is not, I apprehend, any such application of  $\pi\varepsilon\tau\eta$ , to be found in the whole range of sacred and profane Classics: And hence, Hammond and Whitby, Bishops Pearce and Newcome, &c. the Unitarian Versions, Wakefield, &c. and lately Professor Marsh \*, more consistently, apply it

* Professor Marsh, to whose opinion great attention is due, states it in the following terms :—

The inference deduced by the Romish Writers from our Saviour’s prophecy, “that St. Peter was the rock on which the Church was to be built,” admits of this obvious answer :—In the Church of Jerusalem,(which was unquestionably founded by Peter,) and not in the Church of Rome, was fulfilled this prophecy, that the Church should be founded on St. Peter, as a rock. It is through the Church of Jerusalem,(which was the mother of all Churches,) and not through the Church of Rome, that Christian Churches in general, partake of the prophecy of our Saviour, &c. It is, therefore, to be lamented, that such unnecessary, and, at the same time, such unsuccessful, pains have been taken to shew, that our Saviour, under the word rock, did not understand St. Peter. The distinctions which have been made between Petros and Petra in the Greek, or between Petrus and Petra in the Latin Vulgate, when the

to a person also, though to the wrong person, Peter; confounding πετρος, and πετρη, with the Romanists.

language of our Saviour was neither Greek nor Latin, are surely unworthy of a Critic. The language spoken by our Saviour with his Apostles was Syriac, and the identical words which he used on the occasion in question, must be sought therefore in the Old Syriac Version. Now for the Greek words, συ ει Πετρος, και επι ταυτη τη Πετρα, which in fact are only a translation, we find in the old Syriac, the same word (Cepha) such in both places. The effect therefore in Syriac, was exactly the same, as if we said in English, to a person whose name was Rock, ‘Thou art Rock in name, and shall be Rock in deed: for on thee, &c.’ As our Saviour necessarily alluded to St. Peter, when he used Cepha the first time, he could not possibly allude to any one else, when the very same word was immediately repeated.”—Comparative View, &c. p. 213, 214.

This argument, however ingenuous, seems rather too peremptory; and to assume the very point in question, namely, that our Saviour addressed his disciples in Syriac, not in Greek. And to Professor Marsh, I may venture to submit the opinion of an eminent Orientalist, Lightfoot, on the passage.

Συ ει Πετρος, &c.

1. There is nothing either in the dialect of the nation, or in reason, that forbids us to think that our Saviour used this very same Greek word; since such Grecising was not unusual in that nation [Galilee of the Gentiles,] ever since the introduction of the Macedo-Grecian dynasty in Asia, by Alexander’s conquests, B.C. 331. But be it granted, (which is asserted here without controversy [or argument]) that He used the Syriac word; yet I deny that he used that very

There remains, therefore, only the third, for the true interpretation, that THE ROCK denoted the personage to whom Peter referred, “THE CHRIST, THE SON OF THE LIVING GOD;” and that our Lord marked the application to himself, “upon THIS ROCK,” by some significant sign, as before, when he said, “destroy THIS TEMPLE,” &c. meaning “the temple of his body;” John ii. 19—21.

The application of the word rock, to GOD and CHRIST, is frequent and familiar, both in the Old and New Testament; as emblematical of their stability and immutability, and of the security of those who trust in their protection. The original בָּיִת, (Tsur,) “Rock,” is even rendered Θεος, “God,” by the Septuagint Version, in three places. Deut. xxxii. 4, 18, 31. And Isaiah word Cepha, which he did probably after: but he pronounced it Cephas, after the Greek manner; or he spoke it Cephai, in the Adjective sense, according to the Syriac formation. For how, I pray, could he be understood by the disciples, or by Peter himself, if in both places he had retained the same word, ‘Thou art a Rock, and upon this Rock will I build my Church?’ It is readily answered by the Papists, that Peter was the Rock. But let them tell me, why Matthew used not the same word in Greek, if our Saviour used the same word in Syriac? If he had intimated that the Church should be built upon Peter, it had been plainer and more agreeable to the vulgar idiom, to have said, “Thou art Peter, and upon thee will I build my Church.”

(more closely translated) has finely expressed the ground of trust in him, xxvi. 4—11.

2. “The words concerning the rock upon which the Church was to be built, are evidently taken out of Isaiah xxviii. 16. Which, the New Testament being our interpreter, in very many places, do most plainly denote CHRIST. When, therefore, Peter, the first of all the disciples, from the very first beginning of the preaching of the Gospel, had pronounced most clearly of the person of Christ, and had declared the mystery of the incarnation, and confessed the Deity of Christ, the minds of the Disciples are, with good reason, called back to those words of Isaiah, that they might learn to acknowledge who that ‘stone’ was, that was ‘set in Sion, for a foundation never to be shaken;’ and whence it came to pass, that that foundation remained so unshaken: namely, from this cause, “that he was not a creature, but God himself, THE SON OF GOD.”

3. “Thence, therefore, Peter took his Surname; not that he should be argued to be that Rock, but because he was so much to be employed in building a Church upon a Rock; whether it were that Church that was to be gathered out of the Jews, of which he was the Chief Minister, (Acts ii. &c.) or that of the Gentiles, (concerning which the discourse here is principally held), unto which he made the first entrance of the Gospel, (Acts x).”

To this argument of Lightfoot, worthy of so great a Critic, I will venture to add, that our Lord, on several occasions, seems to have conversed with his Disciples in Greek; which was the universal language of that age and country, and therefore adopted by all the writers of the New Testament. One instance is decisive, “I am, Alpha and Omega, &c.” the first and last letters of the Greek Alphabet; not Aleph and Tau, the first and last letters of the Hebrew and Syriac Alphabets, Rev. i. 8, &c. And I am persuaded, that in Galilee he often used it, especially in such sub-

" Trust ye in THE LORD * for ever ;
For in ONE AND THE SAME LORD † is the rock of ages."

And in like manner, our Lord, admonishes his disciples :—

" Let not your heart be troubled :
Trust in God, and trust in me." John xiv. 1.

lime expressions as Θελω καθαρισθητι, Matt. viii. 3. φιμωθητι, και εξελθε εξ αυτε, Mark i. 25; Luke iv. 35. Σιωπα, πεφιμωσο, Mark iv. 19. In the two last instances, the difference of the tenses is remarkable: φιμωθητι, the first aorist, signifying literally, " be muzzled;" but πεφιμωσο, the perfect passive,
" be instantly muzzled," on account of the greater urgency of the occasion, to quell the wind and the waves that threatened to sink the ship, in which our Lord and his Disciples then were. And, since the Evangelist records our Lord's Syriac expressions, Talitha cumi, " Damsel arise," Mark v.
41. May we not naturally infer, that in the two foregoing cases, cited by Mark himself, our Lord did not speak in Syriac; otherwise the Evangelist would probably have recorded the identical expressions, in such signal cases.

We may further observe, that the Philoxenian Syriac Version differs from the Peshito, or common Version, in this place; retaining the Greek name, Petros, and, instead of Cepha,
" rock," substituting a synonymous term for " stone," to avoid the ambiguity. See White's Edition. The Latin Vulgate too, which is of equal authority with the Peshito, marks the distinction, like the Greek and Philoxenian, in rendering Petrus and Petra. This triple evidence seems to be decisive, against the Peshito.

* ЯНОМ.

† ЯН ЯНОН. See Hales's New Analysis, Vol. ii.
p. 245.

St. Paul also, speaking of “the Spiritual Rock, which attended the Israelites in the wilderness,” and supplied their wants, expressly says, “and THE ROCK was CHRIST.” 1 Cor. x. 4.

Our Lord’s declaration to Peter seems to have been founded on ancient prophecy, “Behold I lay in Sion for a foundation, a stone, an approved stone; a corner-stone, precious, immoveably fixed: and he who believeth on HIM shall not be confounded.” Isa. xxviii. 16. And St. Paul thus explains it: “Other foundation can no one lay, beside that which is laid, which is JESUS CHRIST.” 1 Cor. iii. 11.

But the prophets foretold his rejection by the Jews: “And he [IMMANUEL] shall be to the Gentiles for sanctification; but for a stone of stumbling, and for a rock of offence to two of the Houses of Israel, [Judah and Benjamin,] Isa. viii. 14;—“The Stone which the builders refused, is to become the Corner head-stone,” destined to bind and unite together both Jews and Gentiles, in the profession of the same faith, Psal. cxviii. 22. And these signal prophecies were expressly applied to CHRIST, by our Lord himself, Matt. xxi. 42; Mark xii. 10; Luke xx. 17; and by his Apostles, 1 Pet. ii. 7; Rom. ix. 33; Acts iv. 11; Ephes. v. 23.

And as CHRIST is the sole foundation, or Rock, destined to support “the kingdom of the Stone, which shall never be destroyed,” Dan. ii. 41, so his Apostles are also foundation-stones, laid upon Him; Ephes. ii. 20; Rev. xxi. 14; whence St. Peter himself, explaining this imagery, calls CHRIST  $\lambda\imath\vartheta\omega\varsigma\tau\alpha$ , “THE LIVING STONE,” and his faithful followers  $\lambda\imath\vartheta\omega\varsigma\tau\epsilon\varsigma$ , “living stones,” 1 Pet. ii. 4, 5, thus modestly communicating to them also, the title of  $\pi\epsilon\tau\varrho\sigma$ , stone, conferred upon him by  $\eta\pi\epsilon\tau\varrho\eta$ , “THE ROCK, CHRIST.”

This interpretation, adopted by our ablest Divines, is now, I trust, placed beyond the reach of further controversy.

The second privilege conferred on St. Peter was the gift of the keys of Heaven. And accordingly, he first unlocked the door of Faith to the Jews, on the memorable day of Pentecost; and to the Gentiles, in the case of Cornelius, the Roman Centurion; and also, to the Jews of the dispersion, and to the foreign Gentiles, at Antioch, Corinth, and Spain, &c. These keys were likewise communicated to the other Apostles, and especially to Paul, “the Apostle of the Gentiles.”

The third privilege was the power of binding and loosing. This is variously interpreted:—The Romanists understand it of the power of granting indulgences, and remitting penances, or temporal punishment due to sins; powers, which having been scandalously abused in their Church, brought about, under God, the blessed Reformation. The Protestants, with more propriety, understand it of Ecclesiastical Rules or Regulations, to be enacted or rescinded for the good of the Church ; as in the decree of the first Apostolic Council held at Jerusalem, Acts xv. ; or else, of the powers of inflicting miraculous punishments, and even death ; and of miraculously healing diseases, and restoring to life, with which Peter was eminently gifted ; as in the case of Ananias and Sapphira, Tabitha, &c. See Lightfoot, &c. This power was extended to the other Apostles likewise, John xx. 23, and in a most eminent degree to Paul ; who was not a whit inferior to the Chief Apostles in Spiritual endowments : striking Elymas the Sorcerer blind, and restoring Eutychus to life, &c.

But Peter, though Prince of the Apostles, was primus inter pares, “ first among his equals,” he never possessed any spiritual authority, jurisdiction, or supremacy, over the rest. On the contrary, the President of the first Apostolic Council at Jerusalem, was James, the Lord’s Brother, or Cousin-German, who was the first Bishop of Jerusalem, and pronounced the decree, Acts xv. 13—21. And at Antioch, when Peter dissembled and temporized with the Judaizers, who wished to impose Circumcision on the Gentile Church there, Paul boldly withstood him to his face, because he was to be blamed.” Gal. ii. 11—14.

There was none of the apostles, indeed, that betrayed greater frailty, or weakness, than St. Peter.

For his worldly-mindedness he drew-down that severe rebuke, “Get thee behind me, Satan,” &c. shortly after he had received the signal blessing. Matt. xvi. 21—23. He thrice formally denied his Lord, as foretold—but was forgiven upon his immediate, and bitter repentance; and he was formally re-instated in his Apostolic office, by his compassionate Lord, after his self-sufficiency and presumption had been sufficiently humbled. Feed my lambs—feed my sheep—feed my sheep. John xxi. 15—17. This simple act of re-instatement, in the privileges which he had forfeited, is magnified by the Romanists beyond all bounds; as if, indeed, “Our Lord, in the most solemn manner, thrice committed to Peter the care of his whole flock, of all his sheep without exception, that is, of his whole Church!”—superseding even John, the disciple whom JESUS loved, who was present at the time; with others of the Apostles. Such are the interpretations and arguments with which Romanists deceive themselves, and labour to support the Antichristian authority of their head, deceiving others.

V. The Roman pontiff is NOT the Vicar of Christ.

This will most satisfactorily appear from a short historical survey of the rise and progress of the Pontifical title and power.

At first the Popes were no more than simply Bishops of Rome, (as already shewn) not possessing ecclesiastical jurisdiction beyond their own See, and subservient to the Emperors.

The removal of the seat of Empire by Constantine the Great, from Rome to Byzantium, or Constantinople, A.D. 330, in resentment for the ill treatment of the Romans, on his embracing Christianity, first prepared the way for the Papal authority, by removing the controul of the Emperor's presence, and accustoming the Romans to look up to the Bishop as their ostensible head.

In the next place, the conversion to Christianity of the rude and barbarous nations of the North, who invaded the Roman empire, contributed to extend the papal influence among them also. For, as Michiavel observes, “The successors of St. Peter were reverenced, at first, by all men; and the sanctity of their lives, and [supposed] miracles, and their examples, did so extend the Christian Religion, that the princes were under a necessity of obeying, [or conforming thereto] to remove out of the way the great confusions that were then in the world.” The first of these kingdoms, that of the Huns, arose about A.D. 356; and they put an end, at length, to the western empire, A.D. 476.

About A.D. 378, Pope Damasus obtained an important grant from the Emperors Gratian and Valentinian, vesting him, by their edict, with patriarchal jurisdiction over the whole western Church; and, in cases of doubt or difficulty, sanctioning appeals to Rome. Several of the Pope's Decretal Epistles to the western churches of Illyricum, Gaul, Spain, Britain, and Africa, about this period, are cited by Sir Isaac Newton in his Observations on the Prophecies of Daniel, ch. viii. And this edict was afterwards renewed and confirmed to Pope Leo, by the Western Emperor Valentinian III. A. D. 445, enjoining absolute obedience to the will of the Bishop of Rome; and declaring that for the Bishops to attempt any thing without the Papal authority was contrary to ancient custom; and requiring the several Governors of the provinces to carry the Bishops summoned to appear before his judicature, if refractory, to Rome. Hence the Bishops of the province of Arles, petitioning Leo, A. D. 450, to restore the privileges of their Metropolitan, admitted his supremacy, in these terms, Per beatum Petrum, Apostolorum principem, sacro-sancta Ecclesia Romana tenebat suprà omnes totius Mundi ecclesias principatum, “Through St. Peter, the prince of the Apostles, the most holy Roman Church obtained the supremacy over all the Churches of the whole world.” And Leo himself claimed it in similar terms. Quia per omnes Ecclesias cura nostra distenditur; exigente hoc à nobis Domino, qui Apostolicæ dignitatis beatissimo Apostolo Petro primatum, fidei suæ remunerazione, commisit, universalem, ecclesiam fundamenti ipsius soliditate constituens. “Because our care is extended over all the Churches; the Lord requiring this of us, who committed the primacy of the Apostolical dignity to the most blessed Peter, in reward of his Faith, constituting the Universal Church on the solidity of his foundation.” Newton, p. 112.

This important privilege of Appeals to Rome laid the first solid foundation of the papal power, by reducing all the other sees under the controul of Rome.

About the same period, a practice was introduced, of which the ever vigilant policy of the Roman Pontiffs availed itself to extend their jurisdiction. The Transalpine Bishops, either out of superstition, or to shew their approbation and adoption of the doctrine of St. Peter and St. Paul, were accustomed to undertake pilgrimages to Rome, in order to visit their tombs. This voluntary act of devotion, was afterwards converted by the Roman Pontiffs into an act of duty, or necessity; and the Bishops who neglected to do so, were excommunicated. “ And from this custom,” says the judicious Puffendorff, “ without doubt, the Popes have pretended to oblige all bishops to take their confirmation at Rome.” See his History of the Popedom, London, 1691, p. 56.

Next we may notice the refined policy of appointing Legates, or Vicars-general, in the several courts of Europe, with commission to watch over the interests of the See of Rome, and to prevent any measures detrimental thereto. Thus the French historians tell us, that, when the Emperor Honorius, early in the fifth century, had erected the city of Arles into a Metropolis over seven of the sixteen provinces into which France was at that time divided ; the Pope, apprehensive that the Archbishop of Arles might erect himself into a Patriarch of the whole kingdom, appointed him his Legate.

The grand Innovator in the Ecclesiastical Regimen of the Church, who changed “times and laws,” at his own will, (as foretold by the prophet Daniel of the little horn, Dan. vii. 8, 25,) was the celebrated Gregory the Great, both Pope and Saint, A. D. 590. He composed a ritual, for the use of the Latin Church, called the Gregorian Liturgy, which soon obtained a general circulation. In this Liturgy the Doctrine of Purgatory was set-down as an article of Faith ; the Invocations of Saints and Angels, and the Veneration of relics ; Masses for the living and the dead ; Toleration of Images in Churches ; Lustrations with holy water ; Abstinence from meat, milk, and eggs on fast-days ; were all taught and prescribed : and, after long-continued opposition, he at length prevailed to establish the celibacy of the Clergy, that master-stroke of papal policy, by which he detached them from their chief national and domestic connexions, and made them the Life-guards of the Pope. His pontificate, indeed, forms a new era in the Church, from which we may date the actual foundation of the modern Church of Rome, thus widely departing from the usages of the primitive Church; and forming, we may presume, the grand apostacy of the latter times, expressly, or rather oracularly, ( $\rho\eta\tau\omega$ ) foretold by St. Paul, 1 Tim. iv. 1—3; Coloss. ii. 16—19, alluding to the foregoing prophecy of Daniel. For a fuller illustration of this momentous subject, see Hales's New Analysis of Chronology, vol. ii. p. 546, &c.

By a base and dishonest policy, Gregory the Great and his successors, blended the rites of Paganism with the simple ceremonies of Christianity, to gain proselytes. The Pagan Saints-days were converted into Christian Saints-days—and Diana of Ephesus was succeeded by the Virgin Mary, &c. In his letter to Mellitus, he strongly marks this Pagan spirit of accommodation of CHRIST with Belial. “For that they (the Pagans) are wont to kill oxen, in sacrifice to the devils, they shall use the same slaughter now, but changed to a better purpose.” Bede's Eccles. Hist. B. I. ch. 80; Stapleton's translation.

From the Latin term Popa, denoting the assistant priest who brought the Heathen sacrifice to the altar, and who was held in a contemptible light by the Romans *, the Pagans probably gave the title of Pope to the Roman Pontiffs ; but they not relishing it, and yet not able to get rid of it entirely, chose to be called Papa, “Father,” by their followers : in opposition to our Lord’s precept to his Apostles, “ Call no one your father, upon earth ; for one is your FATHER, who is in heaven.” Matt. xxix. 9.

It is uncertain which of the Popes first assumed the Pagan title of Pontifex Maximus. The Rev. Peter Roberts, of Llanarmon, (to whom we owe the foregoing conjecture) in his Review of the Policy of the Modern Church of Rome in answer to Sir John Throckmorton’s Argument in favour of the Roman-Catholic Question, 1809, p. 79, strongly suspects that it was Boniface III. who, in A.D. 606, first assumed the Unchristian title of Universal Bishop, which Gregory the Great had rejected with abhorrence, calling himself, in opposition thereto, by the lowly title of Servus Servorum Dei. “Servant of the Servants of God.” But, notwithstanding all his affected humility, Gregory did not scruple to invade the jurisdiction of his brother John, the Patriarch of Constantinople, by acquitting a priest of Chalcedon, which lay within John’s province, who had been condemned for heresy.

* Cicero, in his oration for Milo, § 24, states the contemptible evidence of “one Licinius, a pope,” against his client, thus:—Quinetiam audiendus sit Popa Licinius, nescio quis, de circo maximo, &c. Asconius explains it, “Licinius, quendam de plebe sacrificulum. Nam popa est Sacrorum minister, qui victimas immolat.—De circo maximo, ubi scorta, meretrices, et perditus quisque qui Ædilem metuebat, habitavit. Hunc ergo Popam, ex vilissimorum hominum grege esse, hoc verbo significatur. See Ciceronis Selectæ Orationes, 3vo. Amsteld. Welstenii. 1735, p. 247.

This ominous title of Pontifex Maximus, as Mr. Roberts judiciously observes, p. 69—71, leads us to the true Pagan character of the Roman Pontiff, in that assumption of spiritual and temporal dominion, so remarkably opposite to the genuine spirit of Christianity.

“My kingdom,” said our Saviour, “is not of this world.” And when there arose a strife among the Apostles, which should be accounted the greatest, he said, the kings of the Gentiles exercise lordship over them, and they that exercise authority over them are called benefactors*. But it shall not be so with you. John xviii. 36; Luke xxii. 25.

In Pagan Rome, from the beginning, the Pontifex Maximus was also the first person in the state. The office was attached, for more than a thousand years, to the regal and imperial dignity, from Numa, B.C. 709, to Gratian, A.D. 375, * Εὐεργέτης, “benefactor,” was a favourite title of the Macedo-Grecian kings of Syria and Egypt.

but then, this Christian emperor, renounced the title and office, as interfering with those of “the HIGH PRIEST of our profession, Jesus Christ.” Heb. iii. 1. And, in the times of the Republick, it was the foremost object of the ambition of the leaders, Julius Cæsar, Augustus, &c. And no wonder: for the power of the Pontiffs was supreme in all matters appertaining to Religion. They were not accountable to the Senate or people for their decisions. Their persons were held sacred. The Pontifex Maximus had the care of the rites of Vesta, and of the Vestal virgins, [who were succeeded by the Nuns] and thence was stiled Episcopus, or Bishop. He governed the inferior priests, and public worship, feasts, sacrifices, &c. and punished offenders with fines, and sometimes with death. He had the power of dispensing with religious ceremonies, and judging of oracular books and answers, &c. with infallible authority. Thus Augustus, when he attained to this station, destroyed upwards of two thousand prophetic books, which he considered as of doubtful authority, and retained only a selection from the Sybilline Oracles.—Hence the chief Pontiff was stiled, by Festus, Judex atque arbiter Rerum humanarum divinarumque, “ Judge, or arbiter, of Human and Divine affairs.” Kennet’s Antiquities, p. 72. Robert’s, &c. p. 70.

The following extracts from Cicero, for which we are indebted to Mr. Roberts, p. 71—75,) may serve to confirm the foregoing statement *.

* 1. Cum multa, Divinitus, Pontifices, à majoribus nostri, inventa atque instituta sunt; tum nihil præclarior, quām quod vos eosdem et religionibus Deorum immortalium, et summæ Reipublicæ, præesse voluerunt. Cicero pro domo suâ ad Pontifices.

2. Quid est enim tam arrogans, quam de Religione, de rebus Divinis, Cæremoniis, Sacris, Pontificum Collegium docere conari? aut tam stultum quam si quis quid in vestris libris invenerit, narrari vobis? aut tam Curiosum, quam ea scire velle, quibus majores nostri vos solos et consuli et scire, voluerunt? Ibid.

3. Dixi à principio, nihil me, de Scientiâ vestrâ, nihil de sacris, nihil de abscondito jure pontificum, dicturum. Illa interiora. Ibid.

4. Quod tres pontifices statuissent, id semper populo Romano, semper Senatui, semper ipsis Diis immortalibus, satis sanctum, satis augustum, satis religiosum, esse visum est. Cicer. ad Haruspices.

5. Religionis explanatio vel ab uno Pontifice perito, rectè fieri potest. Ibid.

6. Maximum autem et præstantissimum in Republicâ jus est Augurum, cum sit auctoritati conjunctum.—Quid enim majus est, si de jure quærimus, quam posse a summis imperiis et summis potestatibus comitia tollere? Concilia, vel instituta dimittere, vel habita rescindere? Quid gravius, quam rem susceptam dirimi, si unus Augur aliter dixerit? Quid magnificentius, quam posse decernere, ut magistratu se abdicent Consules? Quid religiosius, quam cum populo, cum plebe, agendi jus aut dare, aut non dare? Quid? Legem, si non jure rogata est, tollit.—Nihil domi, nihil foris, per Magistratus gestum, sine eorum auctoritate posse cuiusquam probari? Cicero de legibus, lib. 2.

1. “ Of the many institutions, most reverend Pontiffs, which, by Divine inspiration, have been invented and established by our ancestors, none is more excellent, than their positive and invariable Resolution, that you, and none but you should preside both over the public worship of the immortal Gods, and the supreme power of the state.”

2. “ What therefore can be so arrogant, as to attempt to teach the College of Pontiffs any thing respecting Religion, divine things, ceremonies, sacrifices? or for any one to inform you, what he may have found in your books? or so impertinently inquisitive as to wish to know the things which our ancestors chose that you alone should know, and be consulted upon?”

3. “ I said, from the beginning, that I meant to say nothing about your science, nothing about sacred things, nothing about the hidden jurisprudence of the Pontiffs. These are most secret.”— In fact the whole oration shews that Cicero dared not.

4. “ The determination of three Pontiffs has always been held by the Roman people, by the senate, and by the immortal Gods themselves, to be sufficiently sacred, august, and satisfactory in matters of religion.”

5. “ The explanation of a religious doubt, may rightly be given even by a single Pontiff, well-informed.”

To this representation of the enormous privileges of the Pagan Pontiffs, we must add those of their associates, the Augurs, or “Diviners,” instituted by Romulus, who was an extraordinary proficient in the art, and Chief Augur himself; a title retained by all the kings and emperors also; as appears from coins of Julius Cæsar, Augustus, Vespasian, Verus, &c. marked with the Augural ensigns, the lituus, &c:

6. “The greatest and most excellent jurisdiction in the state,” continues Cicero, “is that of the Augurs, because it is connected with the supreme authority. For, if we enquire about authority, what is greater than to be able to deprive the chief magistrates and chief officers of the power of holding assemblies? of dismissing councils or rescinding decrees? What more authoritative, than to put a stop to any business entered-upon, if a single augur prohibit? What more magnificent, than to be able to decree, that the Consuls shall abdicate their magistracy? What more venerable, than to grant, or not to grant, the privilege of public trial, before the people, or before the plebeians? What? that it can rescind a law, if irregularly passed? that no act of any of the magistrates, at home or abroad, can be valid without their approbation?”

Such were the enormous powers attached to the Pagan Pontiffs and Augurs, and afterwards usurped by the Roman Pontiff when the Christian Emperors had relinquished those offices. Nor can we wonder at the facility with which the Laity submitted to such usurpation. The multitude of dissembling Pagan converts, which flocked into the Church, after Constantine the Great had made Christianity the Religion of the State, brought with them their old prejudices, their blind submission to pontifical authority, and slavish fear of questioning its dictates. And they were further flattered by the artful and worldly policy of the Roman Pontiffs, in assuming the heathen titles and adopting their dress, and magnificence, and even the lituus of the Augurs, under the new name of the Pastoral Staff, or Crozier; and in instituting the similar College of Cardinals, &c.

See all these innovations wonderfully predicted by Daniel, xi. 31—38; and explained in Hales's New Analysis of Chronology, vol. ii. p. 1327—1330.

The next step taken, by the See of Rome, to rivet their yoke upon the necks of their brethren, the other prelates, was an oath of obedience and fidelity to the Roman Pontiffs, introduced by Boniface the Monk, (usually called the Apostle of Germany) who was invested by Pope Gregory II. as his Legate, with plenary authority to assemble Councils, and make Bishops in the countries which he should convert. Under the protection of Charlemagne and of Pepin, Boni- face held several Councils and Synods in Germany and France, in which he presided as Legate of the Roman See. In the first Council he persuaded the Clergy to sign a confession of Faith, whereby they bound themselves to persevere in the Catholic Faith; professed themselves members of the Church of Rome; and vowed an eternal respect and obedience to St. Peter's successors."

The form of this first Episcopal Oath, about A.D. 731, was as follows* :

* Juramentum Episcopi.

Ego, N. Episcopus, ab hac horâ in antea fidelis ero Sancto Petro, Sanctæque Romanae Ecclesiæ, Dominique meo Papæ C, ejusque successoribus canonice intrantibus. Non ero neque in consilio neque facto, ut vitam perdat aut membrum, vel capiatur malâ captione. Consilium quod mihi aut per se, aut per literas, aut per negotium manifestabit, ad ejus damnum nemini pandam. Papatum Sanctæ Romanae Ecclesiæ, et regulas Sanctorum Patrum, adjutor ero ad defendendum et retinendum, (salvo ordine meo) contrâ omnes homines. Vocatus ad Synodus veniam, nisi præpeditus Canonicâ præpeditione. Legatum Apostolicæ Sedis quem certum esse cognovero, in eundo et redeundo honorifice tractabo, et in suis necessitatibus adjuvabo. Limina Apostolica singulis annis, aut per me, aut per certum nuntium, visitabo, nisi eorum absolvat licentia. Sic me Deus adjuvet, et haec Sancta Evangelia.

This form of an Oath was prescribed by Gregory III. A.D. 731, and is to be found in the Decretals of Gregory IX. Lib. ii. Tit. 24, c. 4, p. 113, published in the Corpus Juris Canonici, Antwerp, 1648. Since that time, the Episcopal Oath has been considerably enlarged. See a later form, in the Roman Pontifical, printed at Venice, 1572, in which the

" I, N, Bishop, from this hour forward will be faithful to St. Peter and the holy Roman Church, and to my Lord Pope C, and his successors canonically entering. I will neither be of counsel nor act, whereby he may lose life or member, or be taken by evil capture. The counsel which he shall make known to me, either by himself, or by letter, or by messenger, I will disclose unto no one to his detriment. The Papacy of Holy Roman Church, and the Rules of the Holy Fathers [in their General Councils] I will be an assistant to defend and retain (saving mine own order) against all men. When called to a Synod, I will come, unless I shall be prevented by a Canonical impediment. The Legate of the Apostolic See, whom I shall know for a certainty to be such, I will honourably entreat, both going persecuting clause seems to have been first introduced, as follows :—

Hæreticos, Schismaticos, et Rebelles eidem Domino vel successoribus prædictis, pro posse prosequar et impugnabo: " Hereticks, Schismaticks, and Rebels to the same Lord (the Pope) and his successors aforesaid, I will, to the utmost of my power, prosecute and impugn." —But the term prosequar, not being thought strong enough, was changed into persequar, " I will persecute," in the last form, which was first introduced in the Pontifical of Clement VIII. published at Rome in 1595. See the Oath at length, in Bishop Woodward's State of the Church of Ireland; or Extracts from it, in Hales' Letters on the Romish Hierarchy, addressed to Dr. Troy, p. 27.

and coming, and assist him in his necessities. The thresholds of the Apostles I will every year visit, either personally or by a trusty messenger, unless I shall be absolved by their licence. So help me God, and these holy Gospels!"

This same Boniface the Monk, first received a bishop's pall (pallium, cloak,) himself from Gregory II. in the year 723, and persuaded the bishops of Germany to accept the same as a token of honour from the Pope; who afterwards contrived to introduce this ceremony into France also; and afterwards imposed it as an indispensable requisite, and forbade them the exercise of any episcopal functions, until they had received the pall, as a token of investiture, from Rome.

In the year 1073, Gregory VII. (before called Hildebrand), that prodigy of wickedness and papal usurpation, according to Baronius, Annal. page 985, contrary to the custom of his predecessors, assumed the papacy without the consent of the Emperor Henry IV. And, not satisfied with this infringement of the Emperor's rights, claimed also the power of appointing Bishops; and, by dint of excommunication, and a formidable combination of the Ecclesiastical and Lay States of Germany, (which he excited and fomented,) at length he compelled Henry to relinquish the ancient right of appointing to Bishopricks, and leave them wholly in the Pope's disposal.

Afterwards the Emperor Henry V. endeavoured to recover what Gregory had wrested from his father, and, seizing upon the person of Pope Pascal II. obliged him to relinquish it. But the German Clergy, (over whom the Popes had, by this time, acquired an absolute ascendency,) so harrassed the Emperor, that they forced him, in the year 1122, to resign for ever that prerogative to the Pope.

In England, happily, the Kings were not so submissive; and the right of Papal Investitures, was all along resisted by the princes of the Norman line, except by those intruders, Henry I., Stephen, and John, to whom the influence of the Church was necessary to support them on the throne. And, after repeated struggles for power, between the Popes and the Parliaments, who were always most jealous of Papal usurpation, the blessed REFORMATION, in the reign of king Henry the 8th, set them free from Papal Tyranny. Of this, further notice will be taken in the following Essay. Another link in the Chain of Papal Tyranny, was the introduction of the Canon Law and Decretals, by Pope Innocent II. A.D. 1130, in opposition to the Justinian Code of Civil Law; which were calculated to serve the Pope's Interest, and depress the rights of the other Patriarchs, and of temporal Princes. The consequence of this was obvious. The other Bishops and Churches had often recourse to Rome, as novices have to their teachers, for advice in the explanation and use of the Canons. The Popes, therefore, under pretence that, Rome being the first and chief See in Christendom, it became the duty of her Bishop to see that the Canons and Ecclesiastical Laws were observed and executed, took upon themselves to appoint Judges of the differences that arose between the other Bishops,—encroached upon the jurisdiction of the Metropolitans,—deposed Bishops that were not regularly consecrated, or that were accused of any great crime; and compelled them to come to Rome in person, to plead their causes.

Not, but that there were “many of the Bishops” (as Puffendorf observes,) “well enough content to submit to this slavery, in hopes of sharing the prey with their Chief; and because they were thereby freed from the Jurisdiction of their Temporal princes, whose power they more dreaded than that of a distant Tribunal; the Judges whereof, being of the same trade as themselves, were not so terrible to them. For one crow will not pick-out it's fellow's eyes.”— Some of these indulgent, and very accommodating, Canons, the reader may see in the note *.

* The following decrees for exempting Ecclesiastics from Lay jurisdiction, are taken from the Corpus Juris Canonici, Decret. Greg. Tit. 1, p. 76.

The last, and not the least powerful, cause of the Bishops not resisting the growing power of

DE JUDICIIS.

Eugenius Papa.

Cap. 2.—Decernimus, ut Laici Ecclesiastica tractare negotia non præsumant.

Cap. 4.—Et si Clerici coram sæculari judice convicti fuerint, vel confessi, de crimine, non sunt propter hoc, à suo Episcopo aliquatenus condemnandi. Sicut enim sententia à non suo judice lata non tenet, et ita confessio coram eo.

De adulteriis verò et aliis criminibus quæ sunt minora, potest Episcopus cum Clericis, post peractam pænitentiam, dispensare. Sed non debet quemlibet depositum pro suis excessibus (cum suo sit functus officio, nec duplici debeat ipsum contritione conterere) judici tradere sæculari.

Cælestinus III.

Cap. 10.—A nobis fuit ex parte tuâ quæsitum—“utrum licet Regi, vel alicui sæculari personæ, judicare Clericos cujuscunque ordinis, sive in furto, sive in homicidio, vel perjurio, seu quibuscunque fuerint criminibus deprehensi?” Consultationi tuæ taliter respondeo: Quod si Clericus, in quoçunque ordine constitutus, in furto, vel homicidio, vel perjurio, vel alio crimine fuerit deprehensus, legitimè atque convictus; ab Ecclesiastico judice deponendus est: qui, si depositus, incorrigibilis fuerit, excommunicari debet: deinde contumaciâ crescente, anathematis mucrone feriri: postmodùm verò, si in profundum malorum veniens, contempserit; (quum ecclesia non habeat ultrà quid faciat) ne possit esse ultrà perditio plurimorum, per sæcularem comprimendus est potestatem ita quod ei deputetur exilium, vel alia legitima pœna inferatur.

the Popes, was the establishment of the various orders of Monks and Friars in the Roman Church. "From these Monks," says Puffendorf, "has the Pope formed his Prætorian band, or regiment of guards, whom he has not only quartered, as troublesome companions, upon the Laity; but makes use of them as Spies over the actions of the Bishops and the rest of the Clergy. Therefore it is, that the Popes have maintained with so much zeal, the privileges of the Monks, especially in the thirteenth Century, when they endeavoured to force themselves from the Bishops' Jurisdiction, and subject themselves immediately to the Pope. And, although there are great jealousies betwixt their Orders, (as, for example,

Innocentius III.

Cap. 17.—Præcipiatis ex parte nostrâ Prælatis, ut Laicis de Clericis, conquerentibus, plenam faciant justitiam exhiberi, non obstantibus appellationibus frustratoriis, quas in eorum gravamine, Clerici frequenter opponunt: ne pro defectu justitiae, Clerici trahantur à Laicis ad judicium sæculare: quod omnino fieri prohibemus.

Cap. 11, 12.—Ad sacerdotes Deus voluit quæ in Ecclesiâ disponenda sunt, pertinere; non ad sæculi potestates; quas, si fideles sunt, Ecclesiæ suæ Sacerdotibus voluit esse subjectas. Imperatores Christiani subdere debent executiones suas Ecclesiasticis presulibus, non præferre. Obsequi solle principes Christianos decretis Ecclesiæ, non suam præponere potestatem. Episcopis caput subdere principem solitum, non de eorum capitibus judicare.

betwixt the Franciscans and the Dominicans,) yet he contrives to hold the balance so evenly, and to dispense his favours so impartially, that one Order cannot be oppressed by another ; nor has reason to complain of the Pope's injustice."

And, to crown all, these Monks and Friars were usually Confessors to all the Crowned Heads in Europe, and therefore were masters of their secrets. By the artful and dexterous combination of all these engines, and political machines, with the humours and passions, the hopes and the fears of mankind, both temporal and eternal, 1. Lofty and arrogant pretensions of Supremacy and Infallibility; 2. Appeals to Rome; 3. The Institution of Legates; 4. The ancient and venerable authority of the Pagan Pontiffs and Augurs; 5. The Oaths; and 6. The Investiture of Bishops; 7. The Introduction of the Canons and Decretales, and the exemption of the Clergy from Secular Jurisdiction; 8. The Institution of the several Orders of Monks and Friars, under the Pope's immediate jurisdiction; who were usually 9. Confessors to all the Sovereign Princes of Christendom, who were in communion with the Church of Rome; 10. the Pontiff's gained a paramount influence and controul in the general Councils convened from time to time, pretendedly for the suppression of Heresies, and the reformation of Morals, but, in reality, for the extension of the Papal power and jurisdiction.

For such were the deleterious decrees of the great General Councils of Lateran, A.D. 1139, 1179, and 1215; of Constance, A.D. 1414; of Basil, A.D. 1431; and of Trent, A.D. 1549; which only riveted the Papal Yoke upon the necks of their slaves!!!

I shall close this Introduction with the Reflexions of a great Traveller and accomplished Scholar, Sir Edwin Sandys, on this Subject, in his Speculum Europæ; or, Survey of the State of Religion in the Western part of the World, written at Paris, in 1509. A work, that, in point of nervous composition,—of concise, yet flowing eloquence,—and of masterly reasoning,—has not, perhaps, been exceeded by any later work, whatsoever, even of the present age.

“ But to come now, to the view of their Ecclesiastical Government—as addressed to the upholding of the worldly power and glory of their order.—I think I may truly say: There was never yet STATE framed by man’s wit in this World, more powerful and forcible to work these effects; never any more wisely contrived and plotted, or more constantly and diligently put in practice and execution; insomuch that, but for the natural weakness of untruth and dishonesty, which (being rotten at the heart,) abate the force of whatever is founded thereon, their outward means were sufficient to subdue a whole world.”

“ The particular ways they hold to ravish all

Sir Edwin dys’ D
tion o Govern
the Chu
Rome.

affections, and to fit each humour, (which, their Jurisdiction and Power being but persuasive and voluntary, they principally regard) are well nigh infinite: There being not any thing either sacred or profane, no virtue or vice almost, no things of so contrary condition soever, which they make not, in some sort, to serve that turn; that each fancy may be satisfied, and each appetite find what to feed on. Whatsoever either wealth can sway with the lovers, or voluntary poverty with the despisers, of the world; what honour, with the ambitious; what obedience, with the humble; what great employment, with stirring and mettled spirits; what perpetual quiet, with heavy and restive spirits; what content the pleasant nature can take in pastimes and jollity; what contrariwise the austere mind, in discipline and rigour; what love, either chastity can raise in the pure, or voluptuousness in the dissolute; what allurements are in knowledge to draw the contemplative, or in actions of state to possess the practic dispositions; what with the hopeful, prerogative of reward can work; what errors, doubts, and dangers, with the fearful; what change of vows, with the rash; of estate, with the inconstant; what pardons, with the faulty, or supplies with the defective; what miracles, with the credulous; what visions, with the fantastical; what gorgeousness of shews, with the vulgar and simple ; what multitude of ceremonies, with the superstitious and ignorant ; what prayer, with the devout ; what with the charitable, works of piety ; what rules of higher perfection, with elevated affections ; what dispensing with breach of all rules, with men of lawless conditions ; in sum : what thing soever can prevail with any man, either for himself to pursue, or, at leastwise, to love, reverence, or honour, in another ; (for even therein also, man's nature receiveth great satisfaction) the same is found in them : not, as in other places of the world, by casualty, blended without order, and of necessity ; but sorted in great part, into several professions ; countenanced with reputation, honoured with prerogatives, facilitated with provisions and yearly maintenance ; and either (as the better things) advanced with expectation of reward ; or borne-with (how bad soever) with sweet and silent permission.

“ What pomp, what riot, to that of their Cardinals ? What severity of life comparable to their Hermits and Capuchins ? Who, wealthier than their Prelates ? Who, poorer than their Mendicants ? On the one side of the street, a cloyster of Virgins ; on the other, a sty of Courtezans with public toleration. This day, all in masks, with all looseness and foolery ; to-morrow, all in processions, whipping themselves till the blood follow. On one door an Excommunication throwing to Hell all Transgressors ; on another, a Jubilee, or full Discharge from all Transgressions.

Who, learneder in all kinds of sciences than their Jesuits ? What thing more ignorant than their parish-Priests ? What Prince so able to prefer his Servants and followers as the Pope, and in so great multitude ? Who, able to take deeper and readier revenge on his enemies ? What pride equal to his, making Kings kiss his pantofle ? What humility greater than his, shriving himself daily on his knees to an ordinary priest ? Who, difficulter in dispatch of causes to the Greatest ? Who, easier in giving audience to the Meanest ? Where, greater rigour in the world in exacting the observance of the Church Laws ? Where, less care or conscience of the COMMANDMENTS OF GOD ? To taste flesh on a Friday, when suspicion might fasten, were matter for the Inquisition ; whereas, on the other side, the Sunday is one of their greatest market-days."

" To conclude, never State, never Government in the World, so strangely compacted of infinite contrarieties, all tending to entertain the several humours of all men, and to work what kind of effect they shall desire : where rigour and remissness, cruelty and lenity are so combined, that with neglect of the Church, to stir aught, is a sin unpardonable; whereas, with duty towards the Church, and by intercession for her allowance, with respective attendance of her pleasure, no Law of God or Nature so sacred, which, one way or other, they find not means to dispense with, or, at leastwise, permit the breach of, by connivance and without disturbance."

AN

E S S A Y,
§c.

---

---

NOTWITHSTANDING the labours of such learned Antiquaries as Giraldus Cambrensis, Camden, Usher, Lloyd, Stillingfleet, &c., the origin of the primitive British and Irish Churches has been wrapt in much obscurity and uncertainty. Of this, the following reasons may be assigned :

1. The idle and visionary tales, and monkish legends, blended with the original documents still subsisting, which render it no short nor easy task, to separate the wheat from the chaff, truth from fiction.
2. The undue credence given to the monkish historians, whose devotion to the See of Rome frequently led them to pervert, falsify, or suppress the early evidence of the usurped Supremacy of the modern Church of Rome, over her Sister Churches.
3. The want of more carefully examining, and more critically comparing together, the several valuable documents, that have been collected by the skill and industry of the foregoing Antiquaries ; and of adjusting their Chronology.

4. The want of some curious and important Welsh records, unknown to former Antiquaries, and but lately brought to light, by those learned and intelligent Welsh scholars, Roberts, Williams, &c., in the Archæologia Myviriana, Collectanea Cambria, &c.; and of some interesting Irish records, the Annals of the four Masters, &c. lately translated by that eminent Irish scholar, Dr. O'Connor.

I shall therefore attempt, in the following Essay,

- I. To review the various and discordant traditions respecting their origin.
- II. To trace their true origin and establishment, upon Scriptural and Ecclesiastical evidence.
- III. To shew their entire and total independence upon the Church of Rome, from the earliest periods of their history.
- IV. To shew the determined and unremitting opposition of the Church and State, in both Islands, to the encroachments and usurpations of the Church and See of Rome, from the first establishment of Christianity in Great Britain and Ireland, to the blessed Reformation.
- V. To exhibit some authentic and advantageous specimens of the purity and simplicity of the doctrine of these primitive Churches, and of their abhorrence of the errors and corruptions of the Church of Rome.

SECTION I.

UNFOUNDED TRADITIONS RESPECTING THE ORIGIN OF THE BRITISH AND IRISH CHURCHES.

THE introduction of Christianity into the British Isles, has been ascribed to several of the Apostles, or their immediate disciples: to the Apostles, John, James the elder, James the less, Simon Zelotes, Peter, or Paul; or to their assistants, Joseph of Arimathea, Aristobulus, &c.; who severally have been patronized by the learned, in ancient or modern times.

1. St. John. Tertullian relates, that this Apostle was cast into a caldron of boiling oil, by the tyrant Nero, at Rome; and after he came out unhurt, was banished to a certain island*. But this miracle is unnoticed by any of the early Fathers, Clemens Romanus, Irenæus, Eusebius, Origen, and Jerome, who had better sources of information. And St. John was banished not by Nero, but by Domitian, as we learn from Sulpicius Severus and Isidore, (see Lardner, Vol. II. p. 268; V. p. 164, 309); not to Britain, but to Patmos, in the Archipelago, as he declares himself, Rev. i. 9. The learned antiquary, Roberts, however, has adopted this tradition, on account of the great stress laid upon St. John's authority in the debate between Colman and Wilfrid, A. D. 664, about the time of celebrating Easter. The Irish champion, Colman, contended for the fourteenth day of the Paschal moon, when the passover was celebrated by CHRIST, and according to primitive usage; but Wilfrid, for the fifteenth day, with Caiaphas and the Jews; when it was improperly celebrated, as may be proved from John xviii. 28. xix. 14. compared with Luke xxii. 7.

---

* Ubi Apostolus Johannes, posteaquam in Oleum igneum demersus, nihil passus est, in insulam relegatur. De Praescript. Hæres. c. 86, p. 245.

But Roberts himself has satisfactorily accounted for the great veneration in which this Apostle and his writings were held in Britain and Ireland, from the early intercourse and connexion subsisting between the British and Gallican Churches; for Irenæus, the bishop of Lyons in Gaul, was the disciple of Polycarp, who was the disciple of St. John. See the Collectanea Cambrica, No. 6. and Roberts' Visitation Sermon, 1812, notes, p. 20.

2. St. James the elder. He could not possibly have visited the British isles, because he was slain by Herod, A. D. 44.

3. St. James the less, or the Lord's brother, or cousin-german, was elected first bishop of Jerusalem; and was slain by the Jews A. D. 63., as we learn from Josephus.

4. Simon Zelotes. According to Nicephorus, he preached the Gospel as far as the Western ocean, and the British isles, and was crucified in Britain. This, however, is contradicted by Bede; who states that Simon suffered in Persia, Oct. 28, in his Martyrology.

5. St. Peter. His visit to Britain, rests on the single authority of Simeon Metaphrastes: who states that “St. Peter spent some days in Britain, and enlightened many, by the word of Grace; and having established Churches,” &c. See Introduct. p. 20.

But it is incredible, that so much should be effected by the Apostle, in so short a time. And the total silence of all the early Fathers respecting this visit, and of any of the British Churches to claim St. Peter as their founder, is sufficient to invalidate his testimony.

Joseph of Arimathea. His pretensions have been supported by Theophilus Evans in his Drych y prif Oesoed, and the learned and pious Charles Edwards in his Hanes y Ffydd. But Mr. Roberts represents this as a legendary tale, fabricated by the Monks of Glastonbury, after they had plundered the records of St. David's. Sermon, p. 21.

6. There remains, therefore, only the tradition of St. Paul's visit to Britain, with which that of Aristobulus is connected. And this tradition has been adopted by the most learned Antiquaries, ancient and modern; by Parker, Camden, Usher, Stillingfleet, Cave, Gibson, Nelson, Rowland, Roberts, and lately by the pious and primitive Bishop Burgess, in his elaborate Tracts on the Origin and Independence of the British Church, 1815, second edition, which originally appeared in the form of Letters to his Clergy of St. David's.

A tradition so fully and so respectably supported, merits the strictest discussion. And I have been encouraged to undertake the arduous task, by his Lordship himself; who, in a letter, with which I was favoured by him, July 17, 1815, thus expresses himself, with the candour and liberality of a scholar, whose sole object is the discovery of truth:—

“I am glad you are pursuing your inquiries into the first introduction of the Gospel into Britain. The more I study the subject, the more I am convinced of St. Paul’s having preached the Gospel in these islands. But your convictions are equally decided, that he did not. Nothing but ample and full investigation of the subject can remove the difficulties, which occasion such a difference of opinion. I shall therefore receive with great pleasure, the result of your inquiries.”

And again, August 28, 1815.—“I shall be very glad to see your Essay on the subject. I most cordially adopt your maxim: Μόνη Δικαιοσύνη—“Sacrifice to THE TRUTH alone.”

The Bishop maintains (with Usher) that “St. Paul established a form of Church Government in Britain; and that he appointed Aristobulus (noticed by the Apostle, Rom. xvi. 10.) to be the first Bishop of Britain: upon the authority of the Greek Menæa, and of Dorotheus.” Tracts, &c. pp. 55, 70.

To support this authority, his Lordship produces a considerable number of vouchers; Clemens Romanus, Eusebius, Jerom, Theodoret, &c. among the Fathers, and two British records; pp. 3, 23, 70—73.

1. His first and most important evidence, is that of Clemens Romanus, the intimate friend and fellow-labourer of St. Paul, of whom honourable mention is made, Phil. iv. 3,—which is partially cited, Tracts, pp. 47, &c. 108, &c., and fully, in the foregoing Introduction, p. 12.

But it is to be observed, that this passage seems too vague and rhetorical to ascertain the fact upon sober, historical testimony. Clemens represents the Apostle, as διδασκαλος ὅλης του κοσμου, “having taught the whole world righteousness.” This surely is not geographically true. He did not at all preach the Gospel in the Parthian empire; in the extensive and populous regions of Upper Asia; of India, east and west of the Ganges; in the wide regions of Libya and Africa; nor even in the northern parts of Europe: His travels were confined to the southern parts, within the precincts of the Roman empire. And if so, surely we are not bound to understand in strictness, the next passage: επι το τερμα της δυσεως ελθων, “Having gone to the termination of the west,” or rather, of the setting sun. But admitting that it is to be understood geographically, where is this “termination of the west” to be found, within the wide range of the sun’s setting amplitude? Have not Cape Finisterre, and Cadiz, in Spain, better astronomical and classical pretensions than Britain? as being nearer to the tropics; those τροπαι ηλιοτο, “turnings of the sun,” noticed by Homer, Odyss. xv. 403, which include the sun’s greatest northern and southern declinations from the Æquinoctial. Cape Finisterre (finis terræ, the land’s end,) was usually considered as the western termination of Europe. And so was Gades or Cadiz, by Juvenal, the contemporary of Clemens:

Omnibus in terris quæ sunt a Gadiis usque
Auroram et Gangem, pauci dignoscere possunt
 Vera bona, atque illis multum diversa, remotâ
 Erroris nebulâ !

“ In all the lands that reach from Cadiz [westward]
 To the Ganges, eastward; how few are able To distinguish real good and evil,
 Removing the mist of error ! ”                   SAT. x. 1.

And surely, Ireland, lying still more westerly, has better pretensions than Britain. But unquestionably St. Paul never visited Ireland. How inconclusive then is the testimony of Clemens?

And how unwarrantable is it to erect a logical argument, upon a figurative expression?

Still more vague and indeterminate are the Bishop's succeeding early testimonies, p. 48—50.

Irenæus speaks of Christianity as having been propagated by the Apostles and their disciples, ἐώς περιπτών της γῆς, “to the ends of the earth;” εν ταῖς Ιβηρίαις, “in the Iberias,” or regions of Spain and Lusitania or Portugal; καὶ εν Κελτοῖς, “and among the Celts,” or Germans, Gauls and Britons: but he does not specify, at what time, nor distinguish by whom.

Tertullian represents “all the extremities of the Spains, the different nations of the Gauls, and even the regions of the Britons inaccessible to the Romans, as converted to Christ, in his time;” but with the same latitude of expression.

Eusebius, indeed, says more distinctly, “that some (έτεροις) of the Apostles passed over the Ocean to the Isles called British. ” But he does not state which of the Apostles.

Jerome says, “that St. Paul, after his liberation by Nero, preached the Gospel in the western parts;” and that he included Britain, in the western parts, appears, says the Bishop, from his “Epist. ad Marcellum,” pp. 50, 115.

But the fuller testimony of Jerome,* referred to, but not cited by the Bishop, on Amos, c. 5, is highly rhetorical :

* “Paulus Apostolus vocatus a Domino, effusus est super faciem universæ terræ, ut prædicaret evangelium a Hierus.

“ The Apostle Paul, after his call, by THE LORD, was spread over the face of the whole earth, to preach the Gospel from Jerusalem [southwards] even to Illyricum [northwards]; and that ‘ he might not build upon another’s foundation,’ where it had been preached before, he moreover went to the Spains: He also ran from the South Sea, [or Red Sea] even from the (Indian) Ocean [eastward] to the (Atlantic) Ocean, [westward]; thus imitating the Lord his God, and the Sun of Righteousness: of whom we read, ‘ His going forth is from one end of the heaven, and his arrival at the other end of it.’ And sooner should the earth fail, than Paul’s zeal in preaching the Gospel.” This highly figurative language, resembling Clemens, does not specify the British Isles.

The testimony, indeed, of Theodoret is express, that “ St. Paul, after his release from confinement, went to Spain, and brought salvation to *salem usque ad Illyricum, et ædificaret non super alterius fundamento, (Rom. xv. 20.) ubi jam fuerit prædicatum, sed usque ad Hispanias tenderet; et a mari Austro, immo ab oceano ad oceanum curreret: imitans utique Dominum Deum suum, et Solem Justitiæ, (Mal. iv. 2.) de quo legimus, ‘ A summo cælo egressio ejus, et occursus ejus usque ad summum ejus.’ (Ps. xix. 6.) Et ante Paulum, terra deficeret, quam studium prædicandi evangelium.” Pererii Dissert. p. 3,* the Islands lying in the Ocean," p. 51.—But Theodoret wrote in the fifth century, A.D. 423—460.

The testimony of Venantius Fortunatus in the sixth (A.D. 560—600), p. 51, savours of poetical exaggeration; stating that the Apostle even visited ultima Thule; which, whether it denotes Shetland, Scandinavia, or Iceland, is not true.

The testimony of Athanasius, is thus rendered by the Bishop. "St. Paul preached as far as Illyricum, and did not hesitate to return to Rome, (εἰς τὴν Παρμὴν απελθεῖν) and even to go to Spain, that, in proportion to the labour, he might receive the greater reward," p. 79.

Paul, on his return to Rome from the east, was beheaded by Nero; and therefore could not go to Spain, after his return, as the Bishop's translation seems to imply. I apprehend that the original should rather be rendered, to "go from [Cæsarea] to Rome;" whither he was sent by Festus, on his appeal to Cæsar. The compound verb απελθεῖν is so understood by Theodoret, in the citation, p. 80. "Then going from thence, [Rome] (εκεῖδεν απελθεῖν) to the Spains, and having brought the divine Gospel to them also, he returned again (εποιεῖσθε) to Rome." But Theodoret says nothing here of the Apostle's visit to Britain.

The Bishop closes his historical evidence with the remark of Ludovicus Capellus, whom he justly ranks among “our most valuable historians.” This remark is given (untranslated) in a note, Tracts, p. 22. It may be thus closely rendered :

“ It is a common and most generally received opinion of all the Fathers, and scarcely rejected by any one that I know of, at the present day, that the Apostle Paul, after he had spent two years at Rome, (as mentioned Acts xxviii. 30.) when he was liberated from his bonds, spent some years in preaching, during his travels in the West.”

But how little credit Capellus himself attached to this prevailing tradition, will appear from the subsequent remark, in the Appendix to his Hist. Apost. p. 29—36, edit. 1683*.

* “ Quâ factum, ut nulla sint in totâ primitivæ Ecclesiæ historiâ, certa vestigia aut monumenta a Paulo prædicati evangelii, hoc vel illo loco; et ecclesiarum ab eo in Italia, Gallia, Germania aut Hispania constitutarum? Adde, quod causa nulla idonea singi potest, cur Lucas, qui perpetuus fuit et individuus Pauli in prioribus et posterioribus vinculis [Romæ] comes, de illa Occidentis a Paulo factâ periginatione, prorsus tacuerit. Incerta, ergo, prorsus videtur illa Patrum traditio, nullo satis firmo fundamento subnixa, quâ asserunt Paulum prioribus vinculis solutum, in occidente evangelium prædicasse; (quales complures sunt aliæ veteres traditiones, a Cœsariorum receptæ, incertæ, vel etiam falsæ, a doctis viris notatae) cum ex Scripturâ, (uti demonstratum est), colligi verius possit, eum Orientem repetivisse, non autem in occidentem prosectum esse.” Lud. Capell. Append. ad Hist. Apost. pp. 29—36. edit. 1683, “ How comes it to pass, that throughout the whole course of primitive Ecclesiastical History, there are no certain traces or monuments of Churches founded by St. Paul in different parts of Italy, Gaul, Germany, and Spain?

“ We may further observe, that no sufficient reason can be assigned, why Luke, the constant and inseparable companion of Paul, both in his former and in his latter bonds [at Rome], is totally silent about the last western expedition of the Apostle. The tradition of the Fathers therefore, that Paul, when liberated from his bonds, preached the Gospel in the West, seems utterly uncertain, and supported by no firm foundation, (and, indeed, there are many such ancient traditions, which are proved by the learned to be either uncertain or false) : for, it may more truly be collected from Scripture, that he revisited the East, but did not go to the West.”

This scriptural counter-evidence is contained in St. Paul’s last Epistle, his second to Timothy, written after his return from the East to Rome, not long before his martyrdom ; of which he had a strong presentiment :

“ I am now ready to be offered up as a libation ; ( $\eta\delta\eta \sigma\pi\varepsilon\deltaoμai$ ), and the time of my dissolution is at hand.” 2 Tim. iv. 6.

And he afterwards describes his route to Rome, from Miletus, through Troas, and Corinth, iv. 13. 20. His eastern journey therefore is unquestionable.

The sole foundation of the prevailing tradition of the western journey, is the Apostle's declared intention of visiting Spain, after going to Rome; and of returning from thence to Rome again; Rom. xv. 24—28. Whence it has been too hastily concluded, that he executed his intention. This however was doubted by some of the early Fathers.

In the foreground, we may rank Jerome himself*. In his commentary on Ephes. iii. 13, he says, “Paul wished to go to Spain, or certainly intended to go thither.” And in his book against Helvidius, he wrote, “Not that because Paul wished to go to Spain, it can from thence be concluded that he went thither: since he might have been prevented by various causes, from perform*ing that journey."* And the ancient author of the commentary on the Epistle to the Romans, bound up in Jerome's works, and erroneously ascribed to him, explaining this very passage, (Rom. xv. 24—28), says, "It is uncertain whether Paul went to Spain or not."

* Ut a beato Hieronymo initium sumam, videtur is quidem, nonnullis in locis, dubitanter de eâ re loqui: nam in tertium caput Epist. ad Ephes. super illis Apostoli verbis, “Propter quod, peto ne deficiatis in tribulationibus,” &c. ait beatum Paulum “voluisse ire in Hispaniam, vel certe illuc ire disposuisse.” Et in Libro adversus Helvidium scripsit, “non, ex eo quod Paulus voluit ire in Hispaniam, posse concludi eum ivisse illuc: cum, variis de causis, impediti potuerit ne profectionem illam faceret.”

Auctor etiam commentariorum in hauc epistolam ad Romanos, falso præferens nomen beati Hieronymi, in explanando hunc locum Pauli, quem nunc tractamus, ait “incertum esse utrum Paulus iverit in Hispaniam necne.” Pererii Diss. p. 2, 3.

The next is furnished by a learned Pope, Gelasius,* A. D. 492.

"It is not to be believed, either that St. Paul deceived us, (far be such a supposition!) or that he contradicted himself; because, that when he promised to go to Spain, he was prevented from fulfilling his promise by occupations of greater moment, according to the Divine appointment. So far as depended upon his own will, he declared * Beatus Paulus non ideo (quod absit !) fecellisse credendus est, aut sibi contrarius extitisse, quod cum ad Hispaniam iturum se promisisset, dispositione Divinâ majoribus occupatus causis, implere non potuit quod promisit. Quantum enim ipsius voluntas interfuit, hoc pronunciat quod revera voluisse efficere: quantum enim ad Divini secreta consilii, quæ, ut homo, omnia non potuit, licet spiritu Dei plenus, agnoscere, supernâ prætermisit dispositione præventus.

Affirmat [insuper] Gelasius, Paulum voluisse in Hispaniam proficisci, sed minime tunc implesse quod esset pollicitus, quippe qui ad Romanos scribens, se prope diem, simul ac collectam pecuniam, Hierosolymam pauperibus attulisset, Romam venturum, ac subinde in Hispanias proficisci, decrevisse testatur: Attamen quo minus id prostare potuerit, quas a Judæis est passus Hierosolymis graves ærumnæ, et quas, Romæ, sub Nerone, biennio detentus in carcere, fuerint impedimento. Baron. Annal. A. D. 61, p. 617; or Pererius, p. 9.

what he intended to perform; but afterwards omitted, when he was prevented by the Divine appointment: for no man, however full he may be of the Spirit of God, can possibly explore all the secrets of the Divine counsel. His severe sufferings, from the Jews at Jerusalem, and under Nero at Rome, prevented him from executing his intention."

And with Gelasius, concurs the celebrated Thomas Aquinas*, in his note on the same passage (Rom. xv. 24—28.)

---

* Beatus Thomas, super hoc loco Epistolæ ad Romanos, ita scribit: Videtur hoc loco Apostolus falsum dixisse, nunquam enim in Hispaniam ivisse legitur; quippe in Hierusalem captus fuit; et inde, Romam in vinculis portatus est, (ut habetur Actorum ultimo) et ibi est occisus simul cum Petro. Dicunt ergo quidam, Paulum, eo ‘biennio quo Romæ mansit, traditus custodiæ unius militis,’ tunc ivisse eum in Hispaniam. Sed quia hoc certum non est, potest melius dici, quod Apostolus falsum non dixit, quia tunc volebat et statuebat facturum se quod dicebat. Verba itaque ejus declarant voluntatem et propositum quod tunc habebat, non autem futurum eventum qui incertus erat ipsi. Et ire etiam se excusat apud Corinthios, de eo quod non ivisset apud eos sicut promiserat. Sic enim scribit: Cum ergo volui, numquid levitate usus sum, aut quæ cogito secundum carnem cogito, ut sit apud me ‘est’ et ‘non [est]’? Quibus verbis ostendit se, quia justâ ex causâ prætermiserat ire ad Corinthios, immunem esse a levitate et falsitate. Atque hoc etiam sensit et tradidit Gelasius papa, ut habetur in Decretis, 22 quæst. his verbis: “Beatus Paulus non ideo, &c.”—Hæc B. Thomas. Pericrius, p. 8, 9.

"The Apostle seems in this place to have spoken falsely, for it is no where read, that he went to Spain; inasmuch as he was imprisoned at Jerusalem, and carried from thence in bonds to Rome, as related in the last chapter of the Acts, and was slain there together with Peter. Some therefore say, that, after the two years of his bondage at Rome, he went to Spain. But because this is not certain, it is better to say, that the Apostle did not speak falsely, because he wished, and resolved to do what he said, at the time. His words, then, declare his wish and purpose which he then held, but not the future event, which was unknown to him. And in like manner, he excused himself to the Corinthians for not going to them as he had promised, on his return from Macedonia to Jerusalem: 'When I therefore was thus minded, did I use lightness? or the things that I purpose, do I purpose according to the flesh, that with me there should be yea, yea, and nay, nay?' (2 Cor. i. 17.) shewing by these words, that although he had, for a just cause, omitted to go to Corinth, yet he was free from the charge of lightness, fickleness, or falsehood."—These valuable counter-testimonies are candidly furnished by the learned Pererius, in his two disputationes upon Rom. xv. 24—28, though an advocate himself for Paul's journey to Spain. These dissertations have been lately re-published by the patriotic Bishop of St. David's; who obligingly favoured me with a copy, for the fuller elucidation of the question at issue.

To the judicious argument of Thomas Aquinas, we may add other instances in which the Apostle failed to execute his intentions. 1. At his second visit to Jerusalem, A. D. 44, he wished to have preached the Gospel there, but THE LORD forbade him; and ordered him to depart quickly out of Jerusalem, for, said he, “They will not receive thy testimony concerning me.” So he staid there only fifteen days. Compare Acts xxvi. 17, 18, with Galat. i. 18. And see Hales's New Analysis, &c. Vol. II. p. 1190, 1191. 2. When Paul and his company intended to preach the Gospel in Lydia and Bithynia, they were prevented by the HOLY GHOST, and sent into Macedonia, as affording a richer harvest; while Bithynia and the adjacent regions inhabited by the Jews of the dispersion, were consigned to Peter's ministry. Compare Acts xvi. 6—10, with 1 Pet. i. 1. And see the New Analysis, Vol. II. p. 1221. 3. Paul was hindered by Satan from visiting the Thessalonians, as he intended. 1 Thess. ii. 18.; probably by that “thorn in the flesh,” or malady “with which he was buffeted by Satan's messenger;” 2 Cor. xii. 13. 4. The LORD declared, personally, and by the spirit, and in vision, that “Paul should visit Rome; and should testify of him at Rome.” Acts xix. 21; xxiii. 11; xxvii. 23.

And though the Apostle frequently intended to have gone thither, he was all along prevented by more urgent business. Rom. i. 13; xv. 22. And when he was indeed sent thither at last, by the Roman governor Festus, it was not without the special appointment of Providence, that he was retained in bonds there for two entire years, with liberty to preach the Gospel; and that, with infinitely greater effect in the metropolis of the western world, than he could have done in the remote and uncivilized province of Spain. For similar reasons, we may presume, he spent so much time in the capital cities of Antioch in Syria, Philippi in Macedonia, and Corinth in Achaia; because “the LORD had much people” of rank and learning, high and low, to be converted therein. Acts xviii. 9—11.

These observations may furnish a sufficient answer to the Bishop of St. David’s objection: “The measures of an ordinary traveller might have been broken by such obstacles; but the Apostle of the Gentiles, who was under the special protection of Providence, and was disposed ‘to labour more abundantly than all the Apostles’ —was not likely to be disconcerted by any but insurmountable obstacles [from pursuing his intended journey to Spain.]” Tracts, p. 43.—But, surely, his long confinement, of four years, at Cæsarea and Rome, under the special protection and direction of PROVIDENCE, were insurmountable obstacles.

To weaken the powerful evidence of Pope Gelasius, the Bishop produces a passage of Natalis Alexander, (untranslated,) intimating that “the authority of a single Pontiff, writing according to his private opinion, is of no avail against so great a cloud of witnesses, to overturn a tradition supported by the testimony of so many fathers, in favour of St. Paul’s journey to Spain.” Tracts, p. 80.

But Gelasius is not single, nor did he merely deliver his private opinion: He is ably supported, as we have seen, by Jerome, Thomas Aquinas, and Capellus, and by the whole tenor of SCRIPTURE; while the testimony of “so many Fathers,” is proved to be vague, irrelevant, and unsatisfactory.—And the rector of Killesandra, indeed, is reluctantly compelled by the weight of evidence, to side with the Pope, against a Protestant prelate, so distinguished in the Popish Controversy.

It is highly probable, however, that, as St. Peter was sent to Bithynia, in St. Paul’s stead; and, after he had discharged his mission there, to Corinth, and to Rome; so he was likewise sent to Spain, during S. Paul’s confinement at Rome. This we may further collect from the intimacy subsisting between both; and his capability of fulfilling his beloved brother Paul’s intentions:

and also, from the actual introduction of Christianity, at that very time, into Spain; as we learn from the curious monument, found at Marcosia, a village of Lusitania, or Portugal, with this inscription: Noticed in the foregoing Introduction, pp. 20, 21.

NERONI CL. CAIS. AUG. PONT. MAX.
OB. PROVINC. LATRONIB.
ET HIS QUI NOVAM GENERI HUM.
SUPERSTITION. INculcab. PURGATAM.

*"To Nero Claud. Cæsar Chief Pontiff, Augustus,
For purging the province of Robbers,
And of [Christians] who inculcated
A new Superstition to the Human Race."*

Mosheim and others have doubted the genuineness of this monument, as if not sufficiently established on the authority of the first publisher, Cyriacus Antonianus, especially as the stone itself is not now to be found; and it is not noticed by any Spanish or Portuguese writers of eminence. But the style, as justly remarked by Lardner, is perfectly similar to that in which Tacitus, Suetonius, and Pliny, speak of the Christian Religion; which they call "superstition," "a new, pernicious, or magical superstition." And Peter's labours in Spain probably involved him in the same persecution after his return from thence, as Paul's labours at Rome.

But the Bishop objects, that “St. Peter, in his epistles, takes no notice of his western travels.” p. 45. To this, it may be answered, that St. Peter wrote only two short epistles, and on general topics of Christianity, to the dispersed Jews in Asia, who had no connexion with, and were uninterested about the Gentile converts in the western and remotest part of Europe. He had no inducement, therefore, to apprise them of his labours in Spain. While, on the other hand, it is most highly improbable, that if St. Paul had visited Spain, he should not have noticed it, and, during nine years of his supposed travels, in his familiar epistles to his confidential disciple, Timothy, at least; especially as he is frequently minute and circumstantial in recording his travels.

The Bishop next proceeds to fix the limits of St. Paul's supposed journey to Britain. The main branch of his argument, is thus stated :

“Eusebius and Jerome say, that St. Paul was sent to Rome [by Festus] in the second year of Nero (A. D. 56); they say also, that he suffered martyrdom in the fourteenth of Nero. (A. D. 68). As he was released in the fourth year of Nero [A. D. 58] (according to Jerome, in his account of St. Luke), if he returned to Rome [A. D. 67] the year before his death, there will be an interval of nine years [between A. D. 58, and A. D. 67,] a space quite suffi*cient for the Apostle's travels in the east and in the west.*" Tracts, p. 118, 119.

This hypothesis, originally invented by *Baronius**, exhibits a space much more than sufficient; it is enormous, outstepping all the sober bounds of chronological history; for the following reasons :

1. According to Josephus, Ant. xx. 6. I. Felix was appointed procurator of Judea, "in the twelfth year of Claudius," (A. D. 52). If, then, Paul was sent to Rome by Festus, A. D. 56; his trial before Felix must have been two years earlier, (A. D. 54), according to Acts xxiv. 27; and, consequently, when Felix was only two years in office. But this is inconsistent with the Apostle's declaration, that Felix was then εκ πολλων ετων κριτην, "a judge of many years standing." Acts xxiv. 20.

To parry this fatal objection, the Bishop endeavours to lengthen Felix's administration, by assuming, with Bishop Pearson, a prior date of the appointment of Felix, in the eighth year of * Ab eo tempore libertatis suæ usque ad martyrii sui tempus, amplissimum annorum circiter novem spatium habuerit Paulus. Hujus demum sententiae nostræ adstipulato. rem et probatorem habemus, celeberrimum in hac ætate nostra scriptorem, Cardinalem Baronium, non solum cardinalatus dignitate, sed etiam virtutis et doctrinæ præstantiâ, verè illustrissimum. Perierius, p. 7.

Claudius, (A. D. 48); which would give Felix six years of office, at the time; and “this might (says he) well be called, εκ πολλῶν ετῶν, in A. D. 51.” Tracts, p. 40.

Let us examine the evidence for and against this prior date.

It is thus stated by Bishop Pearson: Hoc anno (A. D. 48) ineunte, venit in provinciam Cumanus, Judeæ procurator, et Felix Samariæ; (si fides Tacito) sed sine jure gladii, ut patet ex historiâ Josephi. Annal. p. S.

Here, the parenthetical remark,—“if credit is to be given to Tacitus,”—shews, that the date was adopted with some hesitation by Pearson: and no wonder, for nothing can be more vague, perplexed, or discordant, than the account of Tacitus; of which Bishop Burgess has given but an imperfect extract. Tracts, p. 33, note.

The entire passage is as follows:

(A. D. 52.) At non frater ejus (Pallantis) cognomento Felix, pari moderatione agebat, jampridem Judææ impositus, et cuncta malefacta sibi impune ratus, tanta potentia (Pallantis) subnixo. Sane præbuerant Judæi speciem motūs, ortā seditione [ob Caii Cæsaris effigiem in templo locandani]; postquam, cognitâ cæde ejus, haud obtemperatum esset, manebat metus, ne quis principum eadem imperitaret. Atque interim, Felix intempestivis remediis delicta accendebat; æmulo ad deterrima Ventidio Cumano, cui pars

provincie habebatur : ita divisis, ut huic Galilæorum natio, Felici Samaritæ parerent, discordes olim, et tum contemptu regentium minus coercitis odiis. Igitur raptare inter se, immittere latronum globos, componere insidias, et aliquando prœliis congregari, spoliaque et prædas ad procuratores referre. Hique primò lætari; mox gliscente pernicie, cum arma militum [Romanorum] interjecissent, cæsi milites. Arsissetque bello provincia, ni Quadratus, Syriæ rector, subvenisset. Nec diu adversus Judæos, qui in necem militum prouperant, dubitatum, quin capite pœnas luerent : Cumanus et Felix cunctationem adserebant, quia Claudius, causis rebellionis auditis, jus statuendi etiam de procuratoribus dederat. Sed Quadratus Felicem inter judices ostentavit, receptum in tribunal, quo studia accusantium deterrentur. Damnatusque flagitiorum quæ duo deliquerant, Cumanus; et quies provinciæ redditæ. Annual. xii. 54.

This is a confused and perplexed abridgment of the intelligent Jewish historian's clear and circumstantial detail of the turbulent administrations of Cumanus and Felix, in Judea; of which Josephus himself was, in great part, an interested eye-witness: He represents the two administrations as successive; but Tacitus has incongruously blended both together: neglecting to assign any date to the administration of Felix; and only observing, that it was jampridem, "a good while," before the trial of Cumanus by Quadratus, which he dates in A. D. 52, with Josephus. At which time, Felix was in reality sent to succeed him, in the twelfth year of Claudius. Ant. xx. 6. 1. Tacitus, therefore, furnishes no authority for A. D. 48, as the first date of Felix's administration; and Josephus had before assigned it to the appointment of Cumanus, in the eighth year of Claudius. Ant. xx. 4. 2. On the contrary, Tacitus leads us rather to collect, that Felix was in office so far back as the "assassination of Caius Caligula," the predecessor of Claudius, in the year A. D. 40, eight years earlier,—"cognita cæde ejus,"—(here supplying the happy conjectural emendation of Brotier, to make the sentence intelligible,—ob Caii Cæsaris effigiem in templo locandam)—for "the sedition at Jerusalem" was occasioned by the sacrilegious attempt of Caligula to set up his statue in the temple, as fully related by Josephus, Ant. xviii. 9. Tacitus has also strangely confounded Judea and Samaria, which he places under Felix; and Galilee, under Cumanus; and he has calumniated Quadratus, the president of Syria, who justly deposed and banished Cumanus, for his misdemeanors of bribery and injustice; in refusing to redress the Galileans, who had been assaulted in their way to Jerusalem, at the passover, by the Samaritans, from whom he had received money. Ant. xx. 5.—It is strange how Bishop Pearson could hesitate a single moment whether of the twain to prefer, Josephus or Tacitus; or awkwardly attempt to reconcile them, by fabricating a chronological date for Felix's administration, disowned, we see, by both historians!—The objection, therefore, of the two years of Felix's administration subsists in full force, and is ruinous to Bishop Burgess's hypothesis.

2. But further, Paul could not have been sent to Rome, by Festus, so early as A.D. 56; because Felix was not deposed before A. D. 61.

Josephus, indeed, has not specified the time of the deposal of Felix, for mal-administration, either in his Antiquities, or in his Jewish War; but it may be collected from the Life of Josephus, written by himself.

He relates that he was born in the first year of the emperor Caius Caligula, (A. D. 36); that when he was 26 years of age, (A. D. 62,) he undertook a voyage to Rome, (in the course of which he was shipwrecked, and in the Adriatic Sea, like St. Paul) in order to solicit the release of some Jewish Priests, his particular friends, who had been sent prisoners to Rome to be tried before Cæsar by Felix, during his administration, for some trifling offence; that he was introduced to Poppæa, the wife of Nero, by Aliturus, a Jew, and stage player, in great favour with Nero; and that by her interest, his friends were speedily discharged ; and, in addition to this service, Josephus himself was honoured by Poppaea with considerable gifts, before his return to his own country. Life, § 1—3. And we learn from Tacitus, that Poppaea was actually married to Nero in that same year, A. D. 62. confirming the date of Josephus; as judiciously remarked by the Bishop himself. “The time of Josephus’s journey is defined, both by the age of Josephus, and by the intercession of Poppaea, who was not married to Nero till the year 62.” Tracts, p. 39.

Hence, we may date the deposal of Felix about A. D. 61, the year before the voyage of Josephus. Felix, at first, after his deposal, was screened from the punishment due to his crimes, by the interest of his brother Pallas, then in high favour with Nero: but the tyrant, “wearyed out with the great age of Pallas, and impatient to get possession of his immense wealth,” (quod immensam pecuniam longa senecta detineret. Tacit. Annal. xiv, 65.) contrived to poison him, in A. D. 62. Before which event, it would not have been safe or prudent for Josephus to have ventured to solicit the release of his friends at Rome.

To this decisive testimony, the Bishop objects: “Nero pardoned Felix, when Pallas was most in favour, (τότε μολιστα δια τιμησεχων εκείνον); words that designate a very early period of Nero’s reign, rather than a late : for Pallas was dismissed from power in his second year, and tried for high treason in the third ; and must have continued out of power till Agrippina's death, in the fifth or sixth year. In the eighth, he was put to death." Tracts, p. 32.—But this consequence does not necessarily follow after Agrippina's death. For though Pallas was tried, he was honourably acquitted, and his accuser convicted of falsehood. But, adds Tacitus, "his innocence was not so agreeable [to the public] as his haughtiness was disgusting," (nec tam grata Pallantis innocentia, quam gravis superbia fuit.) Annal. xiii. 23.—And Bishop Pearson also successfully combats this objection, by remarking, that the death of Agrippina, the paramour, and the imperious patroness of Pallas, now that he was stripped of power himself, removed the sole cause of Nero's dislike ; nor is there any further account of Nero's being offended with Pallas. Whence Pearson draws a quite contrary conclusion from Bishop Burgess ; "nempe Neronem non nisi diu post initium imperii sui Pallantem in prætio habuisse." That "Nero did not hold Pallas in estimation, until long after the beginning of his reign." Pearson Annal. p. 17, 18.—The Bishop also incidentally objects to the epithet given by Josephus to Poppaea, "pious," (θεοτέλης) as utterly "inconsistent with her character for adultery, murder, and the most atrocious cruelty." Tracts, p. 31.

But it was not on this occasion, that Josephus so styled her: it was on another; for preventing the profanation of the temple at Jerusalem, by Agrippa's palace overlooking it. To obstruct his view, the Jews built a high wall; which Agrippa and Festus wanted to pull down; but Nero permitted it to stand, in order to gratify his wife Poppaea; who, in this instance at least, might not unreasonably be styled, θεος οὐρανοῦ. Ant. xx. 7, 11. However, we admit it to be improbable that “she was among St. Paul's converts to Christianity, at Rome;” as the Bishop justly objects.

If, then, Felix succeeded Cumanus in A. D. 52, and was deposed in A. D. 61, it follows that he was seven years in office at the time of Paul's trial, in A. D. 59; which agrees still better than the Bishop's hypothesis with the Apostle's observation, that he was then “a judge of many years standing.” But further,—

3. If St. Paul was sent to Rome so early as A. D. 56, the epistle to the Romans must have been written A.D. 53, or A.D. 54, according to the Magdeburgh history, Capellus, and Dodwell, followed by the Bishop in his Tracts, pp. iv. v.

But this earlier date of the epistle, would unsettle all the dates of the preceding epistles, and throw back the first written, (which is generally allowed to have been the epistle to the Galatians,) to A. D. 45, or A. D. 46.

Whereas, it is agreed by the Commentators, that it was written after the first council at Jerusalem, in A. D. 49, which is the date assigned to that council, by Petavius, Pearson, Barrington, Lardner, Michaelis, Paley, and Hales. See New Analysis, &c. Vol. II. p. 1108, 1109, 1110.

The combined influence of all these reasons, assuredly produced the later dates assigned to the epistle to the Romans, by Simson, A. D. 55; Pearson, and Whitby, A. D. 57; Barrington, Lardner, Michaelis, and Hales, A. D. 58; Usher, and the Bible Chronology, A. D. 60. The variations abundantly evincing, that these Chronologers did not servilely copy from each other, nor were biassed by favourite hypotheses. Of these varying dates, the mean, A. D. 58. will be found the most probable; and, it shall be further established in the course of the ensuing section. If, then, we assume the correcter date, A. D. 58, it will necessarily bring St. Paul's voyage to Rome, to A. D. 61, precisely the same year resulting from the foregoing independent arguments.

4. In the last place, St. Paul's supposed return to Rome from Spain, cannot be placed so low as A. D. 67. For, by the joint testimonies of Lactantius, Jerome, Theodoret, and Isidore, in the foregoing introduction, concurring with the Apostle's presage during his second imprisonment; (noticed, as we have seen, in his second epistle to Timothy;) he was put to death by Nero, in his general persecution of the Christians. But the date of this persecution is fixed by Tacitus, to the year A. D. 65. Annal. xv. 33, 34; which is precisely the year in which Metaphastes dates his martyrdom, as shewn in the Introduction, p. 20.

From this chain of connected evidence, we seem abundantly warranted to reduce the enormous supposition of nine years, within the narrower bounds of one, or two years, at the utmost, between the Apostle's release and departure from Rome, about the end of A. D. 63, or beginning of A. D. 64; and his return from his eastern expedition, and his martyrdom, A. D. 65. And, if so, it was morally impossible that he could visit Spain, and still less Britain, after that return; at a period too, when travelling was neither so convenient nor so expeditious as in the present age. To borrow an expression from the Tracts, with a slight alteration:—“This space has been greatly enlarged, by an unfounded Hypothesis, resting altogether on conjectures;” whereas the narrower space, here assigned, may justly be entitled to rank as a Theory, built upon the substantial foundation of Scripture, History, and Chronology:—a Scientific Chronology, which, I trust, will be more approved of daily,* the better it shall be understood, in all its harmonizing branches of Sacred and Profane History ;—and stand the test of ages.

* Opinionum commenta delet dies; Naturæ judicia confirmat. “The fictions of Hypotheses, daily lapse of Time defaces; but confirms the judgments of Nature.”—CICERO.

Hence, we may safely conclude, that Christianity was not planted in the British isles by any of the Apostles themselves, St. Paul, Peter, John, or Simon Zelotes; nor by the fore-named assistants, Joseph of Arimathea, Aristobulus, &c.

By whom, then, was it planted?—The solution of this curious and important inquiry is reserved for the two next Sections.

---

SECTION II.

INTRODUCTION AND ESTABLISHMENT OF CHRISTIANITY IN BRITAIN.

---

AMONG the venerable British documents, referred to by the Bishop of St. David's, are the letters of Gildas, about A. D. 546; Bede's works, A. D. 700; and the British Triads in the Myvyrian Archæology.

1. Gildas, in his querulous book, De excidio Britanniæ, third chapter De subjectione, relates the easy conquest of Britain by the Romans, after subduing the rest of the world. Cap. 4.

De Rebellione, he states the rebellion of the Britons, and their massacre by the Romans; when an army, sent over by the Senate, reduced them again under subjection, with scarcely any resistance. Cap. 5. De secunda subjectione et duro famulatu, he relates the complete reduction of the Island into a Roman province, and its consignment to the administration of Roman Governors; who ruled the Britons with great severity, scourging them with the rod, and punishing them, if necessary, with the sword: and they coined gold and silver monies there, with Cæsar's image.

Then follows cap. 6. De Religione: of which the following is a transcript, taken from Gale's edition of xv. Scriptores, 1691, Oxon. collated with several earlier editions of Gildas, and more correctly pointed.

Interea, glaciali frigore rigenti Insulæ, et velut longiore terrarum secessu, soli visibili non proximæ, VERUS ILLE SOL, non de firmamento temporali, sed de summâ etiam cœlorum arce, tempora cuncta excedente, universo orbi præfulgidum sui lumen ostendens; tempore, ut scimus, summo Tiberii Cæsaris; (quo, absque ullo impedimento, ejus propagabatur RELIGIO: comminatâ, senatu nolente, a principi morte delatoribus militum ejusdem) radios suos, primum indulget, id est, sua præcepta CHRISTUS.

“ In the mean time, to our [northern] frozen Island [of Britain], withdrawn, as it were, to a considerable distance from the visible sun, CHRIST, THE TRUE SUN [OF RIGHTEOUSNESS, Mal. iv.,] not from the temporal firmament but from the highest and eternal summit of the heavens, first indulges his rays, or his precepts; shewing his most glorious light to the whole world, about the end, as we know, of Tiberius Cæsar's reign; at which time, HIS RELIGION was propagated [at Rome], without any hindrance: this prince, without the concurrence of the Senate, having threatened death to the informers against HIS soldiers, [or militant followers.]

In this highly figurative, involved, and obscure passage, whose full meaning it is no wonder that so many antiquaries have hitherto failed to develop, the author quaintly contrasts the natural coldness of Britain from its high nothern climate, with the moral warmth produced in the hearts and lives of its heretofore pagan inhabitants, by the bright beams, or precepts, of Christianity; which first began to be preached to the whole world, immediately after our Lord's crucifixion, on the auspicious day of Pentecost, in the seventeenth year of Tiberius, A. D. 31; and soon after was propagated at Rome, by the "Roman sojourners," (Acts, ii. 10,) we may presume, before the end of his reign, A. D. 36, without any opposition on the part of this prince; who, on the contrary, rather favoured it, and threatened to put the informers against the Christians to death, though without the concurrence of the Senate."

The favourable disposition of Tiberius toward Christianity, and the indisposition of the Senate to support him therein, are mysteries best explained, perhaps, by Tertullian, in the following incidental narrative : " Tiberius, in whose time the Christian name [or religion] had its rise, having received information from Palestine, in Syria, of the truth of Christ's divinity, proposed to the Senate that he should be enrolled among the Roman Gods. But the Senate rejected the proposal, because the emperor himself had declined the honour of deification. Notwithstanding this, Cæsar still persisted in his opinion, and threatened the accusers of the Christians with punishment." This account is highly probable : the emperor, in all likelihood, was informed by Pilate *, his procurator at Jerusalem, of the stupendous miracles attending our Lord's crucifixion and resurrection; the praeternatural darkness, the earthquake, the vision of angels at the resurrection to the Roman guard at the sepulchre, &c. And, under such circumstances, this pagan emperor might naturally have followed the example of his predecessors, Nebuchadnezzar, and Darius the Mede,

---

**Justin Martyr*, in his first Apology for Christianity, A. D. 140, appealed to "the Acts made in the time of Pilate" to prove his assertions. About the year 307, the Pagans forged Acts of Pilate, injurious to the Christian Faith. These spurious acts prove the prior existence of the genuine, when they were appalled by the prophecies of the God of Israel, revealed through Daniel; and he might have issued a decree similar to theirs, threatening destruction to all that should speak against “JESUS OF NAZARETH, THE KING OF THE JEWS,” according to Pilate’s superscription on the cross.

The exact time of the introduction of Christianity into Britain is not specified by Gildas. It may be collected, however, from the first word, interea, “in the mean time,” (evidently having a retrospect to the preceding fifth chapter,) to have taken place during the second subjection of the Britons. This second subjection commenced from the defeat and captivity of Caractacus, the British prince, as we learn from Tacitus. He informs us, that Caractacus, king of the Silures, was defeated by Ostorius, the Roman proprætor in Britain, A.D. 50; and that, after his defeat, he was betrayed to the conquerors by Cartisman-dua, queen of the Brigantes, to whom he had fled for refuge, and was carried captive to Rome, but was released, with his wife and brothers, by the clemency, or the policy, of the emperor Claudius; who was moved, it is said, by a pathetic speech of Caractacus, made for him by the Roman Historian. Annal. xii. 33—37.

The conditions of his release, omitted by Tacitus, are fortunately supplied by the British Historians. From the Archæologia Myvyriana,

Vol. II. p. 63, under the article of Triad 35, of the three blessed kings of Britain, Bran, Lleirwig, (Lles or Lucius); and Cadwallader, translated from the original Welsh, by Roberts, in his Collectanea Cambrica, Appendix, p. 293; we learn the following curious particulars respecting the first of them:

“ Bran, the son of Llyr (Lear) Llediarth, first brought the knowledge of the Christian Faith to the Cymry (Cambri) from Rome, where he had been seven years, as a hostage for his son Caradoc (Caractacus), whom the Romans had made captive; after he had been betrayed, by treachery, into an ambush laid for him by Aregwedd Fred-dawg (Cartismandua). ”

A fuller description of the war of Caractacus with the Romans, and of the treachery of Cartismandua, is furnished by an old Monkish historian, Ricardus Corinensis, in his geographical work De situ Britanniæ, Lib. I. 6, 23, which is published, along with Gildas Badonicus, and Nennius Banchoiensis, by Bertram, in his neat edition of these three historians, 8vo. Havniæ (Copenhagen), 1757.

“ Olim ac diu potens erat hæc Silurum regio: Sed cùm eam tenuit Charaticus (Caractacus), longè potentissima. Hic, continuis novem annis, omnia Romanorum arma pro ludibrio habita, sæpe evertit; donec de illo, conjunctis viribus, Romanos aggressuro, triumphavit legatus Ostorius.

Charaticus enim, prælio evadens, auxiliumque a vicinis regibus petens, per astutiam matronæ, Romanæ, Cartismanduæ, cum rege Brigantiaæ Venusio nuptæ, Romanis deditus est. Post id temporis, mascule tantum suam ipsius ditionem idem ille populus defendens, usque dum a Varionio spoliatus, ac tandem a Frontino devictus, in formam Romanæ (cui Britanniaæ Secunda nomen erat) provinciæ, suum redigi pateretur."

This curious and valuable document, critically harmonizing with, and explaining the foregoing testimonies of Gildas. Tacitus and the British Triad, 1. satisfactorily accounts for the treachery of Cartismandua, as being "a Roman matron, the wife of Venusius king of the Brigantes." 2. It specifies the reduction of the western province by Frontinus, called Britannia Secunda, consisting of Wales, Cumberland, and a great part of Cheshire, inhabited by the Silures, Ordovici, and Dimetæ, as we learn from the intelligent Rowland, Mona Antiqua, p. 134, 146. And we learn from Tacitus, that Julius Frontinus finally reduced the powerful nation of the Silures under the Roman yoke, about A. D. 77.

Bran, the father of Caractacus, was left at Rome, as hostage for his son, A. D. 50, according to Tacitus; and, after seven years residence there, returned to Britain, in A. D. 57, according to the Triad. He was accompanied by three teachers of Christianity, as we learn from the Cambrian Biography, namely, Arwysth the Old, Cyndaf, and Iliol. Of these, Iliol is expressly said to have been an Israelite (or Jew), and to have converted many of the Britons. Cyllin the son, and Eigen the daughter of Caractacus, are also recorded to have been Christians. Eigen, in particular, is noted as the first female Saint among the Britons. Mr. Roberts thinks it not improbable, that she was the Claudia of St. Paul, (2 Tim. iv. 21.) “ who so far interested herself in improving the literature of her native country, as to send thither the works of the Roman writers.” Usher, Bishop Burgess, Tracts, p. 132.

From Gildas, we may also collect the time employed by Bran and his missionaries in converting the Britons; namely, during the interval of twenty years, between Bran’s return, A. D. 57, and the final conquest of Britain, by Frontinus, A. D. 77. (See Tacitus’ Life of Agricola, c. 17, 18.) This is more credible than the contracted limit of three years, from the return of Bran, till the defeat of Boadicea, A. D. 61, according to the conjecture of Bishop Burgess, Tracts, p. 23.

But who converted Bran and his associates to Christianity, at Rome? It could not possibly be St. Paul himself; whose epistle to the Romans, A. D. 58, was written from the east, the year after Bran’s return home. The epistle itself, however, furnishes a satisfactory clue to the solution of the question.—Among the Saints whom the Apostle salutes, then resident at Rome, —the leaders are “Priscilla and Aquila, and the Church in their house:” who, for their zeal and success in propagating the Gospel, were “entitled to the thanks of St. Paul himself, and of all the Churches of the Gentiles.” And they appear to have been settled at Rome, for some time, as the Apostle’s fellow-labourers in Christ,” Rom. xvi. 3—5, at Rome, as they had been before at Corinth, Acts xviii. 2, 18; and at Ephesus, Acts xviii. 24—26. It is remarkable, that Priscilla is usually ranked before her husband Aquila, in all but the first of the foregoing passages, and also, 2 Tim. iv. 19.; probably as being more zealous and successful than her husband in making proselytes.

And accordingly, we find some illustrious converts among the Roman ladies, noticed at this very season by Tacitus. He records the trial of a noble British matron (Pomponia Græcina, the wife of Aulus Plautius, the Roman proprætor in Britain; who obtained an ovation, (or inferior triumph) on his return to Rome, A. D. 57. “This distinguished woman (insignis fœmina) was arraigned on account of the foreign superstition, [as Christianity was then styled at Rome,] and permitted to be tried by her husband, according to ancient custom. He therefore, in the presence of her relations, tried her cause, in which her life and character were at stake, and pronounced her innocent." Annal. xiii. 32. This celebrated trial, in which other Christian converts at Rome might naturally have been implicated, happened in the year A. D. 57; and the news of it might easily have reached St. Paul in Syria, at the time he wrote his epistle to the Romans, A. D. 58; and if so, we find therein a marked allusion to this very trial, in his warm and affectionate congratulation to the Saints at Rome: "I thank my God, through Jesus Christ, for you all, that your faith is spoken of throughout the whole world." Rom. i. 8.—From Britain, to Syria. Can there possibly be a stronger confirmation, from internal evidence, than this incidental circumstance, to confirm the date A. D. 58, assigned to the Epistle to the Romans, in Hales' Chronology?—Surely, Bishop Burgess can no longer object thereto.

From the foregoing chain of evidence we seem authorized to infer, that the founders of the Gentile Church at Rome, were Priscilla, and Aquila; and that among the most distinguished of their disciples, were Pomponia Græcina, Bran, and his associates, who planted the Gospel in Britain, from A. D. 57, to A. D. 77.

The second of the blessed kings of Britain, according to the Triad 35, was St. Lleirwig, Lles, or Lucius, the son of Cocl, the grandson of St.

Cylin, and the great grandson of Caractacus. He was surnamed Lleufor Mawr, “the great scholar,” and built the Church of Llandaff, the first in Britain. He granted constitutional privileges to the Christians, and established the validity of their oaths, [when they swore on the Gospels, according to their custom.] He, therefore, may justly be considered as the establisher of Christianity in Britain.

Various have been the dates assigned to his reign. The monks of Llandaff, in their zeal to promote the credit and the interest of the Church and See of Rome, attribute the conversion of Lles or Lucius, to sundry popes, Euaristus, A. D. 100; Alexander I. A. D. 109; or Eleutherus, A. D. 177: but the two former are rejected by his pedigree; for if he was the great-grandson of Caractacus, he most probably flourished a century after him. The prevailing report, that he died A. D. 181, is highly probable, on Chronological grounds. And if so, he was contemporary with Eleutherus. That an intimate connexion, indeed, subsisted between the British Church, and the primitive Church at Rome, from which it was descended, is perfectly natural; but if the letter said to be written by Eleutherus to Lucius be genuine, (and it never has been disproved) the popes of that early age made no pretensions to universal supremacy over the sister Churches. This early Bishop of Rome congratulates the British monarch, “for establishing the Church in Britain;” and he styles Lucius, “the Vicar of Christ in his own dominions; whose bounden duty it was, to preserve his subjects, and the Church, in the unity of the Faith and Law of Christ.” Thus candidly and freely acknowledging the absolute independence of this prince and his Church upon the Church and See of Rome; and giving Lucius the title of Vicar of Christ, which was constantly retained by the British kings, and their successors, the Saxon, down to William the Conqueror; but afterwards usurped by the Popes.

The querulous Gildas confirms the foregoing account of the establishment of Christianity in Britain, immediately after his account of its introduction.

Quæ (præcepta Christi,) licet ab incolis tepidè suscepta sunt, apud quosdam tamen integrè, et alios minus, usque ad Diocletiani tempora permansere.—“The precepts of Christ, though warmly received by the natives at first, continued to be observed in various degrees; by some entirely, by others partially, until the times of Diocletian's persecution,” A. D. 303-313,—the last of the Ten Roman persecutions, but the first in which the British Church was molested for their religion. Usher Britann. Eccl. Antiq. p. 141. For hitherto, it had been the policy of the Roman Government rather to favour Chris- tianity in opposition to Druidism; which, from its inveterate hostility to the Roman yoke, was persecuted with unrelenting severity; and an edict was actually issued for its extirpation; as may be seen in Archbishop Parker's collection.

It is the peculiar glory of Britain to have given birth to the first Christian emperor of the Romans, Constantine the Great. His father, Constantius, married Tiboen, the daughter of Coel Godhebog, king of Britain, or the pious and munificent empress Helena, as she was called by the Roman writers, the mother of Constantine. And Constantius was first proclaimed emperor, at York, by the Roman army serving in Britain. Under Constantine the Great, the British Church was highly favoured, and enjoyed distinguished privileges. The Synod at Arles in Gaul, which he summoned A. D. 314, was attended by three British prelates; Ivor, of York; Restitutus, of London; and Adelphius, of Caerleon. The Council of Nice, A. D. 325, was also attended by the British prelates; and shortly after, the British Church expressed their formal approbation of the Nicene Creed, in a letter to Athanasius and the Alexandrine Bishops. They attended the Council of Arminium or Rimini, A. D. 359. And two years after they magnanimously refused the emperor Constantius's offer of a maintenance, wishing to support their independence upon any foreign power. See Tyrrel's History of England, p. 90; Usher, Eccles. Brit. pp. 173—192; Sillingfleet, Orig. Brit. p. 74, 89, 135.—Cyneddon the Great, grandson of Coel Godhebog, who died A. D. 389, is said in the Triads to have been the first British king, who endowed the Church with lands. One of his sons founded the Abbey of Glastonbury.

These were the halcyon days of the British Church; under the fostering protection of the Christian emperors, it enjoyed temporal prosperity. But when the Roman empire fell a prey to the barbarous hordes of the Huns, Goths, and Vandals; whose repeated invasions and dreadful ravages at length compelled the emperors to withdraw their troops from the Island, for home defence, A. D. 411, the year after, Rome was taken by the Goths, and soon after to abdicate the Island. Thus the Britons recovered their liberty from the Roman domination.

Their emancipation is thus expressed in the British Triads:—“The third oppression was that of the Cæsarians; who harassed the Island for more than four hundred years, [from Julius Cæsar’s invasion] till their return to Rome, to oppose the irruption of the black horde; from whence they never returned to this Island. Nor did any of them remain behind, in the island, save the women and little children under nine years of age; and these became Cymry, [Cambri, or Britons.] Triad 3.

The northern Huns of the Crimea, who ravaged Europe, are here denominated the black horde, from their swarthy complexions; by which they were distinguished from the Weise Gotben, Visigoths, or “White Goths;” who invaded the eastern empire and Persia: as we learn from De Guigne’s Historiegen, des Huns, Vol. II. p. 325, in Roberts’ early history of the Cymry, or ancient Britons, pp. 122, 123.

But the Britons did not long enjoy the blessings of liberty and independence. They were constantly harassed by their turbulent neighbours, the Picts and the Scots. The Picts seem to have been originally “a Scythian colony who came from Scandinavia, across the Northern Sea,” as we learn from Triad 7. And from several of the early writers, Adso, Prosper, &c. we learn that Ireland was called Scotia major; and Albania, or Scotland, Scotia minor, from an early colony of the Milesians, or Irish Scoti, who settled at Dalriede in Scotland; and uniting with the Caledonian Picts, and being constantly recruited by fresh emigrations from Ireland, at length gave their name to the entire region, of which, at first, they occupied only a small corner.

The Picts and Scots, no longer restrained by the Roman arms, so harassed the miserable Britons, in their weakened state, after they had sent over the flower of their youth to assist the Roman emperors against the Huns and the Goths; that in an evil hour they invited the Saxons to their aid, against their troublesome neighbours. At first the Saxons, with a considerable force under Hengist, came to their assistance; but afterwards turned their arms against their employers, and gradually subdued the Britons themselves; and drove them, at length, into the rugged and mountainous district of Wales.

During this disastrous and turbulent period of war and oppression by their neighbours, the Britons were governed by the following dynasty of their native Princes. See Sir Isaac Newton on Daniel, p. 58—61.

Vortigern . A. D. 425	Vortiporeus . A. D. 578
Aurelius Ambrosius 466	Malga . . . . . 581
Uther Pendragon 498	Careticus . . . . . 586
Arthur . . . . . 508	Cadwan . . . . . 613
Constantine . . . . 542	Cadwalin . . . . , 635
Aurelius Cunanus 545	Cadwalader . . . 676

About fourteen years after the abdication of the Romans, Vortigern first assumed the government, and was afterwards appointed king of Britain, A. D. 448. He unwisely called in the Saxons to his assistance, against the Picts and Scots, A. D. 449. The Saxons first established themselves in Kent, A. D. 457; and by degrees founded the other kingdoms of the Saxon Heptarchy. Vortigern was slain, at length, by Aurelius Ambrosius, who obtained the crown, Aurelius was succeeded by his brother Uther Pendragon; and Uther, by his son, the celebrated Arthur, so famed for his military exploits. He defeated the Saxons in no less than twelve battles; the last and bloodiest of which, was fought at Badon hill, A. D. 530, and gave the Britons some respite. Constantine, Duke of Cornwall, succeeded his uncle Arthur. But in the reign of his successor, Aurelius Cunanus, the Saxons at length succeeded in driving the Britons out of England, into Wales, A. D. 577. And about a century after, finally subdued them, A. D. 688, in the reign of Kadwalader, after many severe engagements, in which Luthar, king of Kent, and Ethelwold king of the West Saxons, were slain. Kadwalader was the last of the three blessed kings, in the Triad before mentioned; who was sainted, because “he granted the privilege of his land, and all his property, to the Faithful; who fled from the infidel Saxons, and from the unbrotherly ones, (or unconverted Britons) who sought to slay them;” and gave them an asylum in his territories.

After his defeat, Kadwalader retired for refuge to his cousin Alan king of Armorica. The monkish writers say that he went to Rome, turned monk, and died there. But the other account is more probable. He was, however, a pious prince, and built the church of Llan Kadwalader, as noticed by Rowland, p. 188, 189. His posterity succeeded him, as Princes of Wales, down to Rodric the Great, who reigned over all Wales, A. D. 843.

Notwithstanding the wars and troubles of this dynasty, the spleenetic representations of Gildas of the vices of the Britons, and the persecutions of the Saxons, Learning and Religion both seem to have maintained their ground in Britain. The Pelagian Heresy, which denied Original Sin, introduced, about A. D. 405, by Pelagius a British monk, was checked by Germanus; who, at the request of the British Divines, came over for that purpose, from the Gallican Church. Germanus and Lupus appointed Dubricius, Archbishop of the Church in Britain, A. D. 530; Mauritius a British Bishop was present at the Council of Tours, A. D. 461. And Paulinus, a scholar of Germanus, settled in the isle of Wight, about A. D. 484, and devoted himself to the study of Sacred Literature. Among his pupils were Dewy of Mynin, or David of Meneva, or St. David's; Teilo or Teilavus; and Padarn, or Paternus. Of whom the first founded a collegiate monastery at St. David's; the second, another, at Llandaff; and the third, at Llanbadarn. They all went on a pilgrimage to Jerusalem together, and were honourably received by the Patriarch there; who gave them appropriate gifts: to Paternus, for his fine singing, a pastoral staff, and a choral cap of the richest silk; to David, for performing the service more plainly than the rest, a rich altar of unknown materials ; and to Teilo, “ a curious bell, which sounded every hour, without being touched.” (i. e. a watch or clock) as recorded in the book of Llandaff. See Robert's Appendix. And the fame of these Pilgrims is thus celebrated in Triad 19. “ The three blessed guests of Britain, were Dewi, Padarn, and Teilo. They were so called, because they visited the houses of rich and poor, native and foreign ; accepting neither money, nor meat, nor drink ; but teaching the Christian Faith to every one without fee or reward. On the contrary, they distributed money, food, and clothing to the poor.”

Such was the pure and primitive Religion, and discipline that prevailed among the Britons for the first five centuries. In the sixth, and seventh, they strenuously opposed the errors and corruptions, and usurpations of the Church and See of Rome, when attempted to be introduced by the emissaries of Pope Gregory I. or the Great, Austin the Abbot, and his associates ; as shall be shown in the sequel.

SECTION III.

INTRODUCTION AND ESTABLISHMENT OF CHRISTIANITY IN IRELAND.

ALTHOUGH Ireland was never invaded by the Romans, it soon attracted their notice, after they had established themselves in Britain; and they formed plans for its subjugation likewise; which were frustrated only by the irruption of the Northern Horde, which furnished more than sufficient employment for their troops at home. This we learn from Tacitus, in his Life of Agricola, c. 23, 24.

He there informs us, that Agricola, having driven the enemy, in his third campaign, A.D. 80, into Caledonia, beyond Clota and Bodotria, or the rivers Clyde and Forth, as it were into another island, spent his fourth campaign, A.D. 81, in securing his conquests, by a chain of forts, stretching across the narrow isthmus, of not more than thirty miles across; beginning at Dunbarton, westward, and extending eastward to Arthur's Oven, near the firth of Forth; the ruins of which are described in Gordon's Itinerary, p. 20, 21: In his fifth campaign, A.D. 82, Agricola crossed the æstuary of the Clyde, or gulph of Dunbarton, in the first Roman vessel ever seen in those seas. In the mean time, his army marched over the isthmus, probably near Dunbarton, and after several successful engagements, making a rapid progress through Argyleshire, he advanced to the sea coast, in sight of Ireland; which he occupied with a body of troops, rather with a view to future conquest there, than from any fear of being attacked from thence. He saw, that Ireland, lying midway between Britain and Spain *, and convenient to the Gallic sea, if united with them, would compose the most powerful part of the Roman empire, by their great mutual advantages of commercial intercourse. Ireland, Tacitus observes, is less than Britain, but larger than any of the islands in the Mediterranean sea. Its soil and climate, the genius and manners of the natives, differ not much from Britain; its coasts and harbours, however, are better known to [foreign] traders and merchants, [than those of Britain †.] After this description of the country, * Medio inter Britanniam et Hispaniam sita.—This is inaccurate; for Ireland is much nearer Britain than Spain, and shows how ignorant the Romans were of that island, even in Tacitus's time.

† Solum cœlumque et ingenia cultusque hominum haud multum a Britannia differunt: melius aditus portusque per commercia et negociatores cogniti. Brotier, in his notes, supplies the ellipsis, by [quam interiora]; intimating, that he relates, that one of their petty kings having been expelled in a domestic sedition, was kindly

---

the coasts and harbours of Ireland were better known to merchants in general, than the interior parts. But this is a truism. It is better supplied here in the text, according to the ingenious interpretation of Dr. O'Conor:—Tacito testante, maritima Hiberniae, negotiatoribus notiora esse quam Britanniae: id certe, non de negotiatoribus Romanis, quorum nulla erant cum Hibernis commercia, sed de alienis dictum esse; ipsa Taciti de Hibernia ignorantia demonstrat. Rerum Hibernicarum Scriptores Antiqui, Vol. I. Proleg. I. p. 45.

These foreign merchants were the Phœnicians, Carthaginians, Spaniards, and Grecians, who, from the earliest times, carried on a considerable commerce with the British isles, for tin especially, and other articles; and gave them in exchange many curious and valuable commodities, in gold and silver utensils, linens, cloths, dyes, purple, &c. as appears from the gold and silver ingots, double-headed pateræ, or censers for incense, bracelets, necklaces, diadems, &c. of considerable value, which have been repeatedly found from time to time in the deepest bogs, and in the sacred caves and caverns, or cemetries throughout Ireland; and especially in the Southern parts, first visited by the Phœnicians. See Gen. Vallancey's Collectanea de Rebus Hibernicis, Vol. VI. Part I. and II.

The Phœnicians studiously concealed the route of this lucrative traffic from the Greeks, and Romans, as long as they could. Strabo relates, that the Romans once followed a Phœnician vessel bound from Gades to the British isles, in order to discover these marts themselves: but the captain of the vessel, jealous of their design, purposely ran his ship on received by Agricola, and under the appearance of friendship was retained for future service, on a favourable occasion. I have often, says Tacitus, heard from him, that Ireland might be subdued, and held by a single legion and a moderate auxiliary force: And that this would further tend to keep Britain in awe, if the Roman arms prevailed every where, and liberty was removed, as it were, out of sight. But Agricola, having been re-called to Rome, in A.D. 85, by Domitian, jealous of his military fame after the entire reduction of Britain, the opportunity of invading Ireland, at that time, was lost, and never occurred again.

This curious account of Tacitus is confirmed by the Irish Annals. From them we learn, that this refugee Chieftain was no other than the celebrated Tuathal, surnamed Teashtmar, and by a Roman name, Bonaventura, the son of Fiacha V. of the race of Heremon, who succeeded to the monarchy of Ireland in A.D. 73. Fiacha, in the seventh year of his reign, A.D. 80, was treacherously massacred at a public banquet in Connaught, with his principal nobility of the Milesian race, by the plebeian Firbolgs, (Viri Belgæ,) headed a shoal, in order to lead his followers into the same disaster. And having returned home after his shipwreck, he was repaid out of the public treasury, for the loss of his cargo; Proleg. I. p. 240.

by Cairbre, who usurped the throne. Fortunately, the young prince Tuathal escaped their fury, and fled for refuge to his grandfather by the mother's side, the king of the Picts in Albania, or Caledonia. There, he was naturally induced to apply to the Roman power for aid to re-instate him in his dominions. And, perhaps, to persuade Agricola the more readily to espouse his cause, he might have represented the facility of subduing, and even retaining, Ireland, with so small a force, upon the prospect of being powerfully supported by the Irish loyalists against the rebels; otherwise, the boast would be absurd: for, at this very time, the army, employed by Agricola against the Caledonians alone, consisted of near 30,000 men, namely, three Roman Legions, 8,000 auxiliary Britons, and 3,000 cavalry. And, accordingly, when Tuathal's application for aid at Rome, whither he attended Agricola, failed, (and whom the historian Tacitus, son-in-law to Agricola, might often have seen and conversed with) Tuathal, at length, was re-called by his adherents; the Irish nation being weary of the tyranny of Cairbre and his successors, and harassed by civil wars between the contending nobles and plebeians; and thus, without any foreign aid, he defeated the rebels, and recovered his crown, A.D. 95.

Tuathal appears to have been a wise and politic prince, who profited by his Roman education, under the accomplished Agricola. On his accession, he assembled the general assembly of the Irish States; revived the ancient constitutions of the realm, and restored the refugees to their estates, of which they had been dispossessed by the rebels during the usurpation. After a long and turbulent reign of thirty years, Tuathal was defeated, and slain by Mal, king of Ulster, who succeeded him as monarch of Ireland, A.D. 125. Mac Geoghegan's Histoire de l'Irlande, p. 123—120.

The knowledge of Christianity was early introduced into Ireland also. From the joint evidence of Franciscus Irenicus, Constantine Ghinius, Adso, &c., writers of the tenth and eleventh centuries, noticed in Ussher's Primordia, p. 738—747, we learn, that an Irishman of noble family, called Mansuetus by his Christian name, became a disciple of St. Peter; who sent him to preach the gospel in Lorraine; where he was appointed the first bishop of Toul; and was afterwards canonized in the eleventh century by Pope Leo IX. who had been himself bishop of that See. His life was written, about the same time, by Adso, the Abbot, who prefixed the following verses to the work :

Protulerat quondam generosum Scotia natum
Mansuetum. —————

Inclyta Mansueti claris natalibus orti
 Progenies, titulis fulget in orbe suis :
Insula Christieolas gestabat Hibernia gentes,
 Unde genus traxit, et satus unde fuit.

This prevailing tradition tends to support St. Peter's visit to Spain, in St. Paul's stead; while it derives confirmation from thence, in turn. We know that a considerable intercourse subsisted of old, between the Spains and Ireland; and, at this day, the marked resemblance of the natives of the South of Ireland to the Spaniards, in dark complexions, hair, and dress, strongly indicates their descent. Supposing, then, that St. Peter preached the gospel in Spain, about A. D. 64, it is by no means improbable, that among his converts might be found some Irish traders or travellers; of whom he might have sent the most zealous and intelligent, to supply his place, and propagate the gospel in the adjoining region of Gaul, which he had not time to visit in person, previous to his return, and martyrdom at Rome, A.D. 65. Nor is it likely, that during his pious labours in Lorraine, Mansuetus neglected his native country. We seem warranted, therefore, to conclude, that Christianity might have been introduced into Ireland, by the disciples of Mansuetus, not long after his own conversion. And the foregoing verses of Adso indicate this; in which, "the posterity of Mansuetus are represented as flourishing in Scotia, or Hibernia; and the Christian worship, as prevailing among the tribes of his native country."

That Christianity indeed obtained an early footing in Ireland, we may collect, from Tertul- ian's testimony, p. 73, that "even the regions of the Britons, inaccessible to the Romans, were converted to CHRIST in his time, (about the end of the second century.) For Ireland was then the only one of the British isles, into which the Roman arms had not penetrated.

From the Irish Annals, about A.D. 400, it further appears, that several Christian Churches had been founded in the South of Ireland, by the Irish Saints, Kieran, Ailbe, Declan, and Ibar; viz. at Ardmore and Lismore and Emly, in Munster; and at Ossory, and Beg-Erin, in Leinster; but great part of the South, and the whole of the North and West provinces were still pagan, at that period.

How early and closely a connexion subsisted between the British and Irish Churches, may appear from the prevalence in both, of the noted Pelagian heresy, denying the doctrine of Original Sin, and the necessity of Divine Grace, soon after it was first broached, in A.D. 405. Pelagius, its author, was a British monk, of Bangor, in Wales, who had been the disciple of Faustus the Manichean; and his principal associate was Ceallagh, or Celestius, a Scot, or Irishman, of noble family, who propagated his master's tenets with great ability and success. Their doctrine was received at Rome, at first, favourably, by Pope Zosimus, A.D. 417, though afterwards rejected; and it was first condemned in the Council of Ephesus, A.D. 418. When the Goths invaded Italy, and approached Rome, Pelagius and Celestius retreated to Africa. From thence, Pelagius proceeded to Jerusalem, where he was patronized by the Patriarch John; but Celestius remained behind, and was violently opposed by the Latin Fathers, Augustine, Jerome, Orosius, &c. And this controversy long disturbed the peace of the Eastern and Western Churches ; and seems to be revived by the Socinians, and Sabellian-Unitarians of the present age. Jerome inveighs against it with great bitterness, as the pultis Scotorum, “the pottage of the Irish*.” He compares

* The vehemence of Jerome's zeal against those Irish heretics transported him to brand the whole nation as cannibals, in the following strange passage. Libro Secundo contra Jovianum:

Quid loquar de cæteris nationibus [anthropophagis], cum ipse adolescentulus, in Galliâ viderem Scotos, gentem Britannicam; humanis vesci carnibus, et cum per sylvas porcorum greges et armentorum pecudumque reperirent, pastorum nates, fæminarumque papillas abscindere, solitos, et eas solas delicias arbitrari !

“ Why need I speak of other [cannibal] nations, when I myself, then a little boy, in Gaul, saw the Scots, a British nation; who are accustomed to feed on human flesh, and when they find herds of swine, of cattle, and of sheep, in the woods, to cut off the buttocks of the herdsmen, and also the paps of women, and to count them their chief dainties.”

Here, Jerom does not say, (as usually misunderstood, and

Pelagius to Pluto, the king of Hell, and Celestius to his dog Cerberus; whom he styles “one of the disciples of Pelagius, or rather his master; and the leader of the whole host.” Orosius calls Pelagius “Goliah, most highly inflated with pride, attended by Celestius, as his armour-bearer, who supplies all the weapons of brass and iron.” And Augustine charges “Pelagius with being more cunning,” but admits, that “Celestius was more open;” he acknowledges his genius and eloquence; and he gives some extracts from the Definitiones, or Breves Ratiocinationes of Celestius, which even by Dr. O’Conor, from mispunctuation of the passage, Cum — viderem Scotos, gentem Britannicam, humanis vesci carnibus ?)—that “he actually saw these Scoti feeding on human flesh,” (in which case, the original should be vescentes; not the infinitive, vesci, which is governed by the following participle solitos.) He only says, that in his childhood, he saw some of that nation in Gaul; and then applies to them the invidious remark of the credulous Pliny the elder, touching the Scythians:—esse Scythurum genera, et quidem plura, quæ corporibus humanis vescerentur. “That there are tribes of Scythians, and several, indeed, which feed on human bodies.” Lib. vii. c. 2.—Because the Scoti were *Scytha*e, or of Scythian origin, Jerom instantly transferred to them this idle tale of Pliny; who classes the Scythians in general among the fabulous Cyclops and Læstrygons, the fictitious Arimaspians, Gorgons, and Harpies of the poets, Homer, &c. See O’Conor Rerum Hibernicarum Scriptores Antiqui. Vol. I. Prol. I. p. 74, 75.

---

show that he was a very acute disputant, well versed in the Socratic method of argument.*

“ Before all things,” said he, “ the person who denies that man can be without sin, should be questioned, What is sin? Can it be avoided, or not? If it cannot be avoided, it is not sin; if it can, surely a man may be without sin, that may be avoided: for neither reason nor justice admit, that what can by no means be avoided, should be called sin.”

“ Further, we are to inquire whether sin be voluntary, or necessary? if necessary, it is not sin; if voluntary, it may be avoided.”

“ God certainly is just: this is undeniable. But * Ante omnia interrogandus est qui negat hominem sine peccato esse posse, quid sit peccatum? Quod vitari potest, necne? — Si quod vitari non potest, peccatum non est; si quod vitari potest, potest homo sine peccato esse quod vitari potest. Nulla enim ratio vel justitia patitur saltem dici peccatum quod vitari nullo modo potest.

Iterum quærendum est: peccatum voluntatis, an necessitatis est? si necessitatis est, peccatum non est; si voluntatis est, vitari potest.

Et hoc dicendum est: certe justus est Deus; negari enim nou potest. Imputat autem Deus homini omne peccatum; et hoc quoque confitendum puto, quia neque peccatum est, quicquid non imputatur in peccatum; et si est aliquod peccatum quod vitari non possit, quomodo justus Deus dicitur, si imputari cuiquam creditur quod vitari non possit? Proleg. I. p. 73.

God imputes to man every sin ; and this, I think, must be admitted, that whatever is not imputed as sin, is not sin. And if there be any sin that cannot be avoided, how can God be called just, if we believe that what cannot be avoided should be imputed to any one ?”

The ablest opponent, perhaps, to be found of this arrogant and presumptuous heresy, was the countryman and contemporary of Celestius, the celebrated Sedulius; who flourished in the reign of Theodosius the Great, about A. D. 430, to whom he addressed a latin poem. He is thus described by Trithemius; see Usher's Primordia, p. 769.

“ Sedulius the presbyter was a Scot, (or Irish) by nation. In his youth he was a disciple of Hildebert archbishop of the Scoti. He was well versed in the Holy Scriptures, and skilled in profane learning; he excelled both in poetry and prose. Quitting Scotia through love of literature, he went into France, and travelled through Italy, Asia, and Achaia; from whence, at last, he returned to Rome, and was greatly admired for his wonderful erudition. He wrote several works in verse and prose. Among the latter, a comment on St. Paul’s Epistles, entitled, Sedulii Scoti Hibernensis, in omnes epistolas Pauli collectaneum, Basil, A. D. 1528. Of this excellent work several valuable extracts are adduced by primate Usher in his Religion of the ancient Irish and British, Chap. 2. &c.

He thus exposes the sophistical arguments of Cælestius on Free-will.*

* 1. Præcedit bona voluntas hominis multa Dei dona, sed non omnia; quæ autem non præcedit ipsa, in eis est et ipsa. Nam utrumque legitur in sanctis eloquiis, “et misericordia ejus præveniet me,” “et misericordia ejus subsequetur me;” nolentem prævenit, ut velit; volentem subsequitur, ne frustra velit. Cur enim admonemur, “petere ut accipiamus,” nisi ut ab illo fiat quod velimus? Sedul. in Rom. ix.

2. Nullus electus est ita magnus quem Diabolus non audeat accusare, nisi illum solum qui “peccatum non fecit;” qui et dicebat, “nunc venit princeps hujus mundi, et in me nihil invenit.” Sedul. in Rom. viii.—“Non est qui facit bonum;” hoc est perfectum et integrum bonum. Sedul. in Rom. iii. Ad hoc nos elegit [Deus], ut essemus sancti et immaculati in futurâ vitâ; quoniam “Ecclesia Christi non habebit maculam neque rugam:” licet, etiam in præsenti vitâ, justi et sancti et immaculati, quamvis non ex toto, tamen ex parte, non inconvenienter dici possunt. Sedul. in Ephes. i. Non enim jam “regnat peccatum in eorum mortali corpore, ad obediendum desideriis ejus,” quamvis habitat in eodem mortali corpore peccatum; nondum extincto impetu consuetudinis naturalis quâ mortaliter nati sumus, et ex propriis vitæ nostræ: cum et nos ipsi peccando auximus quod ab origine peccati humani damnationis trahebamus. in Ephes. v.

3. Vocatione Dei, non merito facti. In Rom. i. Secundum virtutem est quæ operatur in nobis, non secundum merita nostra. In Ephes. iii. Sciendum est, quia omne quod habent homines a Deo, gratiâ est, nihil enim ex debito habent. In Rom. xvi.

1. “Man’s good will precedes many gifts of God, but not all; and of those which it does not precede, itself is one. Both [preventing and furthering grace] are recorded in Holy Writ: ‘His mercy shall go before me,’ [Psal. lix. 10,] and ‘His mercy shall follow me,’ [Psal. xxiii. 6.] It prevents the unwilling, that he may will; and it furthers the willing, that he may not will in vain. For why are we admonished to ‘ask that we may receive,’ [Matt. vii. 7, 8,] unless that what we will may be done by Him, through whose operation, we so willed?” In Rom. ix.

The necessity of assisting grace, he further shews, from the imperfect obedience even of the best men.

2. “There is none of the elect, though ever so great, whom the Devil dares not to accuse, but Him alone ‘who did no sin,’ [1 Pet. ii. 22,] and who also said, ‘Now cometh the prince of this world, and in me findeth nothing [amiss],’ John xiv. 30,] in Rom. vii.—‘There is none that doeth good, that is to say, perfect and entire good.’ In Rom. iii.—“God’s elect shall be perfectly holy and spotless in the life to come; where ‘the Church of Christ shall have no spot nor wrinkle,’ [Ephes. v. 27,] however, even in the present life, they may not improperly be called just, and holy, and spotless, though not entirely, but partly. In Ephes. i.—‘Then only shall the just man be altogether without sin, when there shall be no law in his members warring against the law of his mind, [Rom. vii. 23 ;] for though ‘sin reign not now in their mortal body,’ [Rom. vi. 12,] yet ‘sin dwells in the same mortal body,’ [Rom. vii. 17,] the force of that natural custom not being extinguished, which we derived from our mortal origin, and increased by our actual transgressions.” In Ephes. v.

The sufficiency of God’s grace to supply the deficiency of human merit, he thus states :—

3. “ We are Saints by the calling of God, not by the merit of our conduct : for ‘GOD is able to do exceeding abundantly, above what we ask or think ; according to the power that worketh in us,’ [Ephes. iii. 20,] not according to our merits,” in Ephes. iii.—for we must know, that whatever men have of God, is of grace ; because, ‘they have nothing of debt,’ [Rom. iv. 4 ; xi. 6,] in Rom. xvi.

How profoundly skilled, indeed, Sedulius was in the abstruse doctrines of Predestination, Grace, Free Will, Faith, Works, Justification, and Sanctification, discussed in St. Paul’s epistles, may be inferred from the clearness, conciseness, and appositeness of the foregoing remarks ; critically comparing Scripture with itself, according to the Analogy of Faith. He was, indeed, an honour to his country, and a prime luminary of the orthodox Church, in his age ; fully on a par with the most celebrated of his contemporaries, Jerome,

Augustine, &c.; and his Collectaneum is worthy of re-publication, as a standard comment on St. Paul's epistles, even at the present day. Surely the country that produced such scholars as Celestius and Sedulius, at that early period, could not be so "barbarous," as misrepresented by Jerome, Prosper Aquitanus, &c.

Pelagianism was early repressed in the British isles. The celebrated Germanus and Lupus were expressly invited by the British divines, to assist at the Synod of Verulam, held at St. Alban's, A.D. 446, where they confuted the Pelagian tenets. These, upon their revival afterwards, were refuted by St. David, of Mynin, or Menevia, at the synod of Brefi, in Wales, A.D. 519, and occasionally, by their successors. Asser, of Menevia, the Historian of King Alfred, A.D. 893, thus excellently remarks *, that "GOD is the inciter of all good wills, and also the most bountiful Provider, that the good things desired may be had; for He would never incite any one to will well, unless He also bountifully supplied that which every one well and justly desires to obtain."

* Omnium bonarum voluntatum instigator; necnon etiam ut habeantur bona desiderata largissimus administrator; neque enim bene velle aliquem instigaret, nisi et hoc, quod bene et juste quisque habere desiderat, largiter administrarent.
Asser. de rebus gestis Alfridi R.

It was repressed, also, from time to time, in Ireland, by St. Patrick, his disciples, and their successors. The learned Claudius Scotus, about A.D. 815, one of the reputed founders of the University of Paris, in his excellent Commentary on the New Testament, of which the manuscripts are preserved in Bennet's College, and Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, declares, “ It is evident to all the wise, though contradicted by heretics, that no one can live upon earth, without the stain of some sin *.”

The missions of Germanus and Lupus to Britain, and of Palladius and Patrick to Ireland, are ascribed by Prosper of Aquitain, who died about A.D. 456, in his Chronicle, and by his continuators, Marianus Scotus, and Sigebert, to the pious zeal of Pope Celestine, “ to keep the Roman island [Britain] Catholic, [or orthodox,] and to make the Barbarian, [Ireland,] Christian †.”

* Quia (quod omnibus sapientibus patet, licet hæretici contradicant) nemo est, qui sine ad tactu alicujus peccati vivere possit. Claud. Lib. 2, in Matt.

† 1. Prosper's testimony is contained in the following passages :

In Chronico, Anni 429. Agricola Pelagianus, Severiani Episcopi Pelagi filius, ecclesias Britanniae dogmatis sui insinuatione corrupti; sed ad actionem Palladii diaconi, Papa Cælestinus, Germanum Antisiodorensem (Auxerre) episcopum, vice suâ, mittit, et deturbatis hæreticis, Britannos ad Catholicam fidem dirigit.

In Chronico An. 431. Ad Scotos in Christum credentes,

But the interference of Pope Celestine in these missions may well be questioned, and denied, for the following reasons :

1. The Monkish writers in general, through ordinatur a Papa Cælestino Palladius, et primus episcopus mittitur.

---

In Libro contra Collatorem. Nec segniore curâ (Cælestinus) ab hoc morbo Pelagiano Britanniæ liberavit.—Et ordinato Scotis episcopo, dum Romanam insulam [Britanniam] studet servare Catholicam, fecit etiam barbarem, [Hiberniam,] Christianam.

2. Marianus Scotus, who became a monk at Cologne, A.D. 1056, thus continues Prosper's account :

In Chronico A.D. 432. Ad Scotos in Christum credentes ordinatus a Papa Cælestino Palladius primus episcopus missus est. Post ipsum, S. Patricius. Fuit genere Brito, a Papa Cælestino consecratus, et ad Archiepiscopatum Hibernensem mittitur. Ibi, per annos XL. (verius LX.) signis atque mirabilibus prædicans, totam Insulam Hiberniam convertit ad fidem, 3. Sigebert, a French Prior, who died A.D. 1112, thus enlarges both accounts :

Cælestinus Papa ad Scotos in Christum credentes Palladium mittit primum episcopum. Postquam, ad eosdem, ab eodem Cælestino, missus est S. Patricius, genere Brito, filius Conches, sororis S. Martini Turonensis; qui in baptismo quidem dictus est Suchat; a Germano, Magonius; a Cælestino vero Patricius: a quo Archiepiscopus Scotorum ordinatus, per LX. annos, signis, sanctitate, doctrinâ excellens, totam insulam Hiberniam convertit ad Christum.

These authorities are given by O'Conor.—Rerum Hibernicarum, &c. Prol. i. p. 76, 77; Prol. ii. p. 111, their implicit devotion to the See of Rome, took every opportunity of magnifying the influence and jurisdiction of the Church of Rome, over her sister Churches. But Platina, in his Lives of the Popes, takes no notice of these missions, in his History of Celestine. And, indeed, Celestine, during his turbulent Pontificate, A.D. 422-432, when Rome was in possession of the Goths, who overran Italy, could have had little leisure or inclination to attend to the religious concerns of foreign nations, when his own existence and authority were at stake.

2. Palladius is said by Prosper to have instigated Celestine to send Germanus to quell the Pelagian heresy in Britain. But Dupin describes Palladius, as “a friend of Rufinus, a favourer of Pelagius, and an adversary of St. Jerom.”—Such a procedure, therefore, would have been inconsistent with his principles. And St. Patrick himself takes no notice of Celestine; but declares, that “he was ordained Bishop in Ireland*;” and

* Patrick thus begins his Epistle to Coroticus :—

Patricius peccator, indoctus scilicet, Hyperione constitutum episcopum me esse, fateor. Certissime a Deo accepi id quod sum. Inter barbaros itaque habito, proselytus et profuga, ob amorem Dei. Here Patrick expressly asserts, that he was ordained bishop in Ireland, (Hyperione), not for Ireland, (Hyperioni), and ascribes his mission or apostolate to God only, not to the Pope.

expressly ascribes his mission thither to a divine vision, or impulse. In which he is followed by his disciple and panegyrist Fiech, as we shall see in the sequel.

3. None of the succeeding Popes notice Celestine's interference with the Church of Ireland : neither the ambitious Gregory I. A.D. 591, who first attempted to bring the independent British and Irish Churches under his jurisdiction, but in vain ; nor the imperious Hildebrand, or Gregory VII. who freely acknowledged the full establishment of the Irish Church and State in his Brief*, directed to “ Tirlagh, the illustrious king of Ireland, the Archbishops, Bishops, Abbots, Nobles, and Christians inhabiting Ireland,” dated A.D. 1080 ; nor the rapacious Adrian †, who, in his * Terdelnacho inclyto regi Hiberniae, Archiepiscopis, Episcopis, Abbatibus, Proceribus, omnibusque Christianis Hiberniam habitantibus.

+ Adrian's bull is given by Giraldus Cambrensis, Matt. Paris, &c., and lately, by Bishop Burgess, with a corrected Translation. See, also, Leland's History of Ireland, Vol. I. page 8.

The claims of the Church of Rome are thus expressed :—
Sane Hiberniam et omnes Insulas quibus sol justitiae illuxit, et quæ documenta fidei Christianæ acceperunt, ad jus B. Petri et Sacrosanctæ Romanæ Ecclesiæ, (quod tua etiam nobilitas recognoscit,) non est dubium, pertinere.

And the Bull hypocritically exhorts Henry to inculcate morality, and to plant Christianity, (i. e. Popery,) in Ire, bull of A.D. 1156, granted the sovereignty of Ireland to Henry II. of England, upon condition of the payment of Peter's pence in Ireland, which never had been paid before ; alledging the absurd claim, that “Ireland, and all other islands, were under the jurisdiction of St. Peter and the Holy Roman Church.” But is it likely, that these artful and well-informed Pontiffs would have omitted to avail themselves of the apposite and important precedent of Pope Celestine, had they any such to produce ? They did not, because they could not.

St. Patrick's existence, however, and his mission, have been idly impeached as fabulous, by some modern sceptics, Ryves, Maurice, and Ledwich, objecting, 1, the silence of Platina, respecting his mission by Celestine : 2, the absurd, ridiculous, and extravagant miracles ascribed to the Saint, by his later historians, Nennius, Probus, Joceline, and O'Sullivan; each of them outstripping his predecessor in the wildness of their fictions, in proportion as they receded from the fountain head, the simple and sober accounts of St. Patrick himself. Thus, O'Sullivan, the latest, has foisted land. Stude gentem illam bonis moribus informare, et agas, (tam per te, quam per alios, quos ad hoc, fide, verbo, ac vitâ, idoneos esse perspexeris) ut decoretur ibi Ecclesia [Romana,] plantetur et crescat fidei Christianæ Religio.

into his life a long account of St. Patrick's Purgatory; of which, Joceline, Probus, Nennius, and Fiech never heard, and the Saint himself never dreamed.

But to the reality of St. Patrick's existence, and mission, we have the most abundant and satisfactory evidence; resting not solely on written records, but on universal tradition also. A tradition vouched by the many remarkable places that still retain his name from time immemorial, in Great Britain and Ireland. The havens, where he embarked, Port Patrick, and where he landed, Ennis Patrick; the Churches and Monasteries which he founded, or built, Ard Patrick, Down Patrick, Domnach Patrick, &c.; the mountains which he visited, Cruagh Patrick, &c.; the Episcopal Sees which he founded, Ardmagh, Clogher, &c.; and the general persuasion of his successful mission, throughout Christendom; which have furnished employment for upwards of sixty writers of his life; all together indisputably evincing both his existence and his celebrity.

The written records that establish it, are the genuine remains of St. Patrick; 1st, His Confession, or Epistle to the Irish*, giving an account of the leading circumstances of his life and mission; written shortly before his death. It is very obscure, composed in bald Latin, frequently ungrammatical and unintelligible ; but has been evidently corrupted by the ignorance of transcribers, in many places ; and he modestly apologizes for its imperfections, as being not written in his native tongue, but in a foreign language (Latin), the niceties or elegancies of which he never had leisure to study, Confess. Sect. 3 ; but the natural and unaffected simplicity pervading the whole, the profound humility and self-abasement, the ardent piety, zeal and charity that animate it, worthy, indeed, of an Apostle, furnish internal evidence of its authenticity, the most satisfactory and convincing. He wrote also an Epistle to Coroticus, (Charaticus, or Caractacus,) a Gallican Prince, in confederacy with the unconverted Irish, censuring his invasion of Ireland, in the course of which he slew, and carried into captivity multitudes of the Irish Christians ; and deprecating his ill treatment of them in the most tender and affectionate strain of pity and compassion. These Epistles were first published by Ware ; and to Dr. O'Conor we are indebted for a more correct re-publication of them lately, in his elaborate work, Rerum Hibernicarum Scriptores Antiqui, Vol. I., 4to., 1813, Proleg. I., p. 105—113, from two of the oldest Irish MSS., the Cottonian, of 800 years standing, and the Armagh, of 1000.

* St. Patrick's Confession, or Epistle to the Irish, is re-published entire in the Appendix to this Essay, No. III.

Fiech, his disciple, was, after his conversion, appointed by Patrick, Bishop of Sliebhte, or Sletty, a mountainous range in the district of Leix, now the Queen's County, in Leinster; where he built a famous monastery, called Domnach Fiech, after himself; the ruins of which are still subsisting, about a mile Northward of the town of Carlow. Not long after St. Patrick's death, A.D. 493, and early in the sixth century, he wrote a Poetical Hymn, or Panegyric on St. Patrick, in Irish verse; one of the oldest reliques, perhaps, of the Irish language, abounding in antiquated terms, but deservedly admired for its simplicity and elegance, and still more for its orthodoxy, when properly explained. It was first published by Colgan in his Triadis Thaumaturgæ, 1647, or Lives of St. Patrick, Columba, and Bridget, with a Latin translation annexed; and has been recently re-published in the Rerum Hibernicarum, Prol. I., p. 90—96, from one of the most antient Irish MSS. the Donnegal; with a new Latin translation by Dr. O'Conor, amending the old one in several places, where it was either faulty or unintelligible. The original text of the Hymn, and an English translation of O'Conor's Latin version, are given in the Appendix of this Essay, No. IV: both, I trust, will prove more satisfactory to Irish and English Scholars and Divines, than Colgan's Irish text, and the English translation of Patrick Lynch, subjoined to a small Life of St. Patrick, published by Fitzpatrick, Dublin, 1810.

Patrick begins his confession with an account of his country and parentage and captivity, after describing himself in terms of the profoundest abasement and humiliation.

" I Patrick a sinner, the most rustic, and the least of all the faithful, and the most contemptible with most people, had for my father Calpurnius a deacon formerly, the son of Potitus a priest, who was in the village of Banavan, belonging to Tabernia; for he had a cottage in the neighbourhood where I was captured. I was then nearly sixteen years old. But I was ignorant of the true God, and therefore was led away into captivity, with so many thousand men because we departed from God and kept not his commandments, and were disobedient to our priests who admonished us of our salvation; wherefore the Lord brought upon us the anger of his indignation, and dispersed us among many nations even unto the end of the earth; where now my littleness is seen among aliens." Confess. § 1.

Fiech, in his Hymn, states this with some variation.

Patrick was born at Nemthur,
As related in stories;
A youth of sixteen years,
When carried into captivity,
Succat was his name among his own tribes;

Who was his father, be it known :
 He was son of Calphurnius, and Otide,
 Grandson of the Deacon Odisse."

The family name of the Saint was Succat, signifying in Irish, " prosperous in battle," according to the old scholiast on the Hymn about A. D. 570. He was afterwards named Magonius when ordained a deacon ; and finally Patricius, when consecrated a bishop. His mother Otide was otherwise called Conches or Conchessa, the sister of St. Martin, bishop of Tours; and Odisse, his grandfather, is called Potitus by St. Patrick himself: in those early times, before celibacy was imposed upon the Clergy, by the superstition and policy of the modern Church of Rome. He was a North Briton by birth, born A. D. 372, near the village of Banav-en in Tabernia, a district bordering on the western or Irish sea, where the Roman army had formerly encamped, or pitched their " tents " (tabernæ) and therefore within the Roman pale. Fiech calls his birth-place, Nemthur, signifying according to the old scholiast, " the heavenly (or lofty) rock," and the same as Al Cluid, " the rock of Cluid," near Dunbarton. Nemthur is by Patrick Lynch unskilfully rendered " holy Tours," supposing that thur, the latter part of the name, was derived from the Latin Turris, " a tower;" but, as judiciously observed by O'Conor, it seems rather to be of oriental descent (Prol. i. p. 98.) I suppose, from the Hcbrew or Phœnician, תְּשֵׁם Tsur, “a rock,” whence Tur, or the city of Tyre.

After the Britons had sent the flower of their youth to Italy, in the service of the tyrant Maximus, who never returned home, the country was left a defenceless prey to their restless and ruthless neighbours, who, seizing the opportunity, invaded Britain on both sides, the Scoti or pagan Irish, from the west, and the Picts or Caledonians from the north, in A. D. 388, and cruelly ravaged the land. This first devastation is noticed by Gildas,* and lasted for several years, in a succession of annual incursions. During this, Patrick, in his sixteenth year, was carried captive into Ireland, and sold to a petty prince of Dalaradia in the county of Antrim, Milcho and his three brothers, who employed him to take care of their cattle. Hence he was called Cothraig, as serving four families; from Ceathar four, as we learn from Fiech.

* Gildas notices this first devastation in the following terms, O'Conor Prol. i. p. 84.

C. xi. p. 12. Exin Britannia, omni armato militi, militaria busque copiis [destituta], rectoribus linquitur immanibus [nempe Scotis et Pictis]; ingenti juventute spoliata, quæ comitata vestigiis supradicti tyranni (Maximi) domum nunquam ultra rediit; et omnis belli usus ignara penitus, duabus primum gentibus transmarinis vehementer sævis, Sutorum a circione, Pictorum ab aquilone, multos stupet, gemitque per annos.

N. B. The splenetic Gildas Badonicus was probably an Irishman; as will be shewn in the next section.

" His adopted name was Caithraige,
Because he served four tribes."

Patrick thus describes his employment during his servitude. Confession § 5.

" Every day I fed the cattle, and frequently in the day I prayed. My love of God, and my fear of him, increased more and more. My faith was enlarged, and my spirit was strengthened; insomuch that I said in the day full a hundred prayers, and nearly as many in the night. I remained in the woods and on the mountain; and before it was light, I was roused to prayer by snow, frost, and rain; but I felt no inconvenience, nor was there any slothfulness in me, as I now see, because then the spirit burned within me."

Six years he continued in servitude, and thus describes his deliverance in A. D. 394.

" One night in a dream, I heard a voice saying unto me, Thou fastest well, and shalt return quickly to thine own country. Lo, thy ship is ready. It was not nigh, but about two hundred miles off. I never had been there, nor had I any acquaintance there among the people; yet I turned myself to flight, and left the man with whom I had passed six years. So I went in the power of THE LORD, who directed my life to good, fearing nothing, until I came to the ship. And that day in which I arrived, the ship unmoored from her station, and I applied for a passage with them. But it displeased the master, and he answered sharply with indignation, In vain do you wish to go with us. So when I heard this I left them to go back to the hut where I lodged ; and on the way I began to pray, but before I could finish my prayer, I heard one of them crying out loudly after me, Come quickly, for these men call thee; and immediately I returned to them, and they began to say unto me, Come, for we receive thee faithfully ; enter into friendship with us, according to thy desire: so that day I rejected flight, for the fear of God. Nevertheless I hoped that they would say unto me, Come in the faith of Jesus Christ ; because they were gentiles. Thus, I succeeded with them, and immediately we set sail ; and the third day after, we reached land ; and for twenty-eight days we travelled through a desert, and provisions failed them, and we were oppressed with hunger. And one day the master began to say unto me, Christian, what sayest thou ? Thy God is great and all-powerful, why then canst thou not pray for us, since we are in danger of perishing with hunger ? for we can scarcely expect to see any man [to relieve us]. Then I said plainly unto them, Turn ye faithfully, and with all your heart, to THE LORD OUR GOD, for to him nothing is impossible : and [I will pray unto him] to send you food on your way, even to fulness ; for to Him it abounds every where. And with God's help so it happened ; for lo, a herd of swine appeared on the way before our eyes, and many of them they killed. And there they remained two nights, well refreshed, and were relieved with their flesh; for many of them had fainted, and were left half alive by the way. After this, they gave the greatest thanks to God, and I was honoured in their eyes. And from this day forth, they had food in abundance. They also found wild honey, and offered me a share. But one of them said, ‘This is an offering to our God, thanks to him.’ After that, I did not taste it.” Confess. § 6, 7. To this circumstance Fiech alludes:

“The food of the Gentiles he ate not.”

It is remarkable that honey was prohibited to be offered in sacrifice to GOD, Levit. ii. 11; probably, because it was so used by the Heathens, in their sacrifices to their idols.

“The same night,” St. Patrick relates, that he was grievously oppressed with the night-mare, which he, rather superstitiously, considered as “a temptation of Satan;” but that he was relieved at sun-rise by crying out Elias, Elias, with all his might, at the suggestion of the HOLY SPIRIT; when the sun shone upon him brightly, and immediately dispelled all his oppression.” Confess. Sect. 8.

This excepted, there is nothing in the whole simple and unvarnished tale, that exceeds the sober bounds of credibility.

“Again,” proceeds Patrick, “not many years after, I suffered another captivity. And so it was, that the first night of my stay with them, I heard a Divine Response, saying unto me, Thou shalt be two months with them; which so happened, for on the sixtieth night, the LORD delivered me out of their hands.” Confess. Section 9.

This second captivity probably took place during the second devastation of Britain, noticed by Gildas*, after the Roman Legion, sent for the protection of Britain by Aetius, had been withdrawn, A.D. 405, about eleven years after his release from the former captivity; correctly corresponding to his expression “not many years after.” See O’Conor, Prol. i. page 85—87; Prol. ii. page 116, 117.

“A few years after,” continues Patrick; “I was with my parents in Britain, who received me

* The second devastation is thus described by Gildas, after the recall of the Roman Legion sent to their assistance, which successfully repelled the invaders, and slew a great multitude of them.

C. xiii. Illà legatione, cum triumpho magno et gaudio, domum repetente, illi priores inimici, ac quasi Ambrones lupi, profundà fame rabidi, siccis faucibus in ovile transilientes, non comparente pastore, alis remorum, remigumque brachiis, ac velis vento sinuatis, vecti, terminos [i. e. murum Romanum] rumpunt, cæduntque omnia, et quæque obvia, maturam ceu segetem, metunt, calcant, transeunt—[donec] auxiliatores egregii (Romani)—[eos] propere trans maria fugaverunt: quia anniversarias avide prædas, nullo obsistente, trans maria exaggerabant.

as a son, and faithfully intreated me, after all the tribulations I had undergone hitherto, to depart from them no more. While I remained there, I saw in a vision, at night, a man named Victorius, coming, as it were, from Ireland, with epistles innumerable; and he gave me one of them. And I read the beginning of the epistle, containing The voice of the Irish. And while I was reciting the beginning of the epistle, I thought, at the moment, that I heard the voice of the inhabitants of the wood of Foclut, [in the Barony of Tyrrawley, and county of Mayo, near Killala, or] the Western Ocean, crying out to me, as if with one voice, “We beseech thee, Holy Youth, to come, and walk again among us.” And I was greatly pricked in my heart, and could read no more; and so I awoke. God be thanked, that many years after, the Lord dealt with them according to their cry. And another night, I heard him, whether in me or beside me I know not, God knoweth, I heard him speaking in a fine language, which I heard, but could not understand, save that at the end of his speech he said, ‘He that laid down his Life for thee, He it is that speaketh in thee.’ And so I awoke, rejoicing greatly.”

Confess. Section 10.

Fiech thus describes his first call:

“Victor said to the servant of Milcho,
Depart over the waves.”

The Victor of Fiech, and the Victorius of Patrick, were evidently the same; the latter was JESUS CHRIST himself, “who laid down his life for our sakes.” And who was justly styled Victor, as denoting him, who came forth, “conquering, and to conquer;” from his first victory over death, at his resurrection, to his last victory over all his foes, near the end of the world; so magnificently described, Rev. vi. 2; xix. 11—21, from Psal. xlv. And according to Fiech, Patrick was intimately acquainted with the Psalms and the Apocalypse.

“The Hymns and the Apocalypse,
The three fifties, he chanted daily.”

Victor, therefore, was no ordinary, nor Guardian Angel, as the Monkish writers, and even O'Conor, represent him; but “the King of Angels;” “the Angel who appeared to Patrick, in the burning bush,” according to Fiech.

Patrick did not remain long at home, with his parents; but in order to qualify himself for his Heavenly call, and for the due discharge of his arduous and important mission, he visited the most distinguished Seminaries of Learning on the Continent; he travelled into France, and spent a good while with St. Martin of Tours, his uncle by the mother's side; with the celebrated Germanus, who instructed him in the Canon of Scripture, and furnished him with a Liturgy: from thence he proceeded to Italy, and the Islands of the Tyrrhenian Sea, inhabited by the most learned Monks of that Monkish age, with whom he associated. According to Fiech:

5.

“ He travelled over all the Alps,
And all the seas; his journey was prosperous.
He resided with Germanus;
And, in the Southern part of Southern Latium, (Italy). ”

6.

In the Islands of the Tyrrhenian Sea,
In them he dwelt, as is related.
He read the Canon [of Scripture] with Germanus:
And so the Churches [abroad] attest.”

After many years of foreign travel, spent in the pursuit of knowledge, Patrick at length, in the sixtieth year of his age, ventured to enter upon his mission, A. D. 432; as he thus modestly relates. Confess. § 11.

“ I went not voluntarily to Ireland, until I was almost spent. But this was far better for me, because hereby I was amended by the Lord; who now fitted me for that which I formerly wanted; namely, to care and labour for the salvation of others; at a time when I did not even think about myself.”

The following lively description of his mission is furnished by Fiech:

7.

To Erin he proceeded,
Called by the Angel of God.

Often he saw in dreams,
That he ought to return thither.

8.

Most salutary to Erin
Was the coming of Patrick to Oiclad ;
He heard from afar the voice of invitation,
From the sons of Fochlaid wood.

9.

They besought the saint to come
To discourse with them daily,
To draw away from their errors,
The Diviners of Erin, to life.

10.

The diviners of Erin predicted—
' New days of peace shall come,
Which shall endure for ever :
The country of Temor shall be deserted.'

11.

His Druuids, from Laogaire,
The coming of Patrick concealed not ;
The predictions were verified
Concerning the King (CHRIST) whom they fore-told.

19.

The sons of Emir, the sons of Heremon,
Were all going to the Devil ;
Even Satan was casting them down to hell,
In the great winnowing fan.

20.

Until the Apostle arrived,
To preserve them from civil spirits ;

He preached for threescore years
To the Diviners of Fenian (Phœnician) descent.

21.

Upon the Diviners of Erin was darkness,
The Diviners adoring idols ;
They believed not in the true DEITY,
In the true TRINITY.”

In this interesting description, the Irish word tuatha is rendered by the old Latin translation, followed by O'Conor, “populi,” and by Lynch, “people ;” but, I apprehend, rather vaguely. Vallancey, that skilful Irish scholar, though an Englishman by birth, renders the word “haruspices, or magi, [soothsayers or diviners] from tuath, signifying superior knowledge or science,” according to Cormac's Dictionary. These were the descendants of Tuatha Dedan, the learned scientific Dedanites of Chaldea, forming a distinguished class of people, known to the Greek historians by the name of Indo-Scythæ; who, for the sake of commerce, settled, at first, on the shores of the Pontus, and Euxine seas, in Iberia and Albania (the western, and eastern regions of Georgia), and afterwards colonized Phœnicia and Syria; and under the Tyrian Hercules, called in Irish, Feni an fear saoidh (Fenius, vir sapiens), and his adventurous mariners and descendants, colonized Carthage, and the coasts of Spain; and boldly passing the streights of Gibraltar (thence called the pillars of Hercules) into the Atlantic Ocean, proceeded to the British Isles, attracted by their lucrative commerce; to which the Phœnicians gave the names of their original settlements, according to their relative positions; the western, Iberia, to Ireland; and the eastern, Albania, to Britain; which was afterwards appropriated to its northern division, Scotland. See Vallancey's Essay on the Primitive Inhabitants of Great Britain and Ireland, pp. 4—7.

And this specific interpretation of Tuatha Erin, “the diviners of Ireland,” seems to be strongly supported by the context; being evidently in opposition to Druidh Laoghair, “the Druids of Lao-gaire,” in the next verse, who unfolded to the monarch the predictions of their sage ancestors, and signified to him the coming of St. Patrick, to restore peace upon earth, and to banish idolatry, in the reign of the Messiah, during the golden age revived, or in the regeneration; of which blessed period a universal tradition prevailed throughout the ancient world, from the rising to the setting sun; founded primarily on the prophecies of the Old Testament, successively revealed to the patriarchs Adam, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, &c. to the Israelites, Moses, David, Isaiah, &c.; and to the Heathen Diviners, Balaam, Job, &c. and from thence handed down, in the Sibylline and other oracles, the Clarian, Dodonean (from Dedan), Pythian, Ammonian, &c. to later times.

Temor, on the hill of Turah, in the county of Meath, was the chief seat of heathen idolatry; here, foretold to be deserted, upon the introduction of Christianity.

The word Druidh, or Draoidh, is derived from Dara, in the Irish or Celtic language; or Δρυς, in Greek; both signifying “an oak;” and both, perhaps, derived from the Hebrew, שְׁרֵשׁ, (Darash, or Drush) “to enquire,” as from an oracle, 2 Kings, i. 2—5. For the oak was considered a sacred tree, whence oracular responses were given in the remotest times; as at Dodona, the oldest oracle in Greece. Julius Cæsar* thus critically * Cæsar thus describes the Druids:—Druides rebus divinis intersunt, sacrificia publica et privata procurant, religiones interpretantur. Ad hos magnus adolescentium numerus, discipline causâ, concurrit: magnoque ii sunt apud eos in honore, nam fere de omnibus controversiis publicis privatisque constituunt; et si quod est admissum facinus, si cædes facta, si de hereditate, si de finibus controversia est, iidem decernunt, præmia pœnasque constituunt. Si quis, aut privatus aut publicus, eorum decreto non stelit, sacrificiis interdicunt. Hæc pœna apud eos est gravissima. Quibus ita est interdictum, ii numero impiorum ac sceleratorum habentur; iis omnes deceidunt, aditum eorum sermonemque defugiunt, ne quid ex contagione incommodi accipient: neque iis potentibus jus redditur neque honos ullus communicatur. His autem omnibus Druidibus præcessit unus, qui summam inter eos habet auctoritatem. Hoc mortuo, si quis ex reliquis excellit dignitate, succedit; at si sunt plures pares, suffragio Druidum allegitur. Non nunquam etiam, de principatu armis con-describes the functions of the Druïds: “The Druïds are concerned in divine things; they take care of sacrifices, public and private; they interpret the rites and mysteries of religion. Their discipline is reckoned to have been invented in Britain, and from thence translated to Gaul. And at present, such as wish to learn it more carefully, generally travel to Britain for information.” But Pliny† marks its oriental origin more accurately: “Britain, at the present day, strictly celebrates the art of the Druïds, with so many ceremonies, that she may seem to have communi-

tendunt. Ii, certo anni tempore, in finibus Carnutum (quæ regio totius Galliæ media habetur) considunt, in loco consecrato. Hic omnes undique, qui controversias habent, conveniunt; eorumque judiciis decretisque parent. Disciplina in Britannia reperta, atque inde in Galliam translata esse, existimatur: et nunc, qui diligentius eam rem cognoscere volunt, plerumque illò discendi causā, profiscuntur. Cæsar, Bell. Gall. lib. vi. c. 13.

How minutely have the Pope and Cardinals of Rome copied the discipline and policy of the Arch-Druïd and his colleagues; assuming all their Ecclesiastical and civil functions, and adopting their excommunications and interdicts! The whole scheme and texture, indeed, of their discipline, is Pagan Druidism engrafted upon Christianity; as fully shewn in the foregoing Introduction.

† Pliny, lib. xxx. c. 1, more correctly states the Persian origin of Druidism: Britannia hodie, Druïdarum artem attonite celebrat tantis cæremoniis, ut dedisse Persis videri possit.

cated it to the Persians;" who were, indeed, the primitive founders of Druidism or Magism.—Cicero* also notices their veneration for mistletoe, and the oak: “The Druids (for so the Gauls call their Magi) count nothing more holy than mistletoe; or than the tree on which it grows, especially if it be an oak.”

Hence, many ancient names of places in Ireland were derived from the oak; as, Kil-dare, “the temple of the oak;” where a celebrated oak was preserved, with religious veneration, long after the introduction of Christianity, called “St. Bridget's oak.” Dear-magh, “the oak field,” now * Cicero and Pliny notice their veneration for mistletoe. Nil habent Druides (ita suos Magos appellant Galli), visco, et arbore in quâ gignatur, si modo sit robur, sacratus. De Divin. I. 40. Est autem rarum admodum inventu, et reper-tum magnâ religione petitur; et ante omnia, sextâ luna; quæ principia mensium annorumque his facit, et seculi post trice-simum annum. Plin. xvi, c. 44.

This Druidical usage of commencing the month, not from the new moon, but from the sixth night, or the half moon after, which was more easily known, gave rise, perhaps, to the division in some of our Almanacks, in which the first half moon is called “the first quarter,” though in reality the second, as in the English Clerical Almanack of 1818. And the Druids easily accommodated the Lunar year of 354 or 355 days to the solar, of  $355\frac{1}{4}$  days, from which it falls short ten or eleven days; by intercalating a month of 30 days, at the end of every third year, about the time of the Summer solstice. Bede de Temporum ratione, c. 13. O'Conor, Proleg. i. p. 30, 31.

Durrow, both in Leinster; Bile-magha-dair, “the holy tree of the field of oaks,” in the county of Clare, Connaught, where the provincial kings were inaugurated.

The Druuids were idolaters, as noticed by Fiech. Their principal divinities were the Sun, Moon, and Stars, or the Host of Heaven; the elements of nature, the winds, &c. The Sun was called, in Hebrew, Baal; in Phœnician, Beel*; signifying “Master;” i. e. Baal-shamaim, or Beelsamen, “Master of the Heavens;” and also Malech, Maloch, or Moloch, signifying “king” of the same. The moon was called Samhin (her Phœnician title), being the contraction of Malchoth-Shamaim, “Queen of the Heavens,” so styled by the Pagans, Jer. xliv. 17, 25. They were supposed to preside over the cardinal seasons of Spring and Autumn respectively: and the kindest wish of the native Irish, for the prosperity of a friend, still continues to be, at the present day, “the blessings of Samhin and Bel be with you!” Hence their ancient custom, at the first sight of the new moon, to borrow a piece of money, if they have it not themselves, as an omen of plenty throughout the month. See O'Halloran's History of Ireland, vol. i. pp. 47, 113.

* Thus Baal-zebub, signifying in Hebrew “Master of the Gadfly,” worshipped in Palestine, 2 Kings, i. 2. was called in Syriac, or Phœnician, Beel-zebub, as in the New Testament.

Accordingly, the grand festivals of Baal, “the Sun,” and Samhin, “the Moon,” were celebrated at the vernal and autumnal equinoxes. The eve of the vernal, was called Oiche Baal tinne, “the night of Baal’s fire,” when fires were lighted on all the high places dedicated to his worship. At which time, all culinary or household fires were ordered to be extinguished, under pain of death, and not lighted again until they were rekindled from the sacred fire. For imparting which, the Druuids were entitled to a fee from each house. The eve of the autumnal equinox was called Oiche Samhin, “the night of Samhin,” which was celebrated with similar rites by the Druuids.

In Ireland, the proper names of a multitude of places are derived from those of the Sun and Moon, imposed in times of paganism, and still retained to the present day. Such as the town of Baltinglass, in the county of Wicklow, and province of Leinster; or Baal-tinne-glass, signifying “Baal’s fire, green,” when the grass is green, as at the vernal equinox; Granard, in the county of Longford, or Grian-árd, “the Sun’s high place.” Kilmallock, a town in the county of Limerick, and province of Munster, or Kil-maloch, “the temple of Maloch;” where are the ruins of a fine abbey, and a street of superb houses, the most magnificent to be seen in Munster, and of the remotest antiquity. Athlone, or Atha-luan, signifying “the ford of the moon,” a town situate high on the river Shannon, where it is fordable, bounding Leinster, in Westmeath, and Connaught, in Galway; Killesandra, or Killa-chandra, signifying in Irish, “the temple of the moon’s circle or cycle;” and, what is truly remarkable, the same in the Sanskrit language, which was a dialect of the primitive Persic or Syriac. Thus Herodotus mentions a city of Egypt, during the Persian dominion, whose name, he allows, is not Egyptian, called Ar-chandra, signifying “the city of the Moon;” not, as he imagines, from the daughter of Archander, the wife of Danaus. B. ii. § 98.

The Druidical temples of the highest antiquity, like the Persian of old, were open to the Heavens; they were remarkably rude and simple in their structure, consisting of a circle of twelve tall straight stone pillars of immense size, with stone lanterns across, connecting each pair of pillars; and also an enormous flat stone, called crom-leach, supported on three of four pedestals, serving for an altar of sacrifice, placed in the middle, or near one end of the enclosure; of which the plan might have been borrowed, perhaps, from the scriptural, consisting, in like manner, of twelve pillars and an altar, (Exod. xxiv. 4.) and both originally emblematical of “the Sun and Moon, and twelve Stars,” (Gen. xxxvii. 9.) or constellations of the Zodiac, in the primeval astronomy of Chaldea, to which the Magi or Druids were much addicted. See Vallancey’s Astronomy of the Ancient Irish Collectan. vol. vi. part ii.

Of these Druidical temples and altars, there are numerous remains in every part of Great Britain and Ireland. Such as the great one of Stonehenge, on Salisbury Plain, said to have been formed in Ireland, and transported by M Merlin's magic art, in one night, from thence, across the channel, to its present site. And one, of nearly equal dimensions, still exists in Ireland, at Beal-agh, “the altar of Beal, or Baal, in the county of Down, four miles from Belfast. (See a drawing and description of it in Vallancey's Essay on the Primitive Inhabitants of Ireland, pp. 40, 41.) The plain, or the high place in which they were erected, was called Magh-adhair, or Magh-slecht, “the field of adoration.”

The following curious description of their mode of worship is given in the Annals of the Four Masters, ann. mundi 3656, or B. C. 296 *, in their account of Tigernach, king of Ireland, who first made an image, and introduced idolatry at that time. “On the night of Samhin, Tigernach, with the men and women of Ireland, prayed to the idol Crom-cruagh so devoutly, when they fell down and worshipped it, that they broke their knees, their elbows and their noses, wounded their foreheads, and cut their cheeks, so that the blood gushed out." O'Conor, Prol. i. p. 22. How remarkably does this Irish account correspond with the Scriptural, of the worshippers of Baal, in Elijah's days! 2 Kings, xviii. The catastrophe also was similar: for we learn from O'Flaherty, in his Ogygia, that " Tigernmagh, king of Ireland, and the introducer of the worship of idols, the hundredth year after the landing of the Mile-sians [from Spain], while he was sacrificing to the principal idol of Ireland, called Crom-cruah, at the beginning of the winter half year, perished, or was slain, with an immense multitude of people, at "the field of Adoration," in Breffny, county of Cavan, looking towards Connaught; thence called Moy-sleucht, "the field of slaughter." Prol. i. p. 23.

* The Irish Chronologers, Gildas Coemhain, Tigernach, &c. counted 3952 years from the creation of the world to the vulgar Christian era, nearly agreeing with Scaliger, 3950, but differing from Petavius 3984 years, and from Usher 4004 years. See O'Conor, Prol. ii. pp. 35, 38.

St. Patrick, in A. D. 432, appears to have taken his first station, after his arrival in Ireland, at Ennis Patrick, "the Island of Patrick," near Skerries in Fingal, about 12 miles north of Dublin; called also Holm Patrick, from the old Saxon word holm, signifying a haven, or harbour. From thence he proceeded northward, to the county of Down, and founded a monastery called Sabhall Patrick, or the "barn of Patrick," on the east side of Dundrum bay. Here are two small vaulted rooms of stone, quite entire, about seven feet high, six feet long, and two feet and a half broad, with a small window placed on one side. These were, probably, long prior to St. Patrick's time; for small chapels of a similar construction are found on the coast of Kerry, at Cashel, &c. which appear to have been of the remotest antiquity, coeval with the first Phenician settlers in Ireland; and in the opinion of General Vallancey, (Collectan. vol. vi. part i. p. 137.), may challenge even the round towers in age, which are sometimes found near them, as at the rock of Cashel; where Cormac's chapel, as it is called, is seated on the south side of the more modern church, or cathedral, and a lofty round tower on the north side. Their general name, is Teach Draoi, “the house of the Druid.”

The round towers are numerous in Ireland, especially in the southern division; and are found also in Scotland. They are evidently of the same structure with the two round pillars which the judicious Maundrell, in his journey from Aleppo to Jerusalem, describes as near Tripoli, on the sea coast, a furlong asunder, and about half a mile northward of an idol temple. This temple was a court of 55 yards square, cut in the natural rock, which supplied the place of walls on three sides, but was open on the north. In the centre of this area was the throne of the idol, composed of four large stones, two at the sides, one at the back, and another, of five yards and three quarters square, carved round with a handsome cornice, hanging over all at the top, in the manner of a canopy.

The whole structure was about twenty feet high, fronting towards the two round pillars. Of these pillars, one was thirty-three feet high, consisting of a pedestal of ten feet high, and fifteen square; upon which was reared a single stone pillar in form of a cylinder, and capped with another stone cut in the shape of a pyramid. The other, nearly of the same height, was capped with a stone cut in the shape of a hemisphere. Under these pillars were extensive catacombs, or sepulchral chambers. Of all which, Maundrell has given drawings and accurate descriptions. See the Appendix, No. 11.

The stone court was probably a house or temple of Baal, or Moloch, dedicated to the Sun; whose image or idol was originally seated on the throne. 2 Kings x. 27. Round pillars were consecrated to the Sun and the Moon, from the earliest times. When Balak, king of Moab, employed Balaam the Chaldean diviner to curse the Israelites, he brought him up to the “high places of Baal.” Numb. xxii. 41. But this is rendered by the ancient Greek version of the Septuagint, τῷ στηλῇ τῷ Βααλ, “the pillar of Baal,” or round pillar, consecrated to the Sun. The other, whose top was hemispherical, probably was consecrated to the Moon, for she also was called ἡ Βααλ, “the Mistress,” and ἡ δαμολίς, “the heifer,” whom the tribe of Nephual worshipped under that form, before the captivity, Tobit i. 5. Her worship had been long established in Syria, and Pheicia, even before Abraham's days, under the title of Ash-toroth-karnaim, “the shining cow two-horned,” Gen. xvi. 5.; as the sun had been, under the form of a bull; called, in Egypt, Apis, long before the Exode of the Israelites; from whence they derived their model of the golden calf at Mount Sinai, Exod. xxxii. 2—8. Neh. ix. 18. And these, we may presume, were the Baalm, or Baals, in the plural number, whom the Israelites worshipped under their Judges and Kings, until their captivity, Judg. ii. 11; 1 Sam. vii. 4; 2 Chron. xxvii. 2; and the golden calves, which the wicked policy of Jeroboam, after his revolt, set up at Dan and Bethel, the Northern and Southern extremities of his kingdom, in opposition to the established worship of the LORD, at the temple of Jerusalem. 1 Kings xii. 26—33.

These “pillars of Baal,” or round towers, abounded every where in the earliest seats of the Indo-Scythæ. Their remains and ruins are still to be found in Colchis and Pontus, and among the ancient tribes of Caucasus; in Russia, on the river Wolga; in Persia, where Hawzay found four fire-temples of the ancient Guebres (or fire-worshippers), which he describes as “rotund, above thirty feet in diameter, raised in height to a point near a hundred and twenty feet.” (Vol. i. p. 292, 382.) In Hindostan, they occur in the form of the most ancient pagodas; which are chiefly buildings of a cylindrical, or round tower shape, either pointed or truncated at the summit, and frequently adorned with a round ball stuck on a spike. Pennant's View of Hindostan, vol. ii. p. 123. And they have been found even in America.

The structure of those round towers, built of the most durable materials, was well fitted for the preservation of the sacred fire from the weather; and probably to prevent the intrusion of the profane vulgar, the door, or entrance, is usually placed about fifteen or twenty feet from the ground. And the four windows at the top, fronting the cardinal points, were well fitted to discharge the smoke. They seem much better calculated for this purpose than for belfries, places of penance, or residences of Anchorites, gnomons, or sun-dials, &c. according to the various guesses of their design and use. See Vallancey's Essay on the Round Towers of Ireland. Collectanea, vol. vi. part i. p. 121; and O'Conor, Prol. i. p. 32; Prol. ii. p. 206.

Aoi Beiltoir, “the community of Baal's tower,” was a high dignity in the pagan church. Wherever the word occurs in the Brehon laws, it is underlined by the commentators, and explained by the word Easbog, “bishop,” according to Vallancey. Ibid.

Our Apostle appears to have taken up his residence, next, in the neighbourhood of Slane, near Drogheda; as we may collect from Fiech's account of his mission, and the austerities he practised.

12.

Patrick was renowned till his death ;
He was strenuous in banishing errors ;
Hence his acts were celebrated
Among all tribes of peoples.

13.

The Hymns and the Apocalypse,
The three fifties (Psalms) he chanted daily ;
He preached, he baptized, he prayed ;
From the praises of God, he ceased not.

14.

The cold prevented him not
From remaining at night in the rains,
To obtain the kingdom [of Heaven] ;
He preached God on the hills.

15.

In Slane, with the Diviners of Mount Barcha,
Whose [river Boyne] is never dried nor diminished,
He chanted a hundred Psalms, every night,
To serve the KING OF ANGELS.

16.

Afterwards, he slept upon the bare rock,
And a wet quilt over him ;
The bark [of trees] was his pillow ;
He indulged not his body in luxury.

" He preached the Gospel to all,
He worked great miracles, daily ;
He healed the blind, with fasting ;
The dead, he restored to life."

Fiech here notices the mighty miracles wrought by Patrick, briefly, and in general terms, without descending to particulars. But the deficiency is abundantly supplied by his successors; Joceline especially, who recites a multitude of the most idle and extravagant kind, wrought by the Saint, not only during his mission, as Fiech evidently supposes, but even before his birth, and during his infancy, and childhood*. They carry, indeed,

* The following may serve as a sample of such miracles :

1. When his mother Conchessa was pregnant of him, poison was administered to her; but it was found, at his birth, converted into a stone, which he was holding between his fingers. The stone also, upon which he was laid when born, partaking of his sanctity, possessed many wonder-working powers, especially that of detecting perjury.

2. When his aunt wanted a fagot to renew the fire, the child converted into dry wood some ice, which he had brought home from the field, in his bosom.

3. When a wolf carried off a lamb from the flock, under the young Saint's care, and he was blamed for his negligence; lo! the wolf brought back the lamb safe and sound, of his own accord, next morning.

4. When the cruel Lord of Dunbarton confined his aunt, and employed her to cleanse the stalls and stables of his castle, St. Patrick performed the task for her miraculously.

their own refutation with them. The meek and lowly Patrick himself, in his writings, makes no

---

And ever since, says Joceline, the dung continues to be cleared away, invisibly; insomuch, that if all the cattle of the country were driven into the stables, no dirt could be found after them. A miracle, says he, so well known in the neighbourhood, as to require no further proof.

5. When St. Patrick was going to set sail for Ireland, from a British port, a leper, standing on the shore, besought his passage thither, in the name of the Lord Jesus. But the mariners refused to take him on board. The Saint, however, took pity on him, and flung into the sea a stone altar, which had been consecrated, and given him by the Pope, and on which he used to celebrate the divine mysteries. He then made the leper sit thereon; when, to the amazement of all the beholders, the stone, with its freight, under the guidance of the chief corner-stone (CHRIST), not only floated, contrary to nature, but, moreover, set sail and kept pace with the ship; so that they both arrived together, the same moment, at the shore. Whereupon the Saint took occasion to reprove his companions for their want of faith, and changed their stoney hearts into a fleshy, to exercise works of charity in future.

The following notable instances of curing the blind, and raising the dead, are selected from Joceline:

6. A man called Gormas, blinded from his mother's womb, in consequence of a divine command, in his sleep, took the infant Saint's hand, shortly after his baptism, and made the sign of the Cross with it on the ground; when immediately a fountain of water sprang up in the place touched, which, like another Shiloah, not only gave him the power of vision, but enabled him to read and understand the Scriptures also.

7. His aunt's husband having died suddenly, she applied pretensions to the power of working miracles, at any time: he only acknowledges gratefully the

---

to young Patrick to restore him to life, for having kindly fostered him in his infancy: whereupon, in compassion to her tears, embracing the dead man, and making the sign of the cross, and praying over him, he raised and restored him to life.

8. A man called Donald, who had been long blind, hearing St. Patrick passing by, ran after him, begging to be cured; but in his haste, stumbled and fell by the way. One of the clergy who attended the Saint, laughed at the blind man's fall, and derided his misfortune. To punish him, therefore, the Saint transferred the blindness to him, and restored the other to sight.

9. At a place called Fearta, he raised to life two women who had been dead and buried: as soon as they revived, they renounced their idols and demon gods, declared that Christ was the true God, and desired to be baptized in his name; which was done accordingly: and all the by-standers glorified God, and were baptized.

10. He next raised to life nineteen men who had been dead and buried; one of them, called Fota, had been no less than ten years in his grave! They related to the by-standers the pains they had undergone, were baptized, and became monks. This miracle converted king Engus, and all his people of Cashel.

11. The only son of Elelius, a pagan prince who had obstinately opposed St. Patrick's preaching, was trampled to death by swine, and partly devoured. To convert his incredulous father, he ordered the two bishops, Ailbe and Ibar, to restore him not only to life, but to his perfect soundness of limbs; which by his prayers they effected. Whereupon the prince, and all his house and people, believed, and were baptized.

signs and wonders vouchsafed to him by the Lord, for support against his opposers, and the scoffers of his mission, for exposing himself to danger, among enemies who knew not the Lord. Confess. § 17. Thus, when his enemies most eagerly sought to kill him; when they robbed him, and his companions, of all that they found, and bound himself in chains; on the fourteenth day, the LORD rescued him from their power, and his goods were all restored. Confess. § 19.

Fiech, indeed, is too fond of the marvellous. Afterwards he thus describes the miraculous day of an entire year's continuance, that followed St. Patrick's death :

28.

The Sun dispelled the night,
So that the light failed not.
For the space of a year there was Sun light,
That was the prolonged day !

29.

In the battle fought at Bethoron
Against the Diviners of Canaan,
The Sun stood still over Gibeon,
As Scripture relates to us.

30.

Since the Sun stood still for Joshua,
To slay the sinners [of Canaan],
Why should not the Sun's light
Be three hundred times more obedient,
On account of the felicity of the Saints ?

Fiech, who most probably attended Patrick at his death, could not but know this to be a glaring fiction. Joceline himself; who usually far outstrips Fiech, reduces it to twelve days only, instead of “three hundred,” or 365 days; which he considered as utterly incredible, credulous as he was. Might not Fiech have intended it merely as a poetical licence, or hyperbole? Such are frequent in poetry, sacred and profane:

“ Moreover the light of the Moon shall be as the light of the Sun ;
 And the light of the Sun shall be seven-fold, as the light of seven days :
 In the day that THE LORD bindeth up the breach of His people,
 And healeth the stroke of their wound.”

Isa. xxx. 26.

Lucem redde, dux bone, patriæ :
Instar veris, enim, vultus ubi tuus
Affulsit populo, gratior it dies,
Et soles melius nitent. Her. Od. iv, 5, 5.

Early in the spring of A. D. 433, the second of his mission, Patrick attacked the chief seat of Druidical idolatry, however hazardous the attempt. He pitched his tent at a place called Ferta fir Fiech, “the graves of the men of Fiech,” on the north bank of the river Boyne, near Slane: and had the hardihood, on Easter-eve (March 25th, that year), to light up the paschal fire, about six miles distant from the temple of Temor, “the great house," on the hill of Tarah, "the law;" where the monarch of Ireland, Laogaire, with his assembled Druids, nobles and people, were preparing, the same evening (the eve of the vernal equinox*), to celebrate the solemnity of Baal's fire; when the sight of Patrick's fire, kindled earlier than the sacred fire, in express violation of the national law, struck the king and the whole assembly with the utmost astonishment and dismay: and the Druids declared to the king, that unless that fire was immediately extinguished, he who kindled it, and his successors, should hold the principality of Ireland for ever. On this occasion, when brought before the king, the Apostle boldly preached Christ to the whole assembly; and such was the reputation of his sanctity, that he not only escaped punishment, but even converted Dubtach, the king's bard, and Fiech, a young poet under his tuition, afterwards appointed bishop of Sletty; to whose conversion, we may be assured, the predictions of the Druids, which he has recorded, contributed not a little.

* The modern Church of Rome, wishing to retain the pagan ceremony of Baal-tinne, yet not so as to interfere with the celebration of Easter, at the vernal equinox; with their usual accommodating policy, postponed it to May-day; which is now called by the vulgar, La Baal-tinne. On this day the May-pole is erected, that obscene emblem of the pagan Phallus, or Lingam.

Laogaire himself is said, by the Monkish historians, to have been converted; but it appears from the Irish annals, that he perished by lightning, in his infidelity. For, in A. D. 457, the twenty-ninth of his reign, Laogaire having invaded the Lagenians, or men of Leinster, to enforce the payment of tribute, was defeated by them, and taken prisoner, in the battle of Athadara, “the ford of the oaks;” and in order to procure his release, he swore by the sun, the winds, and the elements, that he would invade them no more during his life. But the very next year, A. D. 458, he broke his oath, and invaded them again: wherefore he was slain near Cassia, between two hills, Erin and Albania, in the country of Faolan (perhaps Ophely): the sun and the winds slew him, because he forswore them. As the old poet said:

Atbath Laogaire mac Neill for taob Caissi, glas antir;
Duile De ad raegaidh raith-tuc sat dail mbais for san righ.

“Laogaire, son of Neill, fell near Cassia, a green region;

The elements of God, whose oath he had violated, Inflicted on the king the punishment of death.”

Might not this legend somehow allude to the forementioned battle of Bethoron, in which the elements fought against the devoted Canaanites? This signal instance of divine vengeance, and the similar instance in Samuel's days, against the Philistines, would naturally strike great terror; and be recorded among their neighbours, the Phe-nicians, and handed down by tradition to their Irish colonies.

The next great Druidical solemnity was held at Talte, a mountain in Meath, where the Taltine games, called Fogh more ratha, “the season of great festivity,” were annually celebrated, for fifteen days before, and fifteen days after, the summer solstice. The Monkish writers say, they were instituted so early as A. M. 2764, or B. C. 1188, during the siege of Troy, by Lugaidh lam Fadah, the twelfth king of Ireland: but the Annals of the Four Masters, with more probability, depress them to A. M. 3370, or B. C. 582. See O'Conor, Prol. i. pp. 33, 34; Prol. ii. pp. 13, 35, 38. By a usual compromise with paganism, in the Old Roman Ecclesiastical Calendar, St. John Baptist's day, June 24, is substituted for the pagan solstice festival, and is there called solstitium vulgi, the “vulgar solstice:” on the vigil, or eve of which, in imitation of their pagan ancestors, the native Irish, still light up bon-fires, or sacred fires, on the hills; and, in sport, leap themselves, and drive their cattle, through the fires; as formerly practised in the horrid sacrifices to Baal.

Patrick attended these games also, and is said to have made many converts, especially Connal, the brother of king Laogaire, and great grandfather of St. Columbkille, who gave him ground to build a church upon.

From thence he proceeded to Magh-Adair, the field of Adoration, in Cavan, on the confines of Connaught, where, at the autumnal equinox, was celebrated the third Druidical solemnity, called Oiche Samhin, and also Geimh-ratha (or, corruptly, Geimhre), “the season of groaning,” from the groans and shrieks of the human victims then offered in sacrifices to their idol, Crom-cruach, noticed before. According to the Monkish historians, our Apostle pulled down this idol.

The fourth Druidical solemnity of the year was celebrated at the winter solstice, called Iarratha (and, corruptly, Ear-rach), i. e. “the last season,” or quarter of the year. The new-moon nearest to the winter solstice was celebrated by the Pagans with peculiar ceremonies and superstitious usages. In ancient times, the chief Druid, attended by crowds of people, went into the woods on that night, and cut with a golden sickle a branch of the mistletoe of the oak, and carried it in procession to the sacred grove. The people also cut branches for themselves, and carried them home, after they had been blessed or consecrated by the chief Druid. Whence the usage of adorning the pews of our churches and chapels with ever-greens, in lieu of mistletoe, at Christmas*.

---

* In the Christmas gambols of the Mummers, formerly celebrated in France, and still in Scotland, traces of Druidic

At the beginning of the second year, A. D. 434, quitting Magh-adair, or Magh-slecht, “the field of Adoration,” in Cavan, Patrick went to Ail-fion, “the rock of the clear fountain,” now Elphin, in Connaught; and at the beginning of Lent he retired to a lofty mountain near the sea coast, then called Cruagh an Aichle, “Mount Eagle,” but ever since, Cruagh Patrick, “the Mount of Patrick,” cal usages were to be found. A man personating a prince (Roi follet, “a mummer,”) set out from the village into the woods, bawling out, Au gui menez : Le roy le veult. The Monks followed in the rear with their begging boxes, which they rattled, crying Tire, liri, and the people put money in them, under the pretence that it was for a lady in labour. Persons in disguise (Guiseards) forced into dwelling-houses, playing antic tricks, and bullying the inhabitants for money and victuals, crying Tire-liri, tire-liri ; maint du blanc, et point du bis. This, at length, occasioned their suppression in France, in the reign of Louis XIV.

---

Hence were derived the Guisearts of Edinburgh, and their cry, “Hog menay ; Gie's your white bread, none of your gray,” as remarked by Professor Robinson, in his Natural Philosophy, p. 200. The old French Augui menez, and the Scottish Hog menay, are plainly corruptions of the Greek ἅγια μῆν (Hagia mene), “Holy moon,” which was anciently supposed to be in labour at the time of the conjunction, or new moon. The phrase Tire liri, seems to be a corruption of Tirez le roi, “draw forth” money “for the king,” namely, roi follet, the “mummer.” And the French, maint du blanc, et point du bis, is exactly rendered in the Scottish, “Gie's your white bread, none of your grey.” Hale's New Analysis of Chronology, vol. i. p. 153, 4to.

where, in imitation of Moses, Elijah, and Christ, he is said to have fasted forty days; and afterwards to have expelled all serpents and noxious animals from Ireland, and driven all the demons in the land into the Western Ocean, at the foot of the mount; according to Evinus and Joceline. But Patrick and Fiech are totally silent about these wonders; and Solinus, who flourished A. D. 190, above two centuries before St. Patrick, notices the exemption of Ireland from all poisonous reptiles; and is copied by Isidore of Seville, in the seventh century; the venerable Bede, in the eighth; and Donatus, bishop of Fesula, in his panegyric on Ireland. “The exemption, therefore, must be owing to the nature and quality of the air and soil, or to some other unknown cause; and not to the virtues of our patron, which have no need to be supported by the inventions of Joceline;” as judiciously remarked by Harris, in his Life of St. Patrick.

From thence he proceeded to Tir-Amalgaid, “the Country of Amalgaid,” now the Barony of Tirawley; in which was the wood of Foclut, which he had seen in vision; and there is said to have converted Amalgaid the king, and many thousands of his subjects. He is reported to have spent seven years in Connaught, which he considered as the peculiar scene of his mission, and to have wrought a general conversion of the inhabitants.

He next visited Ulster, with equal success, and founded several churches there, especially a church and see at Clogher, so called from Clogh-or, “a golden stone,” from which, in times of paganism, the devil, used to pronounce juggling responses, like the oracles of the Pythian Apollo: as related in the registry of Clogher. But his principal church and see was at Ard-magh, “the high field,” founded A. D. 445, in the thirteenth year of his mission.

He next visited Leinster, and made a considerable stay in Dublin, so called from the “black channel” of the river Liffey. There, in A. D. 448, he celebrated divine service, in one of the subterraneous vaults of Christ’s Church Cathedral, which was afterwards built over them, A. D. 1038. These vaults, as remarked before, were probably heathen temples of the remotest antiquity; which, after the introduction of Christianity, were converted into chapels, by the accommodating spirit of the Christian converts, still wishing to retain their ancient places of worship. He also founded a church near the well, called St. Patrick’s, upon whose site was afterwards erected the noblest cathedral in Ireland, of the same name, in A. D. 1190. Usher says, that the well was near the steeple, but that, in 1639, it was shut up and inclosed within a private house.

The last province he visited was Munster; where his precursors, Ailbe, Declan, Kieran, and Iber, had already made some progress in preaching the Gospel; but the glory of converting the king of Munster, Naitfrach, and his son Engus, was reserved for our Apostle. And they conducted him with great honour and respect to the royal city of Cashel. Here St. Patrick * held a synod, A. D. 450, at which several important regulations were made, in conjunction with the civil power. For the legends of Ailbe and Declan inform us †, that “king Engus, St. Patrick, and all the people decreed that (Emley), the city and see of St. Ailbe, should be the archbishopric of Munster for ever; and Ailbe was then ordained by them archbishop.” This see, however, was afterwards united to that of Cashel, by authority of Parliament, A. D. 1568. In the same synod,

* The Monkish Historians of Glastonbury, &c. say, that at this council of Cashel, St. Patrick was assisted by Auxilius and Isernius, regular Canons of the Lateran Church at Rome, who had followed him from thence; but without any sufficient foundation. Archbishop Usher doubts it, Ancient Religion of the Irish, chap. viii.; and the tenor of the decrees then passed, militates against it; in which no notice is taken of them.

† Rex Engus et Patricius, cum omni populo, ordinaverunt Archiepiscopatum Momoniae, in (Emley) civitate, et in sede sancti Albei; qui tunc ab eisdem archiepiscopus ordinatus est, per seculum. Ex vita S. Declani. Rex Engus et Patricius ordinaverunt, ut in (Emley) civitate et Cathedra sancti Albei, esset archiepiscopatus omnium Momonensium semper. Ex vita S. Albei.

Declan was confirmed Bishop of Ardmore, in Waterford; Kiernan was settled in the see of Saigre, in the territory of Ely-O'Carrol, and King's County, which was formerly looked upon as part of Munster, though now in Leinster; but in process of time this see was translated to Aghavoe, and thence to Kilkenny; and Ibar was created Bishop of Beg-Erin, or “little Ireland,” an island lying off the coast of Wexford, anciently reckoned a part of Munster; which was so called, from its exact resemblance in shape to the great island. See Ware, by Harris, vol. i. p. 21.

In this synod also, the dress of the clergy and their wives was regulated *. “If any of the clergy, from the sexton to the priest, be seen walking abroad without a gown, or his wife with her head unveiled, let them be equally despised by the laity, and separated from the church.” And the following penitential canon was then enacted †:

* Quicunque [ex] clericis, ab ostiario usque ad sacerdotem, sine tunica visus fuerit, &c.; et uxor ejus, si non velato capite ambulaverit: pariter a laicis contemnentur, et ab ecclesi separantur. Synod. Patric. Auxil. Isern.

+ Christianus, qui occiderit, aut fornicationem fecerit; aut, more Gentilium, ad Aruspicem meaverit; per singula erimina, annum pœnitentiæ agat: impleto, cum testibus, veniat anno pœnitentiæ; et postea resolvetur a sacerdote. Synod Patricii, Auxil. et Isern. MS. in bibliothecâ Collegii Benedict. Cantabrig.

And the penance itself was serious:

“A Christian, who has committed murder or fornication, or, after the manner of the Gentiles, gone to consult a diviner; for every such crime shall do a year of penance: and when the year of penance is completed, he shall come with witnesses, and afterwards shall be absolved by the priest.” How different was this from the practice of the modern church of Rome. These primitive bishops, according to the original discipline of the church, required that a long and serious penance should first be undergone; and when, by that means, sufficient proof had been given of the sincerity of the offender’s repentance, then, and not till then, the priest was empowered to give him the benefit of absolution: whereas, says primate Usher, “by the new device of sacramental penance, the matter is now far more easily transacted: by virtue of the keys, the sinner is instantly, of attrite, made contrite; and thereupon, as soon as he has made his confession, he presently receives his absolution: after this, some trivial penance is imposed, which, upon better consideration, may be converted into pence; and so a quick end is made of many a foul business.” Religion of the Ancient Irish and British, chap. v. pp. 47, 48.

---

Annum integrum in pane et aquâ, per mensuram pœnitentiat.
“Let penance be made for an entire year, with bread and water, by measure.” Ex libro Canonum Cottoniano, titulorum 66

The proceedings of this Council of Cashel sufficiently prove the primacy of St. Patrick over the bishops of Munster; and that it was equally acknowledged in Connaught and Leinster, we cannot doubt; for as the bishops there owed their establishment to his labours, so did they naturally render him the reverence and submission due to his superior virtue and sanctity. His contemporary, St. Schachlin, usually called Secundinus, in the Hymn ascribed to him in praise of St. Patrick, A. D. 448, shortly before this council, declares that “he obtained his apostleship from God, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.” And that “CHRIST chose him as his vicar upon earth.” And Cumminus, junior, in A. D. 634, when the papal prerogatives were greatly extolled, still called him S. Patricius, Papa noster; considering him as “Pope of Ireland.” And hence Fiech represents,

“ In Armach is the See of the kingdom,
And long shall be, to the citizens of Emania.”
“ VICTOR said, ‘ Authority is given to Armagh.’”

Emania was the palace of the kings of Ulster, at Armagh, long before the arrival of Patrick. Ptolemy has noticed it in his Geography, under the title of Prymæ, or Regia, “the palace,” from the earlier accounts of the Carthaginians and Phœnicians. And in the annals of Innisfallen, Cimbaoth mac Fintain, is said to have reigned there in the eighteenth year of Ptolemy Lagus, A. D. 289 *, which therefore is reckoned the era of its foundation; and this, indeed, according to the judicious Irish analist, Tigernach, is the legitimate era of Irish history: for he says, “ All the monuments of the Scoti, until Cimbasth, or the founding of Emania, are uncertain,” in their chronology. Armagh was also, in ancient times, a great seminary for education. At one time it was frequented by upwards of 7000 scholars. Lynch's Cambrensis eversus, p. 184, edit. 1662.

One of the most important of Patrick's institutions was the revival of the laws and ordinances of pagan times; for we learn, “ that in the tenth year of king Laogaire, A. D. 438, the ancient books, and other old monuments of Ireland, having been sought out from all quarters, and collected together, by the authority of St. Patrick, the Antiquities and Laws of Ireland were corrected and republished under the inspection of three kings, three bishops, and three sages; thence called Sennchas mor, “the Great Sanction, New Law, or Constitution of Nine.” It is much to be regretted that this important code of laws has perished in the ensuing wars and troubles of Ireland, along with many other valuable Irish MSS. especially a copy of the Four Gospels, said to be transcribed by St. Patrick and Columba conjointly. Much praise is due to Dr. O'Conor, for his patriotic labours to rescue from oblivion the mouldering remains of ancient Irish literature, in his learned and elaborate publications; especially his Rerum Hibernicarum Scriptores Veteres, to which this work is so much indebted for much curious and recondite information, contained in the first volume, published in 1813; the second volume having been unfortunately retarded hitherto, by the valuable Catalogue of the MSS. contained in the Marquis of Buckingham's noble library at Stow; now printing by Dr. O'Conor (August, 1818).

* Tigernachus, omnia monumenta Scotorum usque Kimbaoth, i.e. usque Eamaniam conditam, incerta esse declarat. Emaniæ initia refert ad annum Ptolomæi Logidis, xviii. qui regis Ægypti titulum usurpavit, anno xviii. ab obitu Alexandri, ante Christi 306—[nempe A. C. 306—17 A. C. 289.]—Itemq. secundum Annalss Inisfalliæ:—“ In Egypto primus regnat Ptolomæus, Lagi, fil. . . . . Cimbaeth mac Fintain regnavit annis xxviii. in Emainmacha [i. e. arce regia Ultoniæ]. In xviii. Ptolomæi, fuit primus Rex Emna [Emain], Cimbaeth mac Fintain.” O'Conor, Epist Nuncupat pp. 39, 41. N. B. His argument is here stated more clearly; by bringing the two passages together, and by a slight insertion, and alteration of the pointing of the latter clause.

That St. Patrick was a firm believer in “the true DEITY, in the true TRINITY,” we have still further evidence, in his Confession of Faith.

“ There is no other God, nor ever was, nor will be hereafter, but GOD THE FATHER unbegotten, without beginning, from whom is every beginning, maintaining all things: and HIS SON JESUS CHRIST, who, we testify, was with the Father always, before the foundation of the world, spiritually along with the Father, inexplicably begotten before all beginning; and by him were made things visible and invisible; he became man, and having conquered death, was received into the heavens to the Father; who gave him all power, over every name of celestial, terrestrial, infernal beings, that every tongue should confess that JESUS CHRIST is LORD and GOD; whom we believe, and expect his coming again, as the future judge of the living and the dead; who shall render to every one according to his works: and who has infused into us abundantly the gift of his HOLY SPIRIT, and the pledge of immortality; which makes them that are faithful and obedient, to be sons of God, and coheirs with Christ; whom also we confess and worship; ONE GOD IN THE TRINITY of the sacred name." Confess. § 2.

In this truly evangelical creed, composed both in the letter and in the spirit of the gospel, with admirable brevity and perspicuity; avoiding all scholastic subtilty, and introduction of unscriptural terms, we see not the slightest reference to the adoration of the Virgin Mary, or of Saints and Angels engrafted on the primitive creeds, from Paganism, by the superstition and idolatry of the modern Church of Rome. How would the Apostle of Erin, were he conscious of it, lament and deplore the blindness of his degenerate flock, who in their daily bead roll of “vain repetitions,” rehearse ten Ave Maries, or prayers to the Virgin, for one Pater noster, or prayer to God; and a hundred, nay, a thousand, to the Virgin, for one prayer to the HOLY GHOST!!!***

The unaffected piety and charity of St. Patrick, and his ardent and disinterested affection and tenderness for his Irish converts, breathe and glow through every line of his most interesting Confession. The following extracts may afford an advantageous specimen: § 14.

“When I was going to leave my country and parents, many gifts were offered me to stay, with weeping and tears; but by God’s guidance I by no means consented, nor agreed with them. Indeed, not my grace, but God, who conquered in me, and resisted them all, led me to go and preach the gospel to the Irish Gentiles, and to endure

* It was shrewdly remarked by Mahomet, in the seventh century, that “the Trinity of the Christians then consisted of the Father, the Son, and the Virgin Mother of God.” It was then, in fact, and still is, a Quaternity in Unity; as illustrated by a very curious engraving, found in an old edition of Dante, in his Paradiso, Canto 33, edit. 1551, in which the Father appears seated, with a triple crown; the Son with a sceptre, at his right hand; the Holy Ghost above both, in the form of a Dove; and the Virgin Mary below them; all enclosed in the same glory, and equally addressed by their worshippers, old and young, at the bottom of the picture.

insults from unbelievers, to encounter reproach, and many persecutions, even to bonds, on account of my peregrination; and to give up my own freedom for the benefit of others. And if I shall be found worthy, I am ready even to give up my life, without hesitation, and most willingly, for his name; and I wish there to lay it down, even to death, if the Lord would grant me that indulgence. For I am greatly a debtor to God, who bestowed on me so much grace, that many people, through me, should be born again unto God, and afterwards perfected; and that Clergy should every where be ordained among them, for the people lately coming to belief, whom the Lord hath taken to himself from the ends of the earth: as He had formerly promised by the prophets: ‘To Thee shall the Gentiles come from the ends of the earth, and shall say, and there is no profit in them.’ [Jer. xvi. 19.] And again, ‘I have placed thee a light among the Gentiles, that thou mayest be for salvation to the ends of the earth.’ [Isa. xlix. 6.] And there I wish to await his promise, who never deceiveth; as he promiseth in the Gospel: ‘They shall come from the East and from the West, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob.’ [Matt. viii. 11.] For as we trust, Believers shall come from all the world.”

And he concludes his Confession in the following pious and affectionate strains of genuine devotion:

“ Wherefore, may it be granted me by my God, never to lose his people, whom I have gained in the ends of the earth. I pray God to give me perseverance, and to deign that I may render him faithful witness, until my departure, for the sake of my God. And if I have ever imitated any good thing, for the sake of my God whom I love, I beseech Him to grant me, that with those proselytes and captives, I also may shed my blood, even if I myself should want burial, or my carcase should most miserably be torn limb from limb by dogs or wild beasts, or the fowls of the air devour it. Most assuredly, I think, if this should happen to me, I should gain my soul with my body; because, doubtless, in that day, we shall rise again in the brightness of the Sun; [Dan. xii. 3; Matt. xiii. 43;] that is, in the glory of Christ Jesus, our Redeemer, the son of the living God; and shall be joint heirs with Christ, and conformed to his future image: [Rom. ix. 17, 29;] because, of Him, and through Him, and in Him, we shall reign. [1 Cor. viii. 6; Rev. v. 10.] For the visible Sun, by God’s command, riseth daily, but never shall reign, nor shall his brightness remain throughout: and moreover, all they (the Gentiles) who adore him shall miserably come into punishment. But we (Christians) believe and adore the TRUE SUN [OF RIGHTEOUSNESS, Mal. iv. 2,] CHRIST, who never shall perish, neither he that doeth his will, but shall remain for ever; who reigneth with GOD THE FATHER ALMIGHTY, and with the HOLY GHOST, for all ages before and now, for all ages to come, ever more, Amen." Confess. § 21.

The scriptural references occurring in these passages, and abounding throughout the whole Confession, prove how intimately acquainted St. Patrick was with "the canon of Scripture;" in studying which he spent eighteen years with Germanus, according to Joccline, as related in the life of Germanus:

Even from these he appears to have been conversant, at least, with the Greek Septuagint version of the Old Testament, from which some of his citations are evidently translated, where they differ both from the Hebrew text, and from the Latin vulgate; such as Jer. xvi. 19, and Isa. xlix. 6. And in the New Testament, 1 Cor. viii. 6, he has introduced a reference to a third clause, καὶ ἐν πνευμα αὐγίον εἰ ω τα πάντα. "And one HOLY SPIRIT, in whom are all things:" which though omitted in all the printed editions and MSS. of the Greek Testament now extant, is evidently required by the context, and the tenor of Scripture, 1 Cor. xii. 4—6, Rom. xi. 36; and was cited by the primitive fathers, Linus, Ignatius, Basil, Gregory Nazianzen, Epiphanius, &c.; as shewn in Hales on the Trinity, vol. ii. p. 208, 251.

The labours of our Apostle, in the course of his long ministry of 60 years, were truly stupendous. It is, perhaps, no exaggeration of Nennius, that he wrote 365 alphabets for the use of his converts, in order to enable them to read the Scriptures; founded 365 churches, ordained 365 bishops, or more, and upwards of 3000 priests (the days of the year being quaintly used for a great number. Thus, when it is said in the life of St. Kentigern, that in his monastery of St. Asaph, he had 365 monks, the learned Dr Lloyd, bishop himself of that see, remarks, that “no man will understand this literally who has seen the place.” And the number of churches and monasteries is underrated; for Colgan says, they amounted to upwards of 700, of which he names 166, besides 66 in Leinster alone.

The last transactions of his life, and the account of his death, are thus recorded by Ficch:

23.

“ When Patrick was in the leprosy,
For cure, going to Armagh,
THE ANGEL went before him,
On the way, in the middle of the day.

24.

He went southwards, to VICTOR,
(It was the same who called him)
The bush in which he was burned,
There they held conference.

25.

[VICTOR] said, ‘ Authority is given to Armack,
To CHRIST [give] repeated praises, thanks,

[Thy great love to heaven]
Hath prospered thy petition.

26.

The hymn you chant while living,
Shall be a breast-plate to each ;
The men of Erin, in the day of judgment,
Shall be with the wise for ever.<sup>2</sup>

27.

Tassac remained after him,
When he gave him the communion,
He said that Patrick would not recover.
The sayings of Tassac were not false.

31.

The clergy of Erin, they flocked
To the funeral of Patrick, on every side;
The source of celestial harmony
Set each of them to sleep.

32.

The soul of Patrick from his body
Was separated, after his labours.
The Angels of God, the first night,
Kept watch without delay.

33.

While they mourned for Patrick,
He went to the other Patrick [Father Abraham],
And with joy they departed together,
To Jesus, the Son of Mary.

34.

Patrick, not elated with pride,
Produced great blessings [to the world]

He died in the service of the Son of Mary,
His birth was propitious."

The leprosy of the Saint, and his interview with VICTOR, in his way from the Abbey of Suballum or Saul, where he chiefly resided for the last thirty years of his life, rest solely on the authority of Fiech; who evidently combines the appearances of the Lord to Moses in the bush, and to Saul on the way to Damascus. And he alludes to the parable of the beggar Lazarus, when he states that Patrick, the night of his death, was carried by the Angels of God to "Father Abraham," in Paradise, or the upper region of departed souls, in Hades (to which Christ himself went when he expired on the Cross, Luke xxiii. 43,) reserved for the good, where "they are comforted," as contrasted with the lower region, reserved for the souls of the wicked, where "they are tormented," until the general judgment at the end of the world; when the former shall go to Heaven with CHRIST, and the latter to Hell, with the Devil and his Angels, for evermore. Compare Luke xvi. 19—26, with Matt. xxv. 31—46. But by an elegant anticipation, Abraham himself is supposed to take the soul of Patrick immediately to Heaven; and by a classical allusion to the name Patricius (derived from pater, "father,") Abraham is called the "other Patrick."

Hence it evidently appears that Fiech had no notion of a purgatory, or place of temporary penance, even for the faithful, to purge away the pollutions of sin contracted in the body; but from which they may be relieved and sent to Heaven by the efficacy of prayers and masses, offered up for them by the priests, for pecuniary considerations. And that Patrick himself never dreamed of a purgatory (especially of that in the island of Lough Derg, which bears his name,) we learn from his treatise de tribus habitaculis, in manuscript, preserved in King James's library, and cited by Archbishop Usher, which begins thus: *

---

* Tria sunt sub OMNIPOTENTIS DEI nutu habitacula: primum, imum, medium. Quorum summum, Regnum Dei, vel Regnum cœlorum dicitur; imum, vocatur Infernus; medius, mundus præsens, vel orbis terrarum appellatur. Quorum extrema omnino sibi invicem sunt contraria, et nullâ sibi societate conjuncta: (quæ enim societas potest esse luci ad tenebras, CHRISTI ad Belial?) medium vero, nonnullam habet similitudinem ad extrema, &c. Commixtio namque malorum simul et bonorum in hoc mundo est: In Regno autem Dei, nulli mali sunt, sed omnes boni; at inferno, nulli boni sunt, sed omnes mali. Et uterque locus ex medio suppletur: Hominum enim hujus mundi alii elevantur ad cœlum, alii trahuntur ad Infernum: similes quippe similibus junguntur; id est, boni bonis, et mali malis; justi homines justis angelis, transgressores homines transgressoribus angelis, servi Dei Deo, servi Diaboli Diabolo. “Benedicti vocantur ad regnum sibi paratum ab origine mundi;” Maledicti expelluntur in ignem æternum qui preparatus est Diabolo et Angelis ejus.” Patric. de tribus habitaculis MS. in bibliotheca regia Jacobæ.

“ There are three habitations under the power of ALMIGHTY GOD, the first, the lowest, and the middle : of which the highest is called the Kingdom of God, or the Kingdom of Heaven ; the lowest is called Hell ; the middle is named the present World, or terrestrial Globe. These extremes are quite contrary to each other, for what fellowship can there be between light and darkness, between CHRIST and Belial? But the middle has some resemblance to the extremes ; for in this world, there is a mixture of bad and good men together ; whereas, in the Kingdom of God, there are none bad, but all good ; and in Hell, there are none good, but all bad. And both these places are supplied from the middle ; for of the men of this world, some are taken up to Heaven, others drawn down to Hell : and thus like to like are joined ; good men to good, bad to bad, just men to just angels, wicked men to wicked angels ; servants of God to servants of God, servants of the Devil to the Devil. The blessed are invited to the Kingdom prepared for them from the beginning of the world ; the cursed are expelled into the everlasting fire, prepared for the Devil and his Angels.”

See a curious analogy between the purgatory of the Papists and of the Mahometans ; both derived from Paganism, in Hales’s Synopsis of the Signs of the Times, Art. xx. of the Intermediate State. 1817, 8vo.

St. Patrick died March 17, A. D. 493, at the great age of 120 years, and was buried at Down, where also were interred the remains of his proselyte, St. Bridget*, and St.

---

* Cormac, in his Dictionary, states that “Brigit was a heathen Goddess, the daughter of Daghda, (Apollo, or the Sun,) and very great was her Aifrion,” or Temple. Vallaney Collectan. Vol. vi, Part i, p. 125, of the round Towers of Ireland.

From this curious article it appears, that the Christian Saint assumed not only her predecessor’s name, but her round Tower at Kildare, one of the highest in the kingdom, full 132 feet high; not far from which is to be seen an old building called the Fire-house, where the inextinguishable fire was formerly kept by the nuns of St. Brigid.

She was the daughter of a Leinster Chieftain called Dubh-tach, born A.D. 453, who early devoted herself to a monastic life. She was a proselyte of St. Patrick, who notices her with high respect, among “the sons and daughters of Scottish Chieftains, who became monks and virgins of Christ;” and describes her as “a blessed virgin of a noble race, adult, and very fair, whom I baptized.” Confess. sect. 16. She received the veil from the hands of St. Macalle, in A.D. 467, and from that time till her death, in A.D. 523, was boundless in her charities, and unrivalled in her piety and austerity. She was not only canonized after her death, but declared the perpetual patroness of Leinster, even in her life-time. Her festival is still celebrated with great devotion on the first of February, as noticed in the old distich.

Brigida, virgo potens, Februi sibi primas calendas, Scotorum miro poseit celebrata favore.

The fame of her sanctity soon spread over Europe, and at Seville, in Spain, at Lislon, Piacentia, in Italy, at Tours,

Columba* or Columkille, the apostle of the Picts;

---

Besançon, Namur, Cologn, in France and the Netherlands, and even in London, Churches were dedicated to her ; and Colgan counts about sixty Churches and Nunneries dedicated to her, in the dioceses of Dublin, Kildare, Tuam, Elphin, and Lismore only.

* Columba was of royal race, the son of Feidhlim, the son of Feargus, the son of Conal Gulban, the son of Niall the Great. He was born A.D. 525, and educated at the school of St. Finian, at Clonard, near the Boyne; a school so renowned, that no less than 3000 scholars have been reckoned therein, at one time, according to Colgan, Usher, &c. After his studies were completed, in which he made great proficiency, he embraced the monastic order, and was held in great reverence. But the violence of his temper, and his zeal for the privileges of his monastery, which had been violated, led him into disputes, especially with Comhgall, the celebrated Abbot of Benchor, or Bangor, in which much blood was spilt. This gave great scandal to the church and kingdom ; and in a synod held A.D. 569, he was excommunicated, and banished from Ireland for ever. On his arrival in Albania, Conal, king of the Dalriada, bestowed on him the isle of Hy. Here he established his chief monastery ; and from thence, with his disciples, he entered the country of the Picts, and, during his exile of thirty-three years, converted the whole country ; and died at the age of seventy-seven, with the glorious title of the Apostle of the Picts. His submission to the censures of the synod, his profound repentance, and most exemplary life, attoning for his former offences, extorted the remark from his preceptor St. Finian : “ That his example ought to carry as many souls to Heaven, as his wars according to the Latin distich (more correctly from Messingham :)—

In burgo Duno, tumulo tumulantur in uno,
Brigida, Patricius, et Columba Pius.

“ In Down, three Saints one tomb do fill,
Bridget, Patrick, and Columkille.”

Afterwards, the famous John de Courcy, who conquered Ulster, about A.D. 1185, had their remains taken up, and translated into shrines, in the Cathedral Church of Down; which were held in high veneration, until the Lord Deputy of Ireland, Leonard Lord Grey, in 1538 burnt the Church, destroyed the shrines of the Saints, and committed many other sacrileges. He was beheaded himself, three years after, on Tower-hill.

Such was the illustrious Apostle of Ireland, who laboured more abundantly in planting the Gospel, than any other man, perhaps, since the days of St. Paul. I have briefly attempted to vindicate his character from the disgraceful fictions of his Monkish historians, by recurring to his genuine writings, and to the soberer testimony of his contemporary, and favourite disciple; whose excessive veneration, however, for his master seems to have warped his judgment in a few instances. And such was the strictly Evangelical “ religion, pure and undefiled,” inculcated by St. Patrick and his immediate followers ; until it became corrupted, at length, by the disastrous connexion of the Irish Church, with the Church and See of Rome, early in the twelfth century ; when the Irish Arch-bishops were persuaded, through the artifices and intrigues of those active emissaries of the Papacy, Malachy, Christian, Gilbert, &c. to make a surrender of their exclusive privileges to Rome, which hitherto had been handed down inviolate from the days of St. Patrick.

To the flourishing state of Religion and Letters in Ireland, after the Apostolic labours of St. Patrick, honourable and impartial testimony is borne by Camden, Bede, &c.

“ The Disciples of St. Patrick profited so notably in Christianity, that in the succeeding age nothing was held more holy, more learned, than “ the Scottish (or Irish) Monks ; insomuch that they sent out swarms of most holy men into every part of Europe ; [such were Cælius Sedulius, Columba, Columbanus, Colman, Aidan, Gallus, &c.] who founded the abbeys of Lieuxeu in Burgundy ; Bobie, in Italy, Wirtzburg, in Franconia, St Gall, in Switzerland ; and Malmsbury, Lindisfuran, with many others, in Britain. In that age, our Anglo-Saxons flowed from every quarter into Ireland, as to a mart of sound literature. Whence in our accounts of holy men, we frequently read,

Amandatus est ad disciplinam in Hiberniam,
 “He was sent for education to Ireland.” And in the Life of Sulgen, who flourished six hundred years ago, it is said.

Exemplo patrum, commotus amore legendi,
 Igitur ad Hibernos, sophia mirabili claros.

“After the example of his fathers, inspired with love of reading,
 He went to the Irish, renowned for admirable wisdom.”

Camden Hibernia, p. 647, 648.

Bede relates, that “Many of the English, both nobles, and of mean parentage, in the time of Bishops Finan and Colman, went to Ireland for instruction in divinity, and in the greater continuity, or stricter discipline, of monastic life*, and

* “Our monasteries,” says primate Usher, in ancient time, were the seminaries of the ministry; being, as it were, so many colleges of learned Divines, whereunto the people usually resorted for instruction, and the church was wont continually to be supplied with able ministers. Even Giraldus Cambrensis, who was no friend to the monks, acknowledges, that almost all the prelates of Ireland were usually chosen out of the monasteries into the clergy. The benefit of these institutions was not confined to the limits of this island, but extended itself to foreign countries likewise. For this it was, as Bede remarks, that drew Egbert and Ceadda, for example, into Ireland, that they might lead there, diligently, a monastic delighted to visit the cells of the masters for instruction. All of whom, the Scoti, (or Irish) life, in prayers, and continency, and meditation of the Holy Scriptures: and hence were those famous monasteries planted in England, by Aidan, Colman, and others, to which, as well as to the Church, the people eagerly flocked on the Lord's day, not for the refreshing of the body, but for the hearing of the word of God."

---

How strict this discipline was, may appear from the penances imposed on the refractory.

By the rules of Columbanus, who founded the Bobian monastery, in Lombardy, A.D. 610 — "If any brother be disobedient, he shall fast two days with one biscuit and water; if any say, I will not do what is requisite, three days, with one biscuit and water; if any do not ask leave, or give a just excuse, two days, with one biscuit and water." — At the same time, they were taught the inefficacy of extreme mortifications: "What profit is it," said Columbanus, "to be a virgin in body, and not a virgin in mind?" He exhorts them "to profit daily, as they prayed daily, and read daily;" and when King Sigebert made large offers to Columbanus and his companions, to keep them within his dominions in France, they declined his invitation: "We who have left our own, that, according to the Evangelical precept, 'we might follow the Lord,' ought not to embrace the riches of others; lest peradventure we shall be transgressors of the divine command."

Our monks were religious in deed, and not in name only; free from the hypocrisy, pride, idleness, and uncleanness of those evil beasts and slothful bellies, that afterwards succeeded in their room, during the usurpations of the Church of Rome, and under her fostering care. Some of them worked in the garden, others dressed the orchard, Gallus Magnoaldus entertaining most freely, furnished with daily provisions, books, and tuition, gratis." Hist. Eccles. lib. iii. c. 27.

Bede also relates, that "Alfred the Great, King of Northumberland, had the reputation of a man most learned in the Scriptures; for, residing in Scotland (Ireland), he there imbibed celestial wisdom in his attentive soul; having left his native country, and his pleasant fields, that, in diligent exile, he might learn the mystery of Godliness."

Life of St. Cuthbert. This pious and learned Prince, among his other works, translated into the Saxon tongue St. Gregory's pastoral; and in the preface, professed that he was assisted therein by "John, his Mass-Priest," or Chaplain, usually surnamed, Scotus, or Erigena; one of the most learned Divines of his age; and the Annals of Ulster state, that Alfred's mother was Fiona, the daughter of Colman, King of Meath; whence he was called by the Irish, Flanni Fioni, "the son of Fiona"; and they say, that he even composed an Irish poem, beginning thus: "Roidheat Iris Finu Fait." 2 Annal. Ull. p. 129.

and the other followers of Columbanus procured their livelihood by the labour of their own hands; and the monks, in general, practised the apostle's rule, "to work with silence, and eat their own bread."

SECTION IV.

OPPOSITION OF THE IRISH AND BRITISH, TO THE USURPED SUPREMACY OF THE CHURCH OF ROME.

---

THE slow but sure steps, by which the steady and unremitting policy of the Church and See of Rome, from small beginnings, attained to an enormous ascendancy over her sister Churches in the West, have been detailed at length, in the foregoing Introduction, p. 39—63.

The Irish and British Churches, however, from their first establishment, strenuously resisted the claims and encroachments of the Church and See of Rome; nor was the papal jurisdiction acknowledged in England, till the era of the Norman Conquest; and still later in Ireland, till the era of the invasion of Henry II.

I. The first opposition to the Romish claim of Supremacy, began on the part of the Irish. Scđulius, that celebrated Divine, combated successfully its assumed scriptural foundation, in our Lord's grant to St. Peter, Matt. xvi. 18, 19. He observes * that the title of “foundation” is used ambiguously, in the New Testament; and he critically distinguishes the different senses in which it is so applied;—Where it is said, ‘Behold, I lay in Sion for a foundation, a Stone, an approved Stone,’ &c. [Isa. xxviii. 16; 1 Pet. ii. 6.] “It is certain,” says he, “that by the Rock, or Stone, is signified CHRIST: But when the Saints of God’s household are said to be built upon the foundation of the Apostles and Prophets, JESUS CHRIST himself being the chief corner Stone,” [Ephes. ii. 20]; he judiciously infers from thence, that CHRIST is the chief foundation, likewise: “The Apostles,” says he, “are ‘a foundation,’ or rather, CHRIST is the foundation of the Apostles: for CHRIST is the foundation, who is also called the Corner Stone, joining and holding together the two walls; therefore, He is both the [chief] foundation, and the [chief] Corner Stone, because in him the * “Fundamenta”] CHRISTUM et Apostolos et Prophetas. Sedul. in Heb. xi.—Compertum est in petrā, vel lapide, CHRISTUM significari. Id. in Rom. ix.—Apostoli fundamentum sunt, vel CHRISTUS fundamentum est Apostolorum.—Christus est fundamentum, qui etiam lapis dicitur angularis, duos conjungens et continens parietes; ideo Hic fundamentum et summus est lapis; quia in ipso et fundatur et consummatur Ecclesia. Id. in Ephes. ii.—Ut ministros Christi, non ut fundamentum. Id. in 1 Cor. iv.

Church is both founded and finished : and we are to account the Apostles, as Ministers of Christ ; not as the foundation itself." Sedul. in Heb. xi., Rom. ix., Ephes. ii., 1 Cor. iv.

This critical distinction between CHRIST "the Rock," or chief foundation of the Church ; and the Apostles as "foundation stones," laid upon the rock, to form a basis for the Church ; was given in the foregoing Introduction, p. 35, 36, and discovered long before its coincidence with the exposition of Sedulius was known. Such a venerable Irish authority ought surely to have great weight with the Irish Ecclesiastics of the present day.

And the grant itself is thus excellently expounded, by his learned countryman and successor Claudius*.—"Upon this rock will I build my Church ;" that is, upon the LORD THÉ SAVIOUR : who granted to his faithful knower, lover, and confessor, a participation of his own name ; that from * Super HANC PETRAM ædificabo Ecclesiam meam"] id est, super DOMINUM SALVATOREM ; qui fideli suo cognitori, amatori, confessori, participium sui nomen donavit, ut scilicet a petra "Petrus" vocaretur. "ædificatur ecclesia ;"—quia non nisi per fidem et dilectionem Christi, per susceptionem sacramentorum Christi, per observantiam mandatorum Christi ad sortem electorum et æternam pertingitur vitam ; Apostolo attestante, qui ait : "Fundamentum enim aliud nemo potest ponere, præter id quod positum est, qui est CHRISTUS JESUS." Claud. lib. ii. in Matt.

petra ("the rock") he should be called Petrus ("a Stone.") The Church is built [upon the rock]; because, it is only by the faith and love of Christ, by the reception of the sacraments of Christ, by the observance of the commandments of Christ, that we attain to the lot of the elect, and to eternal life; as the Apostle attests, who says, 'for other foundation can no one lay beside that which is laid, which is CHRIST JESUS.' [1 Cor. iii. 11.

Claudius, however, candidly admits a primacy, or precedence in rank, of Peter among the Apostles of the circumcision; but he contends for an equal primacy of Paul, as the Apostle of the Gentiles: "St. Paul," says he *, "names only

* Petrum solum nominat, et sibi comparat [Paulus]; quia primatum ipse accepit ad fundandam Ecclesiam: se quoque, pari modo electum, ut primatum habeat in fundandis Gentium Ecclesiis. Ab his itaque probatum dicit donum, quod accepit a Deo, ut dignus esset habere primatum in prædicatione Gentium; sicut et habeat Petrus in prædicatione Circumcisionis.—Gratiam sibi soli primus vindicat concessam a Deo; sicut et soli Petro concessa est inter Apostolos. ["Non sum illi inferior,"] quia ab uno sumus ambo in unum ministerium ordinati.—Apostolum se CHRISTI titulo prænotavit, ut ex ipsâ, lecturos nominis auctoritate tesseret; judicans omnes qui in Christo crederent, debere sibi esse subjectos.—Claud. in Galat. i., ii., v.—Nam sicut interrogatis generaliter

Peter, and compares him to himself; because, as Peter received a primacy, to found the Church, so was he himself equally elected to have a primacy in founding the Gentile Churches; and by his miraculous gifts from God, proved that he was worthy to have the primacy in preaching to the Gentiles; as Peter had it, in preaching to the circumcision. [Galat. ii. 7; 2 Cor. xi. 5; xii 11, 12.] And therefore, “Paul challenges this grace as granted by God to him alone, as it was granted to Peter alone among the Apostles;” and he esteems himself ‘not inferior to Peter,’ because both of them were ordained by ONE [God] to one ministry.” [Gal. ii. 9; Ephes. iii. 2.]— And “writing to the Galatians, he names himself, in the title of the Epistle, ‘An Apostle of Christ,’ to the end that, by the very authority of that name, he might terrify his readers judging that all believers in Christ ought to be subject to him.” [Gal. i. 1, 11, 12; Rom. i. 1; Ephes. i. 1; 1 Cor. i. 1; ix 1; 1 Tim. ii. 7; Tit. i. 1.]

Claudius, in addition, remarks, that the privileges granted to Peter by CHRIST, were extended equally to all the other Apostles: “As, when our Saviour propounded the question generally to all omnibus, Petrus respondit unus pro omnibus; ita quod Petro DOMINUS respondit, in Petro omnibus respondit. Id. lib. ii. in Matt.

the Apostles, [But whom say ye that I am ?" Matt. xvi. 15,] Peter answered as one for all; so, what our Lord answered to Peter, in Peter he answered to all; and, consequently *, although the power of loosing and binding might seem to be given by the Lord to Peter alone, yet, doubtless, it is to be understood, that it was given to the rest of the Apostles also: as CHRIST himself witnesses; who, appearing to them after the triumph of his passion and resurrection, breathed on them, and said to them all: "Receive ye the Holy Spirit; whose sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whose sins ye retain, they are retained." [John xx. 22, 23.]

Such are the critical explanations of our Lord's famous grant to Peter, founded on the ROCK CHRIST, fully confirming and justifying the foregoing exposition of it, in the INTRODUCTION, p. 27—38. And I am happy to adduce the valuable testimony of these two great Luminaries of the primitive Irish Church; in perfect union with the doctrine of the primitive British Church likewise.

* Quæ solvendi et ligandi potestas, quamvis soli Petro data videatur a Domino; absque ulla tamen dubietate noscendum est, quia et ceteris apostolis datur: Ipso teste, qui post passionis resurrectionisque suæ triumphum, apparens, 'eis insufflavit,' et dixit omnibus, 'Accipite Spiritum Sanctum; quorum remiseritis peccata, remittuntur eis; et quorum retinueritis, relenta sunt.' Id. lib. eod.

Gildas, also, the reputed Briton*, further extends the grant to all the legitimate successors of

---

* That the Historian Gildas Badonicus was rather an Irishman, appears highly probable from the following considerations :—

1. The name Gildas, or Gillas, is exclusively Irish, signifying “a servant ;” as Gilla Patraic, “the servant of Patrick ; Gilla Brighde, “the servant of Bridget ;” Gilla Dia, “the servant of God ;” Gilla Muire, the servant of Mary,” &c. : whence the Irish surnames Gilpatrick, or Kilpatrick; Gilbret, or Gilbert; Gildæ; Gilmur, or Gilmore, &c. And Gildas, as a proper name, occurs frequently in the Irish Annals : as Gildas Albanicus, the disciple of St. Patrick, born A.D. 425, at the same place, Alcluid, near Dunbarton, and died A.D. 520 ; who is frequently confounded with Gildas Badonicus, born the year of the siege of Bath, A.D. 484, and died A.D. 570, according to Usher. Gildas Coemanus, or Gilla Coemhain, an Irish poet of the eleventh century, who wrote a metrical chronology of the kings of Ireland, A.D. 1072. Gildas Modudius, another Irish chronographer, who died A.D. 1143. Gildas Mac Liag, Archbishop of Armagh, born A.D. 1088, died A.D. 1174, &c. &c. Whereas no Briton of the name of Gildas occurs in History, except “the historian of the Britons,” as Bede styles him ; who might have been an Irishman, notwithstanding.

2. The Cambrian Caradoc, who wrote the life of Gildas Badonicus, states, that he was the son of Nave, king of the Scots, or Irish, that he studied the seven arts at Armagh, and afterwards went from Ireland to Britain, where Cadoc, abbot of the Church of Nancarban, engaged him to direct the studies of his scholars, for one year, about 508, which the Apostles. “To the true priest, it is [equally] said, ‘Thou art Peter, and upon this rock will I build my Church;’ to Peter and his successors, the Lord saith, ‘And to thee will I give the keys of the Kingdom of Heaven:’ And likewise to every holy priest it is promised, ‘Whatsoever

---

he did most usefully ; not receiving any salary from the scholars.’” And in an ancient life of Cadoc, in the Tinmouth MS. Lambeth observes, that “Cadoc returning to his monastery, found Gildas, a noble scholar, with a very beautiful little bell, which he brought with him from Ireland.” And the Registry of Glastonbury records, that “Gildas, the principal historian of the Britons, was the brother of Hoel king of Scotia.” And this is confirmed by the Cambrian writers, Galfrid, Giraldus, and Price ; whose concession, in this case, is of great weight and authority, in favour of a foreigner.

3. Gildas, in his history, inveighs against the Britons, with greater acrimony than might have been expected, if they were his own countrymen ; Sacerdotes habent Britanni, sed incipientes, impudentes, raptiores, subdolos, lupos ovinis pellibus ; Reges habent, sed tyrannos ; judices impios ; nec Britanni sunt in bello fortes, nec in pace fideles. “The Britons have clergy ; but they are unlearned, impudent, rapacious, artful, wolves in sheep's clothing. They have Kings, who are tyrants ; Judges, who are impious ; The Britons are neither valiant in war, nor faithful in peace.”

These arguments, which seem decisive, are collected from O'Conor Rerum Hiberniarum, &c. Epist. p. 196—200 ;— Prol. ii. p. 28, 29, &c.

thou shalt bind on earth, shall be also bound in heaven ; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth, it shall be also loosed in heaven." Whence Gildas pronounces of the British Clergy, that " they legitimately obtain the apostolical seat, and may legitimately sit therein, if they retain, in all things, the disposition of the Apostle :" but, on the contrary, " if with unclean feet they usurp the seat of the Apostle Peter, by the demerit of their covetousness, they shall fall into the pestilent chair of the traitor Judas."

For these important extracts we are indebted to the profoundly learned primate Usher, the worthy successor of these illustrious Irish Divines, in his Ancient Religion of the Irish and British, chap. vii. wherein he represents the ancient Britons as principally supplied with bishops, abbots, &c. from the school of St. Patrick ; and the doctrine and discipline of both churches as the same.

2. When that ambitious pontiff, Gregory the Great, though under the mask of the most profound humility, attempted to domineer over the Irish Church, for the first time, in the noted controversy of the three chapters, concerning the writings and characters of Theodorus of Mopsuestia, of Theodore and of Ibas, in the Nestorian heresy, about the person and nature of Christ ; the Irish bishops peremptorily resisted his mandate, and, with good reason on their side, preferred the judgment of other Churches ; as we learn from the Romish Annalist Baronius, in the following account :—

“ All the bishops belonging to Ireland unanimously rose up with the most ardent zeal for the defence of the three chapters. They added also the further crime, that when they had perceived that the Church of Rome had adopted the condemnation of those chapters, along with the fifth synod of Constantinople (A. D. 553), and strengthened it with her concurrence, they receded from her, as well as others in Italy, in Africa, or in other countries, who adhered to the Schismatics: animated with the vain confidence, that they were contending for the Catholic faith, when they defended the decrees of the fourth General Council of Chalcedon (A. D. 451), approving of the three chapters. And so much the more fixedly do they adhere to their error, because whatever Italy suffered by the commotions of wars, by famine, or by pestilence, all these misfortunes befel her, they thought, because she had undertaken to fight for the fifth synod against the Council of Chalcedon.”

And this account is confirmed by Gregory himself, in the answer which he returned to their remonstrance: — “ The commencement of your epistle has notified that you suffer a grievous persecution: — which persecution indeed, while it is not endured for a reasonable cause, profiteth nothing to salvation; and, therefore, it is very unfit that ye should glory in that persecution, as ye call it, by which it is certain that ye cannot be promoted to eternal rewards. And whereas ye write, that since that time, among other provinces, Italy has been most afflicted, ye ought not to object that to her as a reproach; because it is written, IWhom the LORD loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth." (Heb. xii. 6.)

3. When the same Gregory sent Augustine, or Austin the abbot, on a mission to England, to convert the Pagan Saxons to the Christian faith, he gave him a further commission to reduce the British Church to a conformity with the Roman, in the time of celebrating Easter, and in their mode of tonsure, and to submit themselves to the primacy of the Pope of Rome. Austin, accordingly, summoned the British prelates to a conference, at a place on the edge of Worcestershire (thence called Augustine's Oak), about A. D. 604; but the British bishops and abbots, offended at the haughty demeanour of Austin, who neither rose to meet them, nor saluted them as brethren, but sat, like a pontiff, in his chair, rejected his proposals of accommodation, and disclaimed his jurisdiction. In support of the authority of their ceremonies, they alleged, that they were not only sanctioned by St. Eleutherius the pope, their first instructor, from the very infancy almost of the Church; but had also been observed hitherto, by their holy fathers, the friends of God, and the followers of the Apostles; and, therefore, that they ought not to change them for new Dogmatists.* And Dino, the abbot of Bangor, in the name of the rest, thus meekly disclaimed the papal primacy:—“As to the subjection you require, be thus persuaded of us, that in the bond of love and charity we are all subjects and servants to the Church of God (yea, to the Pope of Rome, and to every good Christian) to help them forward, both by word and deed, to become the children of God. Other obedience than this we know not to be due to him whom you term the Pope; and this obedience we are ready to give both to him and to every good Christian, continually. Besides, we are governed, under God, by the Bishop of Caerleon, who is appointed to oversee us in spiritual matters.”

To which Austin (says Milton, in his History of England) thus presaging, some say menacing, replies:—“Since ye refuse to accept of peace with your brethren, ye shall have war from your enemies: and since ye will not, with us, preach the word of life to whom ye ought; from their hands ye shall receive death.” This fell out accordingly; for many years were not past, when Ethelfrid, * Auctorizabant suas ceremonias non solum a S. Eleutherio, papa, primo institutore suo, ab ipsâ pâne infantâ Ecclesiae dicatas; verum a sanctis patribus suis, Dei amicis, et apostolorum sequacibus, hactenus observatas; quas non deberent mutare propter novos dogmatistas.—This appeal to the authority of Pope Eleutherius, supports the authenticity of his letter to king Lucius, before, p. 107.

king of Northumberland, either of his own accord, or instigated by Austin or his Clergy, made war on the Britons; and, when ready to give the onset on their forces at Caerlegion, or West Chester, he observed a company of men, not habited for war, standing together, in a place of some safety, and by them a squadron armed; and finding, on enquiry, that they were priests and monks of Bangor assembled there, after three days fasting, to pray for the good success of their force against him:—therefore they first, said he, shall feel our swords; for they who pray against us fight heaviest against us by their prayers, and are our dangerousest enemies; and, with that, turns his first charge against the monks. Brockmail, the captain set to guard them, quickly turns his back, and leaves about 1200 monks to a sudden massacre, whereof scarce 50 escaped.” Usher dates this massacre A. D. 612, or A. D. 613; and Bede says it happened long after the death of Austin, who died Archbishop of Canterbury, in A. D. 617; and therefore, probably, about A. D. 620, the commencement of the persecutions of the Church, for a period of 1260 years, by the Papal and Mahometan powers, foretold Daniel vii. 24, 25; xii. 7; Rev. xi. 2, 3. See Hales’ New Analysis of Chronology, vol. ii. pp. 547—549; 566—568; or his Synopsis of the Signs of the Times.

4. An attempt was made, about the same time, by some Missionaries, sent over to assist Austin by Pope Gregory, to prevail on the Irish bishops to submit, in the foregoing points, to the authority of the See of Rome; but it proved equally unsuccessful. Their address, however, was highly respectful, in the epistle they wrote on the occasion: * — “ Laurentius, Mellitus, and Justus, bishops, servants of the servants of God, to our Lords and dearly beloved brethren, the bishops and abbots throughout all Scotia (Ireland);” and in it they complain of the aversion of their countrymen in England: — “ We knew the Britons [and hoped to find the Scots (or Irish) better disposed]; but we learned, by means of Daganus the bishop, coming [from Ireland] into this island, and Columbanus, the abbot in Gaul, that they differ in nothing from the Britons in their conversation; for Daganus, the bishop, coming to us, not only would not eat with us, but not even in the same lodging in which we dined.”

And Columbanus, the abbot, wrote a letter to pope Gregory himself, reproving his innovations

* Dominis charissimis fratribus, episcopis vel abbatibus, per universam Scotiam; Laurentius, Mellitus et Justus episcopi, servi servorum Dei—Sed cognoscentes Britones—Scottos vero per Daganum episcopum in hanc insulam, et Columbanum abbatem in Gallis venientem, nihil discrepare a Britonibus, in eorum conversatione didicimus: nam Daganus episcopus, ad nos veniens, non solum cibum nobiscum, sed nec in eodem hospitio quo versemur, sumere voluit. Laurent. apud Bed. lib. ii. cap. 4.

with great freedom. In a letter to his Gallican brethren he says: "What the western churches think of the pascal controversy, I have signified to the pope."* And on the subject of the three chapters he wrote afterwards to Pope Boniface IV. at the instigation of Agilulf, king of the Lombards, in the year 612; the letter itself deserves to be recorded as a curious monument of the extravagant adulation usually offered to the popes at that time, of the formidable powers they assumed, and of the sage advice which a simple ecclesiastic dared to offer to this mighty potentate.

The title, or quaint superscription, is as follows in the original, of which an extract is furnished by O'Conor, Epist. Nunc. pp. 134, 135, 138. Pulcherrimo omnium totius Europæ Ecclesiarum Capiti, Papæ prædulci, Præcelso Præsuli, Pastorum Pastori, Reverendissimo Speculatori; Humillimus Celsissimo, Minimus Maximo, Agrestis Urbano, Micrologus Eloquentissimo, Extremus Primo, Peregrinus Indigenæ, Pauperculus Præpotenti; Mirum dictu! Nova res! Rara Avis! Scribere audet BONIFACIO PATRI Palumbus. †

* Quod occidentales Ecclesiæ de pascha sentiunt, papæ per tres tomos innotui : et adhuc Sancto fratri Vestro Arigio, brevi libello, hoc idem scribere præsumpsi. Columban. Epist. secunda ad Gallos.

† Here Columbanus, alluding to his own name, styles himself, with affected humility, Palumbus, a "wood-quest," or wild pigeon ; instead of Columba, "a dove," or tame pigeon.

The admonition proceeds thus* :—“ Watch. therefore, pope ; I beseech thee, watch ; and again * Quartam Epistolam ad Bonifacium IV. scripsit Columbanus, instigante Longobardarum rege Agilulfo, contra trium capitulorum susceptionem, in qua his verbis pontificem alloquitur :—“ Vigila itaque quæso, papa, vigila, et iterum dico, vigila. Te totum expectat, qui potestatem habes omnia ordinandi, bellum instituendi, duces excitandi, arma corripi jubendi, aciem instruendi, tuba undique sonandi, certamen, demum, te in fronte gradiente, incundi.

---

Vos prope cœlestes estis, et Roma orbis terrarum, caput est Ecclesiarum, salva loci Dominicæ resurrectionis singulari prærogativa. Et ideo, sicut magnus honor vester est pro dignitate cathedræ, ita magna cura vobis necessaria est, ut non perdatis vestram dignitatem propter aliquam perversitatem. Tamdiu enim potestas apud vos erit, quamdiu recta ratio permanserit. Nemo nescit qualiter Salvator noster, S. Petro regni cœlorum contulit claves, et vos per hoc forte, superciliosum nescio quid, præ cœteris, vobis majoris autoritatis, ac in divinis rebus, potestatis, vindicatis. Noveritis minorem fore potestatem vestram, apud Dominum, si vel cogitatis hoc in cordibus vestris ; quia unitas fidei in toto orbe, unitatem fecit potestatis et prærogativæ. Jam vestra culpa est, si vos deviasti de vera fiducia, et primam fidem irritam fecistis. Merito vestri juniores vobis resistunt, et merito vobiscum non communicant, donec perditorum memoria deleatur, et oblivioni tradatur. Si enim hæc certa magis quam fabulosa sunt, versa vice, filii vestri in caput conversi sunt, vos vero in caudam, quod etiam dici dolor est. Ideo et vestri erunt judices, qui semper orthodoxam fidem servaverunt, quicunque illi fuerint ; etiamsi Juniores vobis videantur.” — “ Nulum fuisse in Hibernia hæreticum, nullum Judæum, nullum schismaticum testor ; fides enim Catholica sicut a vobis pri-

I say, watch. The whole world looks up to thee, who hast the power of ordaining all things, of making war, of exciting captains, of ordering suddenly to arms, of drawing up an army, of sounding the trumpet every where, of entering, in fine, the front of the battle. You are almost celestial; and Rome the head of the churches of the globe, saving the singular prerogative of [Jerusalem] the place of our Lord's resurrection. And, therefore, as your honour is great, in proportion to the dignity of your see, so is great care necessary for you not to lose your dignity on account of any perversity."

And he continues to warn him of the mischievous consequences of overweening pride and superciliousness.

" For so long will you retain power, as long as right reason shall thoroughly direct you. No one is ignorant in what manner our Saviour gave to St. Peter the keys of the kingdom of heaven; and you, perhaps, in consequence of this, assume an unaccountable arrogance of greater authority over others, and power in spirituals. But know, that your power with THE LORD will be less, if you ever think so in your heart; because it was the unity of faith in the whole world which gained you unity of mum, SS. scilicet Apostolorum successoribus, tradita est, inconcussa tenetur."

Columb. Epist. IV. in Collect. Sacris Lovanii, 1667, or O'Conor, Epist. Nuncup. pp. 134, 135, 138, 139.

power and prerogative. So that now, it is your fault, if you have deviated from the true faith, and made void your first faith. Justly do your juniors resist you, and justly do they not communicate with you, until the memory of your destructive [decrees] be blotted out, and consigned to oblivion ; for if these charges be certain, and not groundless, by a remarkable reverse, your sons are converted into the head, and you into the tail (Deut. xxviii. 13.) ; which is grievous even to be mentioned. Therefore shall they also be your judges (Matt. xii. 27.) who have always kept the Catholic faith, whoever they be ; even although they may seem to be your juniors." And he explicitly asserts the orthodoxy of his own country :— " In Ireland there has been neither heretic, nor Jew, nor schismatic ; for there the Catholic faith is maintained unshaken, according as it was first delivered by you, namely, the successors of the holy apostles."

This frank and honourable testimony of a most competent judge, to the orthodoxy of the primitive Irish Church, so undauntedly addressed to a pontiff, both able and willing to disprove it, if unfounded, is of the highest value. It also completely refutes the monkish tales of the interference of former popes, Cælestine, &c. to put down the Pelagian heresy in Ireland. Her own synods were fully equal thereto ; as we have seen in the case of Colum-kille.

5. In the British Church, the controversy about keeping Easter, and the mode of tonsure, according to the rites of the Church of Rome, was revived not long after, by her partizans, in consequence of the letter of Pope Honorius, A. D. 625, to the British and Irish Churches on that subject ; but the Irish Bishop Aidan, and his successor Finan, settled in Northumberland, strenuously opposed the innovation ; pleading that they could not keep Easter according to the Romish rite, without violating the custom of their own country ; and Colman, the third in succession, Archbishop of York, after a formal conference on the subject with Wilfrid, the Pope's advocate, at the synod of Strenshal, in Yorkshire, held A. D. 664, when Oswy, the king of Northumberland, present at the conference, was intimidated by the apprehension of exclusion from Heaven, if he offended Saint Peter, who kept the keys, by deciding against the Pope (as artfully suggested by Wilfrid). Colman, rather than acquiesce, relinquished his see in favour of Wilfrid ; and returned to Ireland, his native country, with all his followers.

In what detestation the arrogant claims and encroachments of Papal Rome were held, in Wales especially, we learn from the poems of Taliessin, the bard, who flourished about A. D. 620, according to Usher.

1. *

“ Woe be to that priest, yborn,
 That will not cleanly weed his corn,
     And preach his charge among ;
 Woe be to that shepherd, I say,
 That will not watch his fold alway,
     As to his office doth belong ;
 Woe be to him that doth not keep
 From Romish wolves his erring sheep,
     With staff and weapon strong.

2. †

“ What is the name of the Porter [of Heaven] ?
 Who is the Intercessor ?
 The great and beneficent Son of Mary.”

At length, in the course of the eighth century, the Irish and Picts were prevailed on, principally by Adamnanus, to conform to the Romish usage in these points ; and the Britons, in the course of the ninth. The question, however, was still kept afloat ; for in the days of Methodius, Patriarch of

* Gwaér offeiriad byd
 Nys engreisstia gwyd
     Ac ny phregetha :
 Gwae ny chsidw ey gail
     Ac nys areilia :
 Gwae ny cheidw ey dheuaid
 Rac bleidhie, rhufeniaid Aiffon gnwppa.

Chronicle of Wales, p. 254.

† Pwy eneu y porthawr ?
 Pwy y periglawr ?
 Y Fab Mair meuinfawr.

Constantinople, A. D. 842, “ Certain clergy, who dwelt in the isles of the Ocean, and the utmost borders of the habitable world, are said to have repaired thither, to enquire some ecclesiastical traditions, and the perfect and exact computation of Easter; as we learn from the Greek writers of Chrysostom’s life: they evidently preferring the authority of the Greek Church to the Roman.”—Usher’s Religion of the Ancient Irish, chap. x. p. 110, 111.

6. The Romanists boast of the great success of Austin in converting the Pagan Savons to Christianity; for which he was rewarded with the see of Canterbury; but the principal merit of their conversion is due to the zealous labours of Irish Missionaries. In justice to them Primate Usher observes (Ancient Religion of the Irish, p. 112):—“ St. Aidan and St. Finan deserve to be honoured by the English nation with as venerable a remembrance as Austin the monk and his followers; for by the ministry of Aidan was the kingdom of Northumberland recovered from Paganism (whereunto belonged then, beside the shire of Northumberland, and the lands beyond it unto Edinburgh Frith, Cumberland also, and Westmoreland, Lancashire, Yorkshire, and the bishopric of Durham); and by the means of Finan, not only was the kingdom of the East Savons (which contained Essex, Middlesex, and half of Hertfordshire) regained, but also the large kingdom of Mercia, which compreh-hended under it Gloucestershire, Leicestershire, Worcestershire, Rutlandshire, Northamptonshire, Lincolnshire, Huntingdonshire, Bedfordshire, Buckinghamshire, Oxfordshire, Staffordshire, Derbyshire, Shropshire, Nottinghamshire, and the other half of Hertfordshire.

“The Scottish (or Irish) that professed no subjection to the Church of Rome (proceeds Usher), were they that sent preachers for the conversion of those countries, and ordained bishops to govern them; namely, Aidan, Finan, and Colman successively, for the kingdom of Northumberland; for the East Saxons, Cedd (brother to Ceadda, the Bishop of York); for the middle Angles, which inhabited Leicestershire, and the Mercians, Diuma (for “the paucity of priests,” saith Bede, “constrained one bishop to be appointed over two people”); and after him Cellach and Trumhere.

“And these, with their followers, notwithstanding their division from the Church of Rome, for their extraordinary sanctity of life and painfulness of preaching the Gospel (wherein they went far beyond those of the other side, Wilfrid and Cuthbert, &c. that afterward thrust them out, and entered upon their labours) were exceedingly revered by all that knew them; Aidan especially, who, although he would not keep Easter contrary to the manner of them that sent him (says Bede), yet he was careful diligently to perform the works of faith, godliness, and love, according to the manner used by all godly men. Whereupon he was worthily beloved by all, even by them also who thought otherwise of Easter than he did; and was held in reverence, not only by them that were of meaner rank, but also by the bishops themselves, Honorius of Canterbury, and Felix of the East Angles."

This influence of the Irish Missionaries abundantly refutes the boastings of the Romanists, as to the extent of the conversions effected by their Missionaries in England.

II. Hence, the kings of Saxon race strenuously maintained their own ecclesiastical supremacy, in opposition to the claims of the see of Rome. When Wilfrid, the papal advocate, who was appointed Bishop of Northumberland in Colman's room, had been deprived of his see for contumacy, by the authority of Ecfrid the king, and the Archbishop of Canterbury, and threatened to appeal to Rome, in A. D. 679, his appeal was fruitless; for the pope's bull only excited general surprize and indignation; and it ended in his banishment. Whereupon, not daring to return to the north, he repaired to the Isle of Wight, and planted the Gospel among the South Saxons.

How assiduously the union of Church and State was maintained in their laws, enacted in the Witenagemottes, or "assemblies of their wise men," or national parliaments, will appear from the following instances: —

1. Ina, king of the West Saxons, married a second wife, Guala, the daughter of Cadwaladar, the last king of the Britons, as we have seen, p. 112 ; and in her right he inherited Cambria, thenceforth called by her name Wales, Cornwall, and the British crown. He was the first who was crowned King of the Anglo-Saxons and British conjointly, A. D. 712 ; and the first measure of this wise prince, “ by the advice and consent of all the bishops and chiefs, and the wise men and people of the whole kingdom,” was to unite the two nations by intermarriages as speedily as possible ; which he effected.

The preamble of his code of laws, enacted A. D. 696, marks the close alliance between the Church and State in those early times :—

“ I, Ina, by the grace of God, King of the West Saxons, with the counsel and learning of the bishops Ceadda and Eakenwold, with all my senators and wise elders of the people, and with numbers of the clergy, counsellors, concerning the salvation of our souls and the establishment of our nation.”

The very first statute in this code was for the propagation of Christianity.

“ Every infant shall be baptized within thirty days ; and if not baptized, the parents shall be fined thirty marks. If the child shall die without baptism, they shall forfeit all their goods.”

This prince, however undesignedly, furnished an opening for Papal encroachments afterwards, A. D.

727, in his grant of Peter's Pence to the Pope, for the support of a Saxon college at Rome. — Anderson on Commerce, vol. i. p. 28.

2. Offa, king of Mercia, A. D. 757, also enacted a code of laws upon the same principles. He granted to the Pope a perpetual tribute of Peter's Pence, out of every house in the kingdom; for consenting, perhaps, says Huntingdon, to translate the primacy of Canterbury to Litchfield, in his own dominions. Thus artfully did the Popes commence their encroachments, by working on the superstition or the ambition of these princes.

3. Ethelbert, king of the West Saxons, A. D. 860, revived and enlarged the code of Ina. — The next of their legislators was his brother.

4. The illustrious Alfred, A. D. 871. This wise and good prince, and actually the first king of all England, in the great Council held A. D. 867, collected all the laws of Ina, Offa, and Ethelbert together, and committed them to writing. The preamble grounds their validity on the Decalogue, in the 20th chapter of Exodus; and on the decree of the first Council of Jerusalem, addressed to the Gentile Churches of Antioch, Syria, and Cilicia (Acts xv. 6—31); both of which it recites: justly considering the DIVINE LAWS as the basis of British laws; and while his code inculcated and sanctioned true religion in his dominions, it prohibited idolatry, under severe penalties; and thereby virtually rejected the communion of the modern

Church of Rome; asserting the prerogative of the crown and the privilege of parliament, with respect to religious establishments, in strict consistency with our 37th Article of religion.

5. Edmund, the grandson of Alfred the Great, A. D. 942, inherited his religious spirit. His first law begins thus: — “I Edmund, king, signify to all people, old and young, within my dominion, that, with the advice of my counsellors, as well amongst the clergy as the laity, that it is our intention to uphold the Christian Religion as much as possible.”

6. Edgar, A. D. 959, in like manner thus prefacing his laws: — “Laws which King Edgar made in full senate, to the glory of God, the honour of the king, and the advantage of the state.”

7. His son Ethelred, A. D. 1000, likewise: — “This is the enactment which the king of the English, and his counsellors, priests as well as laymen, ordain,

“First, That we should honour one God, and diligently keep one Christian faith, and entirely reject all Paganism; — for a Christian king, in a Christian nation, is the vicar of Christ; and should diligently avenge an injury done to Christ.”

The Danish kings also trod in the steps of their Saxon predecessors.

A. D. 1017. “The enactment of Canute, king of England, Denmark, &c. with the advice of his counsellors: — First, Above all things, to love one

God, and maintain one Christian faith unanimously, and to love and honour the king. We strictly forbid all Paganism, — for Paganism is idolatry; and we study always, by every means, how to advance the national welfare, and how to exalt the true Christian faith."

S. The last of the Saxon line, Edward the Confessor, A. D. 1042, framed a code of laws in Latin, collected from the best laws of his predecessors; which forms a considerable part of the existing Common Law of England, so called from its being conducive to the common weal.

This prince, though a devotee to the Church, whence he derived the name of Confessor, appointed both bishops and abbots by his own authority. Of this Ingulphus, a contemporary writer, gives a remarkable instance, in the nomination of Wulgata, to be Abbot of Croyland Abbey; whom the king constituted, by delivering him the pastoral staff of his predecessor; and sent a letter to the sub-prior and monks of the abbey, informing them that "he had supplied the loss they had lately suffered by the death of their father Brichtmer, the abbot, by setting over them, as their prelate, father Wulgata." Patrum Wulgatum vobis in prælatum preficiendo. And Ingulphus positively declares, That the primitive canonical usage of first electing bishops by the deans and prebendaries of the Cathedral Churches of which they were to be made bishops, and of abbots, by the monks of the convents of which they were to be made abbots, had long since been disused or neglected. A multis itaque annis retroactis, nulla electio prælatorum erat merè libera et canonica; sed omnes dignitates tam episcoporum quam abbatum, per annulum et baculum, regis cura pro suâ complacentiâ conferebat. See Gale's edition of Ingulphus, p. 62—64; or Baron Maseres' valuable edition of Gesta Guillelmi Ducis Normannorum, enriched with his notes. 1783, quarto, p. 234.

This curious sketch of the free and independent spirit of the Saxon laws, is chiefly taken from an excellent tract: The Rights of the Church attested by Historical Documents, 1813. Stockdale, jun.

III. We may date the first introduction of Papal jurisdiction into England, from the era of the Norman conquest, A. D. 1066; when the authority of the Pope was first called in by the Conqueror, to promote his political views: — 1. To sanction his unjust invasion of England, by a consecrated banner from Pope Alexander II.; — 2. To humble the Saxon prelates and clergy, who were hostile to his government; — and, 3. To aggrandize his Norman and Italian prelates, who, being foreigners, and trained in the principles and practice of slavery, had contracted a reverence for it, and took pleasure in riveting the chains of a free-born people, who long resisted his usurpation: Blackstone, ibid.

By the authority of the Pope's legate, now for the first time introduced into England, he deposed that rich, profligate, and intriguing prelate, Stigand,* Archbishop of Canterbury, for the alleged offence of Simony; but his chief crime was his attempt, with the English nobility, to set up Edgar Atheling, the rightful heir to the crown, in opposition to the Conqueror. In his room William appointed Lanfranc, of Lombardy: a prelate indeed of pre-eminent piety and worth, who, by his influence, prevailed on the king to remit many rigorous exactions and impositions upon the people, and feared not to oppose the king's brother Odo, in his encroachments upon the Church. This heroic prince, indeed, always exercised the established prerogative of appointing all the bishops and ab-

* “ King Edward the Confessor, a little before his death, lying speechless two days, the third day, after a deep sleep, he was heard to pray that if it were a true vision, not an illusion, which he had seen, God would give him strength to utter it, otherwise not. Then he related how he had seen two devout monks, who he knew in Normandy, who had lived well and died well; who, appearing, told him they were sent messengers from God, to foretel that, because the great ones of England, dukes, lords, bishops, and abbots, were not ministers of God, but ministers of the Devil, God had delivered the land to their enemies; and when he desired that he might reveal this vision, to the end that they might repent, it was answered, They neither will repent, nor will God pardon them. At this relation, others trembling, Stigand, the simonious Archbishop, whom Edward, much to blame, had suffered many years to sit primate of the Church, is said to have laughed, as at the feverish dream of a doating old man. But the event proved true.” — Milton's Hist. of England.

bots, both in England and Normandy, but with much wisdom and discretion ; for he usually called a meeting of bishops, abbots, and other wise counsellors, to enquire of them the persons whom they thought fittest to be entrusted with the government of the Church, for learning, morals, and prudence ; and he generally appointed the persons whom they agreed in recommending. Denique illum, quem pro ritæ merito et sapientiæ doctrinâ, provisio sapientum elegebat, benevolus rex dispensatorem et rectorem episcopatus vel abbatiae constituebat. Ordericus vitalis. — Maseres, Excerpta, p. 233.

In the fourth year of his reign, A. D. 1070, by the advice of his barons, he chose twelve men from each county to report to him the English laws and customs. In their report, it seems, the duty of the king was thus prescribed : —

“ It is the duty of a Christian king to be in the place of a father to a Christian nation ; and to be, in prudence and tutelary care, as he is styled, The Vicar of Christ ; and it behoves him to love Christianity with his whole soul, and to avoid Heathen doctrines, — to venerate and diligently defend the Church of God, and as diligently as possible to pacify and settle his people in the true doctrine ; and from this much good will result to him.” When he swore to maintain the laws of Edward the Confessor, he declared, “ A king, because he is the vicar of the Supreme King, is ordained for this purpose, to rule and defend the kingdom and people of the Lord, and above all the holy Church (See Jewel's Defence of his Apology, p. 522.) ; and accordingly, when the imperious Hildebrand, or Pope Gregory VII, after he had humbled the Emperor of Germany, and awed the other sovereigns of Europe, required William to swear fealty to the Pope, as holding the crown of England under the papal grant, he pereniptorily refused :-- “ I never paid (said he in his letter) nor will I pay you homage ; because I neither paid it myself, nor do I find that my predecessors paid it to your predecessors.” Knowing his resolute character, Hildebrand thought fit to waive his claim for the present ; and so jealous was William of his royal prerogative, that he never would suffer a synod to be held without his own permission ; and declared that no archbishop or bishop in his realm should pay any regard to the Pope's mandate.

However, by the introduction of the despotic feudal system of the continent, in violation of the common law, whereby the lands of all private proprietors were declared to be holden of the prince ; and also by separating the ecclesiastical from the civil jurisdiction, and ordering all causes relating to religion to be tried in the bishop's courts, according to the canon law ; contrary to the former usage, whereby the bishop and aldermen, conjointly, in every shire, administered justice to the clergy and laity alike, according to the Saxon laws : he opened a door for the introduction of Romish jurisdiction, which his successors were long unable to shut. The use indeed of the canon law, immediately led to this, by promoting appeals to Rome in doubtful cases, where this law was best understood and expounded. And that such appeals began at this time, we may collect from the act of his son, William Rufus, A. D. 1087, prohibiting all appeals to the Court of Rome, as “unheard of in his realm, and quite contrary to its usages.”

When Henry I. the youngest son of the Conqueror, was crowned king, A. D. 1100, in prejudice to the claim of his eldest brother Robert; Anselm, the Archbishop of Canterbury, and creature of the Pope, taking advantage of his precarious title, extorted from him the nomination to bishoprics, — that ancient prerogative of the crown.

Next Stephen, the usurper, in A. D. 1135, after a long contest with the bishops, was forced to submit to an appeal from his authority to the Pope's legate. Until at length, in the precarious reign of king John, that imperious pontiff, Innocent III. imposed upon this pusillanimous prince a voluntary surrender of his crown to Pandulph, the Pope's legate, to be held in future by him as a vassal of the Holy See, at an annual rent of one thousand marks, A. D. 1213.

In the reign of Henry III. the parliament held A. D. 1244, objected to the exactions of the legates,— alleging the poverty of the kingdom and of the clergy; and observed that the Pope's impositions were burdensome to the kingdom ; and that if he wanted relief, he ought to apply to a General Council.

Edward I., A.D. 1272, a wise and magnanimous prince, was the first who set himself in earnest to shake off this foreign yoke. He would not permit his bishops to attend a General Council till they swore not to receive the papal benediction : he set at nought all the Pope's bulls and processes ; attacking Scotland in defiance of the one ; and seizing the temporalities of his clergy, who, under pretext of the other, refused to pay a tax imposed by parliament. He enacted the statute of Mortmain, in the sixth year of his reign, against bequests of ecclesiastical property to the Church ; thereby closing the great gulph that threatened to swallow up all the land of the kingdom ; and, in the thirty-fifth, was passed the first act against papal provisions, grants, or bulls. And when one of his subjects had obtained a bull of excommunication against another, he ordered him to be executed as a traitor, according to the ancient law. And, with his consent, a letter was written by parliament to Pope Boniface VIII ; in which the Lords and Commons declared, that they were bound by oath to observe and defend the liberties, customs, and ancient laws of the realm, and would maintain them with all their power and might ; and that they neither did, nor ever would, nor ought, to suffer the king to do any thing to the subversion of the statutes of the kingdom, and to the prejudice of its liberties, customs, and laws.— Such was the pious and patriotic spirit which actuated this early Roman Catholic parliament!

In the weak reign of Edward II. the Papal See endeavoured to renew their encroachments, which were manfully resisted by the parliament; and one of the charges on which that unhappy prince was deposed, A. D. 1327, was, That he had given allowance to the bulls of the See of Rome.

His son Edward III. treading in the steps of his grandfather, set himself seriously to retrench the papal encroachments. In the seventeenth year of his reign, A. D. 1343, the earls, barons, knights, and burgesses, in full parliament, wrote a letter to Pope Clement VIII. complaining grievously of the collation of ecclesiastical benefices upon foreigners, to the impoverishment of the nation, and the detriment of religion and morals; and praying his Holiness to revoke all such collations and provisions, that fit men of the natives might supply the cures; otherwise, that they would themselves take speedy methods of redress; but receiving a contemptuous and menacing answer, the king and parliament passed the famous statute of Provisors that same year, prohibiting all such provisions and collations within the realm, upon pain of imprisonment or death, to any such person as shall, for the time to come, present, or admit any person or persons so presented by the Pope, to the prejudice of the king's royal prerogative; and accordingly writs were directed to the archbishops, bishops, and others concerned, strictly forbidding them to act contrary to this statute."

Notwithstanding this act, the Pope, next year, sent two cardinals, with provisions for benefices next vacant, to the value of two thousand marks; but the king and nobles sent them back, with letters, purporting a full resolution to withstand them; and accordingly this act was followed by others more express and severe, (25 Edw. III. c. 6; 27 Edw. III. stat. 1, c. 1; 38 Edw. III. stat. 1, c. 4; stat. 2, c. 1, 2, 3, 4); enacting, 1. That the Court of Rome should not collate or present to any bishopric or benefice in England; — 2. That whoever disturbed any patron in the presentation of a living, by virtue of a papal provision; — or, 3. Who should cite the king or any of his subjects to answer in the Court of Rome, for opposing such provision, should pay fine and ransom to the king, according to his will and pleasure."

These strong proceedings were heinously resented by the Holy See, but in vain; and afterwards, when Pope Urban V. attempted to revive the claim of vassalage and annual tribute, conceded by king John, it was unanimously agreed, by all the estates of the nation, in the parliament held 40 Edw. III., That king John's grant was null and void; having been given without the concurrence of parliament, and in violation of his coronation oath; and all the temporal Lords and the Commons engaged, That if the Pope should attempt, by process or otherwise, to maintain such usurpations, they would resist and withstand him with all their power ; and by the statute of 18 Edw. III. the Pope was declared “the common enemy of the king and realm.”*— See Daniel’s Hist. of England, and Blackstone’s Comment. b. iv. c. 8.

This wise prince also endeavoured to check the rage for pilgrimages to Rome, Compostella, &c. which drained the nation of immense sums of money. When many of his subjects applied for licences to attend the jubilee at Rome, A. D. 1350, he granted them, only on condition that they should take with them no more money than was sufficient for their reasonable expences. Rymer’s Fædera. — How necessary the restriction was, we may judge from the Cardinal Bishop of Winchester, afterwards licenced by Henry VI. to attend the council of Basil, A. D. 1433, who took with him ten thousand pounds sterling.

In the reign of Richard II. it was found necessary to strengthen and sharpen those laws. In his first year, A. D. 1377, Parliament enacted, That the Pope’s collector should no longer gather the first fruits of ecclesiastical benefices, and the clergy no longer pay them; and 2. That no Englishman should farm any benefice for an alien; both, under the penalty of the statute of provisors. And the statute of 16 Richard II. c. 5. enacts, That “whoever procures at Rome, or elsewhere, any translations, processes, excommunications, bulls, instruments, or other things against the king, his crown and realm; and all persons aiding and assisting therein, shall be put out of the king’s protection, and their lands and goods forfeited to the king’s use; and they shall be attached by their bodies to answer to the king and his council; otherwise, process of præmunire facias shall be made out against them, as in other cases of provisors.”

* In a later parliament, 49 Edw. III. the papal usurpations were declared to be the cause of all the plagues, famines, injuries, and poverty of England! — Anderson, Hist. Commerce, vol. 1. p. 204.

This important act is generally referred to in all subsequent statutes, under the title of the statute of Præmunire; a barbarous word for præmonere; from the leading words of the writ or process, præmunire facias, A. B. &c. “Take care to forewarn A. B. that he appear before us, to answer the contempt wherewith he stands charged.” And hence, not only the writ, but the offence itself of maintaining the papal power, which first gave rise thereto, in common speech, is denominated præmunire; as judiciously remarked by Blackstone, ibid.

When the English Parliament deposed Rich. II. among other charges, for procuring “a bull from the Pope, for the more certain observance of some statutes made by him and his parliament,” (which they considered as derogatory to the regal dignity, and a wrong to the nation) they secured the election of Henry IV. by passing a declaratory act in the first year of his reign, A. D. 1390, "That the crown of the realm of England, and the jurisdiction belonging thereto, and also the whole realm itself, still is, and in all past times hath been, at such liberty, and enjoyed such an indifferent act and absolute prerogative, that neither the Pope, nor any other prince or potentate out of the kingdom, ought or may intrude himself, or intermeddle with the rule and governnment of the same ;" and, accordingly, an act of settlement was passed by this parliament, entailing the crown upon King Henry and his legitimate heirs.

And by the statute of 2 Hen. IV. c. 3, all persons who accept any provision from the Pope, to be exempt from canonical obedience to their proper ordinary, are also subject to the penalties of præmunire.

The statute of præmunire so exasperated Pope Boniface IX. who heinously resented the foregoing disqualifying statutes of mortmain and provisors, that he wrote an angry letter of complaint against it, as execrabile statutum, "an execrable statute ;" and the enaction, fædum et turpe facinus, "a foul and base deed." This, however, did not prevent Henry from enforcing it and the foregoing statutes. Upon the petition of the Commons, in his ninth parliament, he enacted, "That no monies should be carried out of the kingdom to the court of Rome ; and that if any of the Pope's collectors should levy any money within the realm, for the first fruits* of any ecclesiastical dignity; he should incur the penalty of the statute of provisors; that the elections and presentations to benefices should be free; and no patrons should be interrupted in their right, either by the king or the pope; that all statutes against provisors, and translations of bishoprics and archbishoprics, should be strictly observed and executed upon all offenders; and that no clergyman should sue for any benefice, but in the king's court. These acts were so gratifying to the Parliament, that they granted the king a general subsidy through the whole nation.

Pope Martin V. having sent over into England a bull, requiring a tenth from the clergy, to carry on the war against the Bohemian heretics; in the fifth year of Henry V., A. D. 1418, the parliament rejected the Pope's jurisdiction, enacting, "That the church, and all estates of the realm of England, should enjoy their ancient liberties, which were not repealed, nor repealable by the common law." And they further enacted, That "the alien priories, or abbies of foreign monks, should be suppressed, and their lands given to the crown."—Blackstone, ibid.

About this time, Henry Chicheley, Archbishop

* The first fruits for the See of Durham amounted to two thousand marks. From this we may form some estimate of the immense revenue drained from the kingdom by these impositions alone.

of Canterbury, signalized himself, for opposing the papal jurisdiction. He prevented the king's brother from being made a cardinal and a legate a latere, by the Pope, solely upon the principle of its upholding the mischief of papal provisions, and as being derogatory from the liberties of the English church and nation ; so well expressed in his letter to Henry V. on that subject : that “ he was bound to oppose it by his liegeance, and also to quit himself to God, and the church of this land, of which God and the king had made him a ruler.” And in the reign of Henry VI. he refused to consecrate a bishop of Ely, nominated by Pope Eugenius IV.; he also refused to obey the commands of Pope Martin V. requiring him to exert his endeavours for the repeal of the obnoxious statute of præmunire ; and this refusal so exasperated the Pope, that he issued a bull to suspend him from his office and authority : but the archbishop disregarded it, and appealed from the Pope to a General Council. And so sensible were the nation of their primate's patriotism, that the Lords spiritual and temporal, and also the University of Oxford, wrote letters to the Pope, in his defence ; and the House of Commons addressed the king, to send an ambassador forthwith to his Holiness on the archbishop's behalf, justifying his conduct. Accordingly, in a letter to the Pope, the king thus truly declares his own, and the sentiments of the nation :—“ Be it known to your Holiness, that while I live, by God's assistance, the authorities and usages of the kingdom of England shall never be diminished ; but even if I were willing so to debase myself (which God forbid !), my nobles and the whole people of England will by no means suffer it." Thus did the English nation, at length, spiritedly renounce the usurped civil authority of the See of Rome ; though they still retained the corrupt doctrines of that church, until, about a century after, they were emancipated from these also by the Reformation.

The several steps by which this emancipation from the ecclesiastical supremacy of the church of Rome was begun by Henry VIII. may thus briefly be stated :—

This haughty and bigoted prince, who wrote against Luther and the reformation in Germany, for which he was honoured with the title of Defender of the Faith, by the fallible and short-sighted Clement VII. first took offence at the Pope's brief, Aug. 29, 1529, imperiously requiring the legates Campegio and Woolsey to proceed no further on the question of divorce of the king's marriage with Queen Catherine of Arragon, in England ; but summoning the cause to Rome, and citing the king and queen to appear there in person, or by proxy, before the ensuing Christmas-day. But the king's ambassadors replied to the Pope at Bononia, that the prerogative of the crown of England would not suffer any citation of their royal master to any foreign court; and therefore the king would not allow his cause to be tried at Rome.

The next, was his discovery of the oaths taken by the prelates to the Pope, at their consecration; thus related by Hall, in his Chronicle, p. 205:—

“ The 11th day of Maie, 1532, the kyng sent again for the spekar and twelve of the common house, having with him eight lordes, and said unto them,— ‘ Well, beloved subjectes, we thought that the clergie of our realme had bene our subjects wholy; but now we have well perceived that they be but halfe our subjectes, yea, and scarce our subjectes; for all the prelates, at their consecration, make an othe to the Pope, clene contrarie to the othe that they make to us: so that they seme to be his subjectes, and not ours. The copie of both the othes* I delyver here to you, requyring you to invent * Extract from a Popish Prelate's Oath of Consecration.

1. Ego, N —, electus ecclesiæ N —, ab hac hora in ante, fidelis et obediens ero beato Petro Apostolo, sanctæque Romanæ Ecclesiæ, et Domino nostro, Domino Papæ N, suisque successoribus, canonice intrantibus.

2. Papatum Romanum, et regalia sancti Petri, adjutor ero eis ad retinendum et defendendum (salvo meo ordine) contra omnem hominem.

3. Jura, honores, privilegia, et auctoritatem sanctæ Romanæ Ecclesiæ, domini nostri Papæ, et successorum prædictorum, conservare, defendere, augere, et promovere, curabo.

4. Neque ero in consilio vel facto seu tractatu, in quibus some ordre, that we be not thus deluded of our spiritual subjectes." The openyng of these othes contra ipsum Dominum nostrum, vel eandem Romanam Ecclesiam, aliqua sinistra præjudicialia personarum, juris, honoris, status et potestates eorum, machinentur. Et si talia a quibuscunque tractari vel procurari novero, impediam hoc pro posse; et quanto citius potero, significabo eidem Domino nostro, vel alteri per quem possit ad ipsius notitiam pervenire.

---

5. Regulas sanctorum patrum, decreta, ordinationes sive dispositiones, reservationes, provisiones et mandata apostolica, totis viribus observabo, et faciam ab aliis observari.

6. Hæreticos, schismaticos, et rebelles eidem Domino nostro, vel successoribus prædictis, pro posse, persequar et impugnabo.

Translation.

1. "I, N—, elected — of the Church N—, from this day henceforth will be faithful and obedient to blessed Peter the Apostle, and to the holy Roman Church, and to our lord, the Lord Pope N—, and his successors canonically entering.

2. "The Roman papacy, and the royalties of St. Peter, I will be their assistant to retain and defend (saving mine own order) against every man.

3. "The rights, honours, privileges, and authority of the holy Roman Church, and of our lord the Pope, and his successors aforesaid, I will be careful to preserve, defend, augment, and promote.

4. "Neither will I be [engaged] in counsel, or act, or treaty in which any [measures] may be devised, sinister or prejudicial to their persons, rights, honour, state, and authority. And if I shall know that such are attempted or procured, by any persons whatsoever, I will prevent it according to my ability; and as soon as possible, will give information to our said lord, or to some other, by whose means it may surely come to his knowledge.

(says Hall) was one of the occasions why the Pope, within two yeres following, lost all his jurisdiction in Englande."

---

5. "The rules of the holy fathers, the apostolical decrees, ordinances, or dispositions, reservations, provisions, and mandates, I will, with all my might, observe, and cause to be observed by others."

6. "Heretics, schismatics, and rebels against our said lord, or his successors aforesaid, I will, according to my ability, persecute and impugn."

This is, to all intents and purposes, an oath of allegiance to the papacy, quite and "clene contrary," indeed, to the oath of allegiance to the crown. The Pope, for the time being, is represented as "sovereign lord," whose "royalties, rights, honours, privileges, and authority," the new bishop or prelate swears to "retain, defend, and promote, against every man," even against the king himself, whom he is bound, moreover, to "persecute and impugn," if he be a "heretic or schismatic," against the Church of Rome, or a "rebel against the authority of the papacy.

The only reservation in the oath, is the clause, salvo meo ordine, which does not signify "saving my allegiance to the crown," as designedly mistranslated by the Irish advocates of the papacy, Dr. Butler, titular archbishop of Cashel, Mr. O'Leary, &c. but "saving the rights of my own episcopal order" against papal encroachment or usurpation.

For the oath itself, when first proposed to the German prelates by Boniface, an English monk, usually called the Apostle of Germany, who devoted his services to the See of Rome, and took a voluntary oath of obedience to Pope Gregory II. when he was appointed Archbishop of Mentz, met with violent opposition from the German prelates. In order, therefore, to reconcile them thereto, this saving clause was introduced in the form of the consecration-oath enjoined by Pope Gregory III. A. D.

Accordingly, this same year, the parliament passed an act, prohibiting the payment of annates,

---

731, and published in the Decretals of Gregory IX. and in the Corpus Juris Canonici, Antwerp, 1648; and it is retained in all the succeeding forms of the oath: which are given in Hales on the Political Influence of the Doctrine of the Pope's Supremacy, 1788, Appendix, p. 21—39.

The sixth article of the oath at first ran thus: — “Hæreticos —prosequar et impugnabo.” And is so found in the Roman Pontifical, Venice, 1572. But the word prosequar, “I will prosecute,” being deemed too weak or lax, was changed into persequar, “I will persecute,” in the Pontifical of Clement VIII. Rome, 1595, and is retained in all the succeeding forms.

When Cranmer was appointed Archbishop of Canterbury, he refused to take the persecuting clause; which, therefore was omitted in his oath to the Pope, as follows: —

“ I, Thomas, elected Archbishop of Canterbury, from this hour forward, as before, will be faithful and obedient to the blessed Peter and the holy apostolic Church of Rome, and to my lord, the Lord Clement VII. and his successors canonically entering. I will not be of counsel, consent, or act, that they may lose life or limb, or be taken by evil capture. The counsel they shall entrust to me by themselves or nuncios, to their harm I will not knowingly disclose to any person. The Roman papacy and the royalties of St. Peter, I will be their assistant to retain and defend (saving mine own order) against every man. The legate of the Apostolic See, both going and coming, I will honourably entertain, and in bad necessities assist. When called to a synod, I will come, unless I be prevented by canonical impediment. The freeholds of the Apostles I will visit either personally or by proxy, every year, if the court of Rome be on this side of the Alps; but if beyond, every two years, unless I be absolved by apostolic licence. The mensal possessions belonging to my archbishopric I will neither sell, or first fruits of all ecclesiastical benefices, any longer to the court of Rome. In the next year, nor bestow, nor mortgage, nor invest anew, nor in anywise alienate, without consulting the Roman Pontiff. So help me God, and these holy Gospels of God."

---

Before he took this oath, he made the following protest against any temporal allegiance to the Pope :—

" In the name of God, Amen. Before you, a person authorised, and witnesses, worthy of credit, here present, I, Thomas, elected Archbishop of Canterbury, do say, allege, and in the words here written, do openly, publicly, and expressly protest, That in taking the oath or oaths usually sworn by those elected archbishops of Canterbury, to the supreme pontiff, before my consecration, or at the time thereof, I must consider them as rather formally, than essentially, or in reality, obligatory to obtain it. And it neither is, nor will be, my design or intention, by this oath or oaths, howsoever the words contained in them may sound, to oblige myself, by reason of the same, to say, do, or attempt any thing hereafter that shall be, or seem to be, contrary to the law of God, or contrary to our most illustrious king of England, or the commonweal of this his kingdom of England, or the laws or prerogatives of the same. And that I do not intend, by any oath or oaths of this sort, in any way, to preclude myself from being able freely to speak, consult, and consent, in all and singular matters any how concerning the reformation of the Church of England, or the prerogative of the crown, or the interest of the state, and to execute and reform everywhere, whatever matters in the Church of England shall appear to want reformation. And according to this interpretation and this meaning, and in no other way nor manner, do I protest and profess that I will take said oaths.

" And I do moreover protest, whatever be the oath which my proctor swore in my name heretofore to the supreme Pontiff, that it neither was my will or intention to give him any 1553, all appeals to Rome; and in 1534, the act of Supremacy was passed, declaring the king Supreme power, by virtue of which he might take any oath in my name, contrary or repugnant to the oath taken or hereafter to be taken by me, to the most illustrious king of England aforesaid. And in case he has taken any such contrary or repugnant oath in my name, I do protest that I w<sup>l</sup>sh it to be considered as null and invalid; having been taken without my knowledge and authority.

---

“Which protestations I wish to be considered as repeated and reiterated in all the clauses and sentences of said oaths; from which I do not mean to recede, nor will I any how recede by any word or deed of mine; but I will that they shall always hold good in my favour.”

And the following was his oath to the king for his temporalities.

“I, Thomas Cranmer, renounce and utterly forsake all such clauses, words, sentences, and grants, which I have of the Pope’s Holiness in his bulles of the archbishopric of Canterbury, that in any manner was, is, or may be hurtful or prejudicial to your Highness, your heires, successors, estate, or dignity royal; knowing myself to take and hold the said archbishopric immediately and only of your Highness, and of none other. Most lowly beseeching the same for restitution of the temporalities of the said archbishopric: professing to be faithful, true, and obedient, subject to your said Highness, your heires and successors, during my life. So help me God, and the holy Evangelists.” See the Latin originals, in Strype’s Life of Cranmer, Appendix, No. V. p. 9, or in Hales, ibid. pp. 3—7.

The oath of consecration to the Pope ought surely to be abolished in toto, as an innovation unknown for the first seven centuries, and injurious to the rights of the crown, and of the established Church, by the subsisting statutes of Præmunire.

Head on Earth of the Church of England, and discharging the people of this realm from all dependence on the Pope. Its preamble maintains, That “the Catholic faith is injurious to the souls of men, as well as to the state: the Bishop of Rome, whom some call the Pope, hath long darkened God’s word, that it might serve his pomp, glory, avarice, and ambition, and his tyranny both upon the souls and bodies and goods of Christians; excluding CHRIST out of the care of men’s souls, and princes out of their dominions.”

This was followed up, in the year 1536, by an act for the suppression of all smaller monasteries, abbeys, and religious houses under £200 a year income; and the revenues of 376 such, amounting to £30,000 a year, were granted to the crown, on the king’s promise to employ some part of them, after relieving his own necessities, to other religious uses, such as founding new bishoprics, deaneries, chapters, and the like; and three years after, he obtained the consent of his compliant parliament, in 1539, for dissolving the rest, either by surrendry, forfeiture, or purchase. The whole number suppressed in England and Wales, according to Camden, amounting to 645; 90 colleges, 110 hospitals, and 2374 chantries; the yearly income of all which made £161,000; being above a third part of all our spiritual revenues; beside the value of timber, stock, corn, bells, church plate, and ornaments, &c. which was immense; as we may judge from a single instance : The monastery of St. Edmundbury alone furnished five thousand marks of gold and silver, beside precious stones of great value.

From their revenues the king, according to his promise, founded six new bishoprics, and augmented the number of colleges in the universities, and supplied several cathedral churches with canons, in the place of the monks ; for which he allotted revenues to the amount of £8000 a year. But the great surplus was consumed by his own extravagance, and profuse grants of lay impropriations to his favourites, instead of being solely applied to religious or public uses. And this sacrilegious spoliation of ecclesiastical property has been the greatest blot upon the reformation in England, and a material injury to the nation. The suppression of religious houses, &c. shortly created a necessity for introducing poor taxes or poor rates, to supply the place of the hospitality of the religious institutions ; which have at length arisen to an evil of enormous and alarming magnitude, by a righteous retaliation upon the rapacity of the laity, for sharing in those unhallowed spoils, and also to prevent impositions upon themselves by the Crown.

The same servile parliament enacted the bloody statute of the Six Articles, confirming the popish doctrines, 1. Of Transubstantiation ; 2. Communion in one kind ; 3. The Celibacy of Priests, and, 4. Of Nuns ; 5. Private Masses, and, 6. Auricular Confession ; under pain of death by burning, and forfeiture of goods and chattels : in spite of all the opposition of Cranmer and the clergy to prevent them. And in the bigoted reign of her sister Mary, Elizabeth herself was nearly falling a victim to the first article *.

In Edward the Sixth's reign, the act was passed for uniformity in religious worship, conformably “ to the pure religion of Christ, and the practice of the Primitive Church ;” the Popish Mass was thereby abolished, and the Book of Common Prayer enjoined to be used in its stead ; — and so strictly was the observance of it required by the young king, that he would not suffer his sister, the Lady Mary, to have mass in her own family.

In the first of Elizabeth, A. D. 1558, the act of supremacy was renewed for “ restoring to the crown the ancient jurisdiction over the state ecclesiastical, and abolishing all foreign powers repugnant to the same ;” and the oath of supremacy was required to be taken by all the Members of both Houses of

* Soon after Queen Mary's accession to the throne, the Princess Elizabeth, her sister, was imprisoned ; and at the pressing instances and menaces of Cardinal Poole, she professed herself a Roman Catholic, and received the communion of the mass ; and when interrogated as to her belief of transubstantiation, she thus answered evasively : —

“ CHRIST was the Word that spake it ;
He took the bread and brake it ;
And what that Word did make it,
That I believe, and take it. ”

Parliament, with attendance on the national prayers, and occasional participation of the communion, on pain of expulsion ; thus guarding them against the errors and irregularities of Papists and Dissenters.

When her prime favourite the Earl of Leicester, appointed one of the trustees of an act designed for the better preservation of Church lands, by preventing their alienation, had abused his power ; by the bold remonstrance of Whitgift *, Archbishop

* This prelate having withheld Leicester openly to his face before the Queen, they both quitted the room, not friends in appearance. But Whitgift made a sudden and seasonable return to her Majesty, whom he found alone, and addressed her with great humility and reverence indeed, but with the spirit and frankness of an apostle, in the following terms : —

“ I beseech your Majesty to hear me with patience, and to believe that yours and the Church's safety are dearer to me than my life, but my conscience dearer than both ; and therefore give me leave to do my duty, and tell you, that princes are deputed nursing fathers of the church, and owe it a protection : and therefore, God forbid that you be so much passive in her ruin, when you may prevent it ; or that I should behold it without horror and detestation, or should forbear to tell your Majesty of the sin and danger. And though you and myself are born in an age of frailties, when the primitive piety and care of the Church-lands and immunities are much decayed, yet, Madam, let me beg that you will but first consider, and then you will believe, there are such sins as profaneness and sacrilege ; for if there were not, they could not have names in HOLY WRIT, and particularly in the NEW TESTAMENT.

“ And I beseech you to consider, that though our SAVIOUR said He judged no man ; and to testify it, would not judge nor divide the inheritance betwixt the two brethren, nor would of Canterbury, the Queen was induced to put a stop to the breach that had been already made in judge the woman taken in adultery, yet, in this point of the church's right, he was so zealous, that he made himself both the accuser, and the judge, and the executioner, to punish these sins ; witnessed, in that he himself made the whip to drive the profaners out of the temple, overthrew the tables of the money-changers, and drove them out of it. And, consider, that it was St. Paul that said to these Christians of his time, that were offended at idolatry, 'yet thou that abhorrest idols, dost thou commit sacrilege?' supposing, I think, sacrilege to be the greater sin. This may occasion your Majesty to consider, that there is such a sin as sacrilege ; and to incline you to prevent the curse that will follow it, I beseech you also to consider, that Constantine, the first Christian emperor, and Helena, his mother ; that king Edgar, and Edward the Confessor, and, indeed, many others of your predecessors, and many private Christians, have also given to God and his Church much land and many immunities, which they might have given to those of their own families, and did not, but gave them as an absolute right and sacrifice to God ; and with these immunities and lands, they have entailed a curse upon the alienators of them. God prevent your Majesty from being liable to that curse !

---

" And to make you, that are trusted with their preservation, the better to understand the danger of it, I beseech you, forget not, that besides these curses, the Church-land and power have been also endeavoured to be preserved (as far as human reason and the law of this nation have been able to preserve them) by an immediate and most sacred obligation on the consciences of the princes of this realm ; for they that consult Magna Charta shall find, that as all your predecessors, at their coronation, so you, also, were sworn before all the nobility and bishops then present, and in the presence of God, and in his stead, to him that anointed you, to maintain the Church-lands, and the rights the lands and immunities of the Church, and to maintain, with more care than she had done be-

---

belonging to it; and this testified openly at the holy altar, by laying your hand upon THE BIBLE, then lying upon it. And not only Magna Charta, but many modern statutes have denounced a curse upon them that break Magna Charta. And, now, what account can be given for the breach of this oath at the last great day, either by your Majesty, or by me, if it be wilfully or but negligently violated, I know not.

“ And, therefore, good Madam, let not the late lord (Leicester’s) exceptions against the failings of some few clergymen, prevail with you to punish posterity for the errors of the present age: let particular men suffer for their particular errors, but let God and his Chureh have their rights. And though I pretend not to prophesy, yet I beg posterity to take notice of what is already become visible in many families: that Church-land, added to an ancient inheritanee, hath proved like a moth fretting a garment, and secretly consumed both! or like the eagle that stole a coal from the altar, and thereby set her nest on fire, which consumed both her young eagles and herself that stole ii. And though I shall forbear to speak reproachfully of your father (Henry VIII.), yet I beg you to take notice, that a part of the Church’s rights, added to the vast treasure left him by his father, hath been conceived to bring an unavoidable consumption upon both, notwithstanding all his diligence to preserve it. And, consider, that after the violation of those laws, to which he had sworn in Magna Charta, God did so far deny his restraining grace, that he fell into greater sins than I am willing to mention.

“ Madam, RELIGION is the foundation and cement of human societies; and when they that serve at God’s altar shall be exposed to poverty, then RELIGION itself shall be exposed to scorn, and become contemptible, as you may already observe in too many poor vicarages in this nation. And, therefore, as you fore, its remaining rights. The intelligent Hooker reckons that the lay-impropriations, at this time, were known to amount to one hundred and twenty thousand pounds yearly. “We rest,” said he, “quietly without it, till it shall please God to touch the hearts of men, of their own voluntary accord, to restore it to Him again.” “What hath been taken away as dedicated to uses superstitious, are, by a late act or acts [of Parliament], entrusted with a great power, to preserve or waste the Church's lands, yet dispose of them, for Jesus' sake, as the donors intended. Let neither falsehood nor flattery beguile you to do otherwise; and put a stop, I beseech you, to the approaching ruin of God's Church, as you expect comfort at the last great day: for kings must be judged.

---

“Pardon this affectionate plainness, my most dear Sovereign, and let me beg to be still continued in your favour; and THE LORD continue you in HIS!”

This animated speech (impossible to be abridged), to which the queen listened patiently, produced its full effect; and her future care to preserve the Church's rights, which, till then, had been neglected, proved that it sunk deep into her heart. Notwithstanding all the flowings and ebbings of her favour toward his opposers, (and the latter especially to the Earl of Leicester) he still maintained a uniform ascendancy in her esteem for his piety, and in her councils for his wisdom, during twenty years, in those dangerous and unsettled times, in which he had to cope with the most powerful and active enemies of the Church, both open and concealed, the Nonconformists and the Courtiers. And he made good his motto: —

Vincit qui patitur.

See Walton's Life of Hooker, p. 9, 10.

and, consequently, not given to GOD, or, at the leastwise, not so rightly given, we repine not thereat; that which hath gone by means secret and indirect, through corrupt compositions or compacts, we cannot help; what the hardness of men's hearts doth make them loth to have exacted, though being due by law, even thereof the want we do also bear.— All that we have to sustain our miserable life with, is but a remnant of God's own treasure, so far already diminished and clipt, that if there were any sense of common humanity left in this hard-hearted world, the impoverished estate of the clergy of God would, at the length of very commiseration, be spared.” Ecclesiastical Polity, p. 389. And Bishop Jewel, in a sermon preached before Queen Elizabeth, thus boldly complained of these abuses:— “In other countries the receiving of the GOSPEL hath always been the cause that learning was more set by; and learning hath ever been the furtherance of the GOSPEL. In England, I know not how it cometh otherwise to pass, for since the GOSPEL hath been received, the maintenance of learning hath been decayed; and the lack of learning will be the decay of the Gospel.” Then addressing himself to her rapacious courtiers, “You,” said he, “enriched them which mocked, and blinded, and devoured you! Spoil not them now that feed, and instruct, and comfort you!”

At the union of the two crowns of England and Scotland, under James I. this learned prince concluded a long speech to his parliament, explaining the policy of government toward the Papists, nearly in the language of Henry VIII. : “ As long as they are disconformable in religion from us, they cannot be but half my subjects, to do but half service ; and I, to want the best half of them, which is their souls.”

And his parliament thus sagaciously described the genuine spirit and effects of popery : —

“ And from these causes, as ‘ bitter roots,’ we humbly offer to your Majesty, that we foresee and fear very dangerous effects both to the Church and State ; for, 1. The Popish religion is incompatible with ours in respect of their positions : 2. It draweth with it an unavoidable dependency on foreign princes : 3. It openeth too wide a gap for popularity to any one that shall draw too great a party : 4. It hath a restless spirit, and will strive by these gradations : if it once get but a connivance, it will press for a toleration ; if that should be obtained, they must have an equality ; from thence they will aspire to superiority, and will never rest till they get a subversion of the true religion.” And by these gradations, indeed, the “ restless spirit of Popery hath striven,” ever since its introduction at the Norman Conquest, down to the present day !

It was not, however, without the most violent struggles, that the Church and See of Rome were deprived of their usurped supremacy.

When Henry VIII. had cast off the papal sys- premacy, and laid the axe to the root of the tree, by suppressing the monastic orders in England, the life-guards of the papacy, Pope Paul issued a bull of excommunication against him, A. D. 1538; which only served to confirm the king in his opposition.

Soon after the accession of Queen Elizabeth, Pope Pius IV., in 1560, wrote her a flattering letter, to "Our dearest daughter in Christ," — inviting her to return to the bosom of the Church, and promising "to receive her as the prodigal son :" but the Queen, steady to her motto, semper eadem, rejected his flatteries, and persisted in promoting the Reformation; whereupon Pope Pius V. fulminated his famous bull, March 28, 1569, "against Elizabeth, the pretended queen of England, and the heretics, her adherents ;" absolving all her subjects from their oath of allegiance, and from any other duty they owe to her; and threatening all who shall henceforth obey her, with an anathema, or excommunication. By these means several conspiracies were formed by Popish priests and Jesuits to destroy her; but they were detected, and the conspirators punished according to their deserts.

Gregory XIII., in 1578, stirred up the king of Spain to invade England, depose Elizabeth, and hold the kingdom as a fief from him; and he was followed by Pope Sextus V., who urged the Spanish invasion in 1558, renewed the bulls of

Pius V. and Gregory XIII. excommunicated the queen, absolved her subjects from all allegiance, published a Crusade against her as against Turks and Infidels, and granted plenary indulgences to all that contributed their help and assistance to depose her.

And near the end of her reign Pope Clement VIII. sent two briefs to England in A. D. 1591; one to the popish clergy, the other to the people, not to admit king James as her successor, unless he swore to tolerate the Romish religion. These briefs, however, were not published, but communicated privately to very few; and laid the ground work of the Gunpowder Plot, in 1605, the third year after his accession to the throne of England. But this being providentially discovered on the eve of its execution, and Garnet the Jesuit and his accomplices executed, and venerated as martyrs for the Catholic faith; Pope Paul V.* issued two briefs

* This was the arrogant Pontiff to whom, in the year 1608, Maria Carafa, a friar, in his Theses for Disputation, at Rome and Naples, (of which this was one, Solus Petrus, et successores, in totam Ecclesiam illimitatam jurisdictionem habent,) addressed the following blasphemous inscription to the Pope:—
PAULO V. VICE DEO, Christianæ Reipublicæ Monarchæ invicissimo, et Pontificæ omnipotentiae conservatori acerrimo.

This was published at Venice, while Dr. Bedel, afterwards Bishop of Kilmore, in Ireland, was there, who, probably, in the title, discovered the mystical number 666, the name of the Beast, or Antichrist:

P A V L O    V.	V I C E - D E O.
—	—
5. 50.	5.
—	—
5. 1. 100.	500.
—	—

in 1606 and 1607, absolving the English Catholics from their allegiance to James, and reprobating the oath itself as null and void : a detestable doctrine, uniformly inculcated by the legates, nuncios, and emissaries of the Papal See, down to the present day.

The machinations of the court of Rome were also fatally and successfully employed against the unfortunate Charles; to which he fell a victim in 1648. The war between him and his puritanical parliament was principally fomented thereby. The following information, given in a confidential letter from Dr. Bramhall, bishop of Derry, to Primate Usher during his exile, and the 223d Letter in Usher's Life, p. 611, deserves to be recorded, from that scarce publication :—

“ Most Reverend,

“ I thank God I do take my pilgrimage patiently, yet I cannot but condole the change of the Church and State of England; and more in my pilgrimage than ever, because I dare not witness and declare to that straying flock of our brethren in England, who have misled them, and who they

This title was afterwards enlarged by another ; Benedictus, a Benedictine friar, in his dedication to the Pope, disclaiming the imputation of Antichrist : — PAULO QUINTO, Pontifici Universalis Ecclesiae Oecumenico, summo totius orbis Episcopo atque Menarchae, et SUPREMO VICE-DEO; in reward for which he was shortly after made Bishop of Caorli by the Pope. — See Bishop Burnett's Life of Bedel, pp. 306, 307.

are that feed them. But that your Lordship may be more sensible of the Church's calamities, and of the dangers she is in of being ruined, if God be not merciful unto her, I have sent you a part of my discoveries, and it is from credible hands; having, at this present, so sure a messenger and so good an opportunity.

" It plainly appears that in the year 1646, by order from Rome, above a hundred of the Romish clergy were sent into England, consisting of English, Scotch, and Irish, who had been educated in France, Italy, Germany, and Spain; part of those within the several schools there appointed for their instruction. In each of these Romish nurseries these scholars were taught several handicraft trades and callings, as their ingenuities were most bending, besides their orders or functions of that Church.

" When they return into England they are taught their lesson, (if any enquire from whence they come) that they were poor Christians, that formerly fled beyond sea for their religion's sake, and are now returned with glad news to enjoy their liberty of conscience. —

" The hundred men that went over in 1646, were most of them soldiers in the Parliament's army, and were daily to correspond with those Romanists in our late king's army that were lately at Oxford, and pretended to fight for his sacred Majesty; for at that time there were some Roman Catholics who did not know the design a contriving against our Church and State of England.

“ But the year following, 1647, many of these Romish orders, who came over the year before, were in consultation together, knowing each other ; and those of the king's party asking some, why they took with the Parliament side ? and asking others, whether they were bewitched to turn Puritans ? not knowing the design : but at last secret bulls and licences being produced by those of the Parliament side, it was declared between them, there was no better design to confound the Church of England, than by pretending liberty of conscience. It was argued then, ‘ that England would be a second Holland, a commonwealth ; and if so, what would become of the king ? ’ It was answered, “ Would to God it were come to that point.” It was again replied, ‘ Yourselves have preached so much against Rome and his Holiness, that Rome and her Romanists will be little the better for the change : ’ but it was answered, “ You shall have mass sufficient for a hundred thousand, and the governors never the wiser.” Then some of the mercifullest of the Romanists said, ‘ This cannot be done unless the king die. ’ Upon which argument the Romish orders thus licensed, and in the Parliament army, wrote unto their several convents, but especially to the Sorbonists, whether it may be scrupled to make away our late godly king, and his Majesty his son ? our king and master, who, blessed be God, hath escaped their Romish snares laid for him: It was returned from the Sorbonists, “That it was lawful for Roman Catholics to work changes in Government for the Mother-Church’s advancement; and chiefly in an heretical kingdom; and so lawfully make away the king.”

“Thus much, to my knowledge, have I seen and heard since my leaving your Lordship, which I thought very requisite to inform your Grace; for myself would hardly have credited these things, had not mine eyes been sure evidence of the same. Let these things sleep within your gracious Lord’s breast, and not awake but upon sure grounds; for this age can trust no man, there being so great fallacy among men. So THE LORD preserve your Lordship in health, for the nation’s good, and the benefit of your friends, which shall be the prayers of

Your humble servant,

July 20, 1624.

J. DERENSIS.”

This throws a new light on the proceedings of the Puritans of that age, in their little suspected coalition with the Papists to subvert the Government. The same coalition has been renewed in the present age, and subsists, at this moment, both in Great Britain and Ireland!

IV. In Ireland, to which we again turn our attention, the primacy of the See of Armagh, established by the synod of Cashel, A. D. 450, remained for a long time undisputed. The first opposition to the jurisdiction of that See was made by the Danes, or Ostmen, who planted colonies in the three maritime cities of Dublin, Waterford, and Limerick, in the course of the ninth century. In the following century Edgar, King of England, invaded the Danes in Ireland, and reduced Dublin under his dominion; to which, in the year 964, he granted a charter, under the title of Nobilissima Civitas Dublineæ, “the most noble city of Dublin;” which shews that it must have been a city of note at that time. After the conversion of these Danish colonies to Christianity, preferring the jurisdiction of the Norman Church, in England, to that of the see of Armagh, in their own neighbourhood, Gothric, the king of Dublin, with the consent of his clergy and people, applied to Lanfranc, the Archbishop of Canterbury, to consecrate their first bishop, Patrick, which was done at St. Paul’s, in the year 1074.* Upon his death, in 1085, at the application of Terdelugh, monarch of Ireland, and the bishops of Ireland, joined with the clergy and people of Dublin, Lanfranc again consecrated Donatus, one of his own monks of Canterbury, for their bishop.† He dying in * Ad regimen Dubliniensis Ecclesiæ Lanfrancus Archiepiscopus Cantuariæ, petente Goderico rege, Dubliniensis Ecclesiæ populo et Clero consentientibus et eligentibus; in Ecclesia Sancti Pauli, Londin. Patricium sacravit antistitem. Annal. Dublin. ad Annum 1074.

† Anno Dom. 1085, Lanfrancus, Archiepiscopus Cantuariæ ad regimen Dubliniensis Ecclesiæ, sacravit Donatum monas-

1095, his nephew Samuel, a monk of St. Albans, but born in Ireland, was chosen bishop in his room, by Murierdach, monarch of Ireland, and the clergy and people of the city; who sent him to be consecrated by Anselm, Archbishop of Canterbury.* The last Bishop of Dublin, Gregory, in the year 1122, was consecrated by Ralph, Archbishop of Canterbury, in consequence of the following writ, directed to him by king Henry I.†

“ Henry, king of England, to Ralph, Archbishop of Canterbury, greeting. The king of Ireland hath intimated to me by his writ, and the burgesses of Dublin, that they have elected this Gregory for their bishop, and send him to you to be consecrated. Wherefore I desire you to satisfy their petition, and perform his consecration without terii sui monachum in sede Metropoli Cantuar. potentibus atque eligentibus eum Terdeluacho Hiberniae rege, atque Clero et populo præfatæ civitatis. Annal. Dublin. ad Annum 1085.

* A Rege Hiberniae, Murierdach nomine, neconon a Clero et populo in episcopatum ipsius civitatis, electus est; atque ad Anselmum, juxta morem antiquum, sacrandus cum communi decreto directus. — Eadmer, Hist. Novor. p. 31.

+ Henricus Rex Anglie Radulpho Cantuariensi Episcopo salutem. Mandavit mihi Rex Hiberniae per Breve suum, et Burgenses Dublinia, quod elegerunt hunc Gregorium in episcopum, eum tibi mittunt consecrandum. Unde tibi mando, ut petitioni eorum satisfaciens, ejus consecrationem sine dilatione expreas. Teste Ranulpho Cancellario apud Windelso.

delay. Witness Ranulph, our Chancellor, at Windsor."

At the same time the burgesses of Dublin, and the Assembly of the Clergy, wrote to the Archbishop of Canterbury to enhance the merit of this application: * — "Know, verily, that the bishops of Ireland, and especially that bishop who resides at Armagh, have the greatest jealousy toward us, because we wish not to obey their ordination, but to be under your government always."—The Irish prelates, indeed, although they acquiesced in the interference of Lanfranc and Anselm, two of the most celebrated prelates of their time, with whom they maintained a good correspondence, yet could not brook this continuation of the dependence of the See of Dublin upon the metropolitan of another kingdom, as being derogatory to the dignity of their own primate. However, soon after, by the artful intrusion of the See of Rome, this same Gregory was promoted to the archbishopric of Dublin, and thenceforward transferred his allegiance to the papacy. At the same time Tuam was raised to the archiepiscopal rank.

The chief instrument in bringing about this disastrous connexion between the Irish and Roman * Sciatis vos reverà, quod Episcopi Hiberniae maximum zelum erga nos habent, et maximè ille episcopus qui habitat Ardimachæ; quia nolumus obedire eorum ordinationi, sed semper sub vestro Dominio esse volumus. — MS. Ad Calcem Collectionis Isidori Mercatoris, in Bibliotheca Cottoniana.

Churches, was Malachy, archbishop of Armagh, betraying the rights and privileges of his own Church. In the year 1139, he took a journey to Rome, to concert with pope Innocent II. the speediest and most effectual measures for forming an intimate and lasting union between Rome and Ireland. He was received there with distinguished consideration, appointed Legate, and dismissed with instructions to prevail on the prelates to surrender their privilege of consecrating bishops; and on the princes and nobles to resign their right of nominating archbishops and bishops to the Pope. Malachy was indefatigable in his endeavours to effect this change; and in 1148, set out on a second journey to Rome, furnished with full power, on the part of the Irish nation, to acknowledge the papal supremacy in spirituals, and to demand palls for the Irish archbishops. But Malachy died on his way to Rome, in the arms of St. Bernard, his historiographer, at Clareval, and was canonized for his important services; and Christian, bishop of Lismore, was appointed Legate in his stead, A.D. 1150.

The following year Pope Eugenius sent Cardinal Paparon to Ireland; who, in the year 1152, at the abbey of Kells, in the county of Meath, conferred palls on the four archbishops, with great pomp and splendor, in the presence of Murtagh Mac Laughlin O'Nial, monarch of Ireland, the princes, twenty-two bishops, and five capitular bishops elect, and numbers of the abbots and dignified clergy. — O'Halloran's History of Ireland, vol. i, p. 32, 33.

And now, what return did the See of Rome make to the Irish Church and Nation for this solemn and gratuitous resignation and surrendry of their ancient and established independence and rights? Four years had not elapsed, when the English Pope, Adrian IV., most ungratefully and unjustly, granted to Henry II. that infamous bull for conquering and enslaving Ireland! And the succeeding Pope, Alexander III., confirmed it in 1173; adding insult to iniquity, and representing the Irish nation as “barbarous, and Christian only in name!!” These bulls have been impeached as spurious by some of the advocates of Popery; but they were publicly notified by king Henry II. at the Irish Synod of Waterford, held in 1177; and warmly resented by the Irish at that synod, to Vivian, the legate of Alexander; and they have been published by Baronius, and other Romish writers. Their genuineness, therefore, is unquestionable. Such was the disastrous commencement of the implicit submission of the Irish nation to the Church and See of Rome; and the most calamitous in its consequences, down to the present day!

On the death of Laurence O'Toole, archbishop of Dublin, in 1181, Henry II. nominated as his successor John Comyn, an Englishman, attached to his interest; and his election was ratified by the Pope, Lucius, with a confirmation of the rights and possessions of the See of Dublin. This early precedent of nomination by the Crown, is found in the Papal Registry, called Crede Mihi. Dat. Velletri. Id. April. Indict. 15, 1182, cited by Leland, Hist. of Ireland, vol. i, p. 138.

Henry de Londres, who succeeded John Comyn in 1213, attended the council of king John as a spiritual baron for Ireland; and is named as the first of the Lords who were present at the execution of that shameful deed, by which the king surrendered his crown to Pope Innocent III., to be held in future as a fief of the papacy, by the service of a thousand marks, to be paid annually, seven hundred for England, and three hundred for Ireland. He also was present when John paid homage to Pandulph, the Pope's legate, with the most abject humiliation; and was honourably distinguished as the only prelate who ventured to express his indignation at the enormous insolence and haughtiness of the legate on this occasion.—Leland, vol. i. p. 195, 196.

The wretched state of Ireland, in consequence of her subjugation to Rome and England, in the reign of Henry III., is thus energetically stated by her historian:—

“ Ireland, in the mean time, felt all the melancholy effects of a feeble government, an aspiring nobility, laws suspended and controuled, factions engendered by pride and oppression, the anarchy of the old natives, the injustice of the new settlers, local feuds, and barbarous massacres."

To heighten the calamities of this dreary period, the severest exactions were made on Ireland, both by the King and the Pope. In the year 1226, the King, with the Pope's concurrence, demanded a fifteenth of all Cathedral Churches and Religious Houses; and a sixteenth of all of her Ecclesiastical revenues. But the exactions of the See of Rome were still more grievous and oppressive: in England they were odious; in Ireland, intolerable. To satisfy the rapacity of legates and nuncios, the Irish were stripped of their very necessaries, and even the churches were spoiled of their ornaments; and Ireland was overspread with Italian Ecclesiastics, who neglected their duties, absented themselves, and yet drained the country of the revenues of their benefices. Supported by the Pope's authority, Henry, also, sent over large importations of English Clergy. This provoked the native Clergy to make a violent ordinance against the intrusion of Englishmen into a Canonship in any of the Irish Churches; which, on the King's application, was rescinded by the Pope, as "the effect of envy and unchristian partiality, and an ambitious design to establish hereditary right in God's sanctuary."

Edward I. likewise, by the Pope's assistance, obtained from the Irish Clergy a tenth of all their revenues, to provide for an expedition to the Holy Land. Not content with this, he demanded a fifteenth, in addition, by his sole authority. But they not being willing nor able to comply with this novel and exorbitant imposition, peremptorily refused to give it, and complained to the Sovereign Pontiff;—and so this imperious Prince, who humbled his English Clergy, was forced to relinquish the demand.—Leland, vol. i. p. 229—235.

The Reformation, introduced into England in Henry VIII.'s reign with so little difficulty, and even with the concurrence of the nation, met with great opposition in Ireland; and, in fact, never has been thoroughly established there to the present day. The spirit of opposition, indeed, spread widely both among the Clergy and the Laity. The Clergy, as we have seen, looked up to the Pope for protection against the impositions of the Crown, and were jealous that the patronage of the Church of Ireland was chiefly bestowed on Englishmen; and the Laity, even the more enlightened of the English race, had long considered Ireland as a fief of the Pope, in right of St. Peter, conferred on Henry II.; and the Irish Parliament had acknowledged this to be the only legitimate foundation of the authority of the Crown of England, (Irish stat. 7 Edw. IV.) while the gross ignorance and superstition of the native Irish, who had been most unwisely excluded from the pale of English Law, rendered them hostile to any reformation of religion or morals, and blindly attached to the Pope, by whose influence they looked for support from O'Nial and other Irish Chieftains at home, and from the king of Spain abroad, against the English domination.

No sooner, therefore, had the Royal Commissioner, Lord Cromwell, sent over for the purpose, and Browne, Archbishop of Dublin, &c. demanded an acknowledgement of the king's supremacy in Ireland, as well as in England, than Cromer, Primate of Armagh, though an Englishman by birth, with the suffragan bishops and clergy of his province, violently opposed all innovation in religion, pronounced an anathema against all who should sacrilegiously acknowledge the king's supremacy, and dispatched emissaries to Rome, intreating the Pontiff to interfere in defence of his own rights and interests in Ireland.

However, a parliament was summoned in 1536, which, like the English, was more obsequious to the wishes of the Crown ; and they acknowledged the King supreme head of the Church in Ireland also. Archbishop Browne, in support of the act, pleaded the authority of the Popes themselves against the usurpation of Rome. He observed, that they had acknowledged emperors, kings, and princes, to be supreme in their own dominions, and even Vicars of Christ; so that in asserting the king's ecclesiastical as well as civil supremacy, he claimed no more than Eleutherius, bishop of

Rome, had granted to Lucius, the first Christian king of the Britons. But the terror of the king, and the dread of being punished as disloyal subjects, had more weight with the Legislature than the arguments of the Archbishop, to pass the Act of Supremacy; and afterwards, in 1541, other acts connected therewith, the dissolution of abbeys and monasteries, and payment of first fruits to the Crown, &c.

But great opposition was given to the execution of all these acts, clandestinely and openly. Cromer, the refractory primate of Armagh, received private instructions from the Court of Rome, to persevere boldly in support of the papal authority; to grant absolution to those who had taken the oath of supremacy, for breaking it; and to anathematize all that opposed the authority of the Holy See, either ecclesiastical or civil. Some time after, the following letter was written to O'Nial, the head of the Northern Chieftains, by the Bishop of Mentz, in the name of the Council of Cardinals, exciting him to rebellion; which was intercepted among the papers of a Dominican friar. — Leland, vol. i. p. 172.

“ My son O'Nial,

“ Thou and thy fathers were ever faithful to the Mother-Church of Rome. His Holiness Paul [III.] the present Pope, and his Council of Holy Fathers, have lately found an ancient prophecy of one Saint Lazerianus, an Irish Archbishop of Cashel. It saith, that the Church of Rome shall surely fall, when the Catholic faith is once overthrown in Ireland. Therefore, for the glory of the Mother-Church, the honour of St. Peter, and your own security, suppress Heresy, and oppose the enemies of his Holiness. You see that when the Roman faith perisheth in Ireland, the See of Rome is fated to utter destruction ! The Council of Cardinals, therefore, have thought it necessary to animate the people of the Holy Island in this pious cause ; being assured, that while the Mother-Church hath sons of such worth as you, and those who shall unite with you, she shall not fall, but prevail for ever, in some degree at least, in Britain. Having thus obeyed the order of the Sacred Council, we recommend your princely person to the protection of the Holy Trinity, of the Blessed Virgin, of St. Peter, St. Paul, and all the host of Heaven.—Amen."

These machinations of the Pope and his agents were but too successful. When Archbishop Browne, the great preacher of the Reformation in Ireland, attempted to remove the images and relicues of the Saints from his cathedrals and churches, he was opposed by his Clergy ; and several chose rather to resign their benefices than acknowledge the king's supremacy. In the next reign, of Edward VI., John Bale, bishop of Ossory, a strenuous opponent of Popery, on his first preaching the doctrines of the Reformation, was deserted by his Clergy ; and such was the violence of the populace, that five of his domestics were slain before his face; and his own life was saved only by the vigorous interposition of the civil magistrates; but so weak was the executive government, and so confined its authority, that several of the remoter bishoprics, beyond the English pale, such as Clogher, Derry, and Raphoe, in the north of Ireland, continued to be granted by the Pope, in Queen Elizabeth's days; and several of the abbeys and religious houses, dissolved by the act of 33 Hen. VIII., especially in Tyrone, Tirconnel, and Fermanagh, were suffered to remain in the possession of their superiors until the reign of James I. And even then, and afterwards, such was the impolitic inattention of the English government to the established religion, that scarcely any attempts were made to conciliate the Irish, by preaching to them the Reformed doctrines in their own tongue.—“Hard it is,” said Cusack, an Irish Chancellor, in a letter to the Duke of Cumberland, in 1552, “that men should know their duties to God and the king, when they shall not have teaching or preaching throughout the year!”—for the Reformed Clergy in general, took no pains to learn the Irish language, which prevailed even in the heart of the English pale, among the natives, and among the first settlers, who adopted their language and their customs by intermarriages; and were more inveterate against the Reformation than even the Irish them-

•elves. Meanwhile, even in those Sees which were in the disposal of Government, the prelates nominated by the Crown had to contend with formidable rivals in the Romish prelates nominated by the Pope, who vigilantly introduced their own clergy throughout the kingdom ; who, speaking their own language, and preaching their own religion, were listened to with favour and affection ; while the Reformed Clergy, who were strangers to their language, and prejudiced against them and their religion, were hated and abhorred, as heretics, aliens, and intruders into their rights ; and with whom they had no further intercourse, than the payment of their legal dues and tythes ; which not seldom were rigorously exacted in the Ecclesiastical Courts.

From the combination of these causes, we need not wonder that the Reformation, like “a sickly plant in a dry soil,” never took root, and flourished vigorously in Ireland. The Romish Hierarchy subsisted in full force ; and still continues to exercise Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction, openly and uncontested, down to the present day.

The wise policy of James I. had planted Protestant colonies in the extensive forfeitures produced by the rebellions in Queen Elizabeth's reign, especially in Ulster ;—and had his system been punctually pursued, Ireland would have been long since a Protestant country. But the troubles of his ill-fated son, Charles I. drew off his attention; and the occasional rigour with which his deputies enforced the penal laws against Popish recusants, and the general remissness and imbecility of their administrations, — the marked preference they showed to the new settlers and adventurers, as the only loyal subjects, and their neglect and suspicions of the descendants of the old English settlers, as disaffected, and not to be trusted with arms, nor military and civil employments, — all together conspired to alienate the minds of the great mass of the nation against the English yoke, as they deemed the English dominion; and furnished too many opportunities to the partizans and emissaries of Rome to poison the minds of the people, and tempt them to throw off their connexion with England, and to assert their ancient independence. The sagacious Usher, that early prodigy of genius and learning, by which he rose, in those turbulent times, to the primacy of Armagh, early prognosticated the Irish rebellion of 1641. This young divine, in the twenty-second year of his age, preaching before the Government in Christ Church, Dublin, 1601, who then were disposed to grant indulgence to the Papists, took occasion, from that remarkable prophecy of Ezekiel, foretelling the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, — “Thou shalt bear the iniquity of the House of Judah forty days; I have appointed thee each day for a year,” iv. 6, — to introduce this ominous conjecture in his sermon: “From this year, I reckon forty years; and then, those whom you now embrace shall be your ruin: and you shall bear their iniquity:"*—which fell out accordingly. And, by a severe retaliation for so many thousand Protestants, massacred in that rebellion, the perpetrators were visited with a bloody war of twelve years' continuance, during the remainder of Charles the First's reign, and the vigorous administration of Cromwell. And to the operation of similar causes, we may ascribe the ensuing and recent rebellions of 1798 and 1803, in Ireland.

V. The opposition of the Roman Pontiffs to every demonstration of allegiance to the Government, on the part of the English and Irish Roman Catholics, by means of their Bulls, Legates, Nuncios, and Vicars Apostolic, has been unremitting and incessant, from the infancy of the Reformation to the present day. I shall adduce a few prominent instances, out of a multitude.

1. In the reign of James I. after the gunpowder treason, an oath of allegiance for the Roman Catholics was drawn up with great skill and exactness, by the king himself, who was well acquainted with the principles of Popery; and who really wished to give all his subjects liberty of conscience in matters of religion, provided they would give sufficient and unequivocal security for their allegiance to the Crown. This oath was deemed satisfactory by his Romish subjects, as reconciling their political with their religious obligations ; and they were ready to accept it with thankfulness and gratitude ; when, to their sorrow and amazement, it was censured by Pope Paul V. in the following terms : —

---

* See Archbishop Usher's Life, by Parr, p. 9.

“ From the words themselves it ought to be sufficiently clear to you, that an oath of this kind cannot be taken, saving the Catholic faith, and the salvation of your souls; since it contains many things which are openly adverse to faith and salvation. Wherefore we admonish you to abstain entirely from taking this, and similar oaths.”

Thus was the oath dogmatically condemned in the gross, without singling any particular clauses in it that were exceptionable ; and not only this, but all similar oaths of allegiance for Romish subjects reprobated for ever !

2. On the restoration of Charles II. the famous Remonstrance, or Loyal Formulary of Allegiance, was presented to him in behalf of his Roman Catholic subjects of Ireland, in 1661, subscribed by one bishop, sixty-nine of the clergy, twenty-one peers, and a hundred and fifty-three of the principal nobility and gentry ; disclaiming the obnoxious principles imputed to them, in the following forcible expressions : — “ We abhor, we renounce, we abominate such principles; we PROTEST against them, and seal our PROTESTATION with our dying breaths." But by the machinations of the Pope's Nuncios, De Vecchii, Airoldi, Cardinal Barberini, &c. and their partizans, Archbishops Reilly, Talbot, &c. this loyal Formulary was rejected by the Irish Synod, in 1666, who substituted a nugatory Recognition; against which the honest and experienced Father Walsh, who acted as procurator for the Remonstrants, brought fifteen exceptions, showing it to be altogether evasive and insufficient; — and, in return for their loyalty, the Remonstrants themselves were persecuted and excommunicated, at home and abroad, and several of them perished for want. *

3. In 1775 and 1776, heads of a bill were brought into the Irish parliament for registering Popish Priests, on taking an oath of allegiance; but Dr. Burke, Titular Bishop of Ossory, in his Hibernia Dominicana, or, History of the Dominican Order in Ireland, 1772, reprobated the measure in the following strong terms:—

"Would it not be more than absurd [i. e. down-right sinful] that a Catholic priest, in discourse and demeanor, preaching the word of God, scriptural and traditional, to a Catholic people, and feeding them with the Sacraments of the Church, should swear fidelity to king George, so long as he is professor of a heterodox religion! and so long as he has not an orthodox wife! but if he should either embrace the Catholic faith, (as did, last year, his son-in-law, Frederic, prince of Hesse-Cassel), or should marry an orthodox wife, (as did kings Charles I. and II.) that then, by that very act, the same Catholic priest ought to abjure the king to whom he swore fidelity before! A deed more than unworthy, [i. e. amounting to absolute apostacy].”—Of course the measure failed, being rejected by the Irish clergy.

* See Walsh's History of the Irish Remonstrance. Leland's Hist. of Ireland, vol. iii. p. 459—462; and Dr. O'Conor's Columbanus.

4. Afterwards, in 1768, when an oath of allegiance for the Irish Roman Catholics in general, was in the contemplation of parliament, Monsignor Ghilini, the Nuncio of Pope Benedict XIV. at Brussels, wrote an official letter to each of the four Titular Archbishops of Ireland, which is recorded in the Hibernia Dominicana, Supplement, p. 925, as literæ vere aureæ, cedroque dignæ, “a letter truly golden, and worthy to be preserved in cedar;” of which the following is a copious extract:—

“ Most Illustrious and most Reverend Lord,

“ My official duty towards the good Catholics of Ireland, compels and urges me to excite your most illustrious Lordship’s zeal, in order that we may conjointly study to counteract a most grievous mischief, which, as I have been informed, is prepared, and partly carried into execution, to the spiritual detriment of that wretched, most numerous Chris*tian nation.* Witnesses of the highest credibility have informed me, that a certain formulary of Oath has been conceived by a heretic, and drawn up by the same heretic's hand, (a copy of which I inclose); and that it is held out for the acceptance of Catholics, under this plausible pretext: that, if they refuse not to take such an oath to Government, they may reasonably expect that Government will repeal and abrogate those penal laws under which they so long groan. And I have been further informed, that some of the laity and ecclesiastics, and even bishops, have not been ashamed, so imprudently, to take it already; and also, that others are preparing to take it; so that I am apprehensive, a misregulation, so great and important, may spread so widely in a short time, as almost to become general.

“ This new oath is reprehensible, upon several accounts, and unworthy of Catholic prelates; but it is absolutely intolerable, if we consider the Declaration thereunto annexed, namely, of ‘ abominating, and from the heart detesting,’ the doctrine which is there declared ‘ abominable and pernicious’—[that ‘ no faith or promise is to be kept with heretics, or princes excommunicated; or that princes deprived by the Pope, may be deposed or murdered by their subjects, or by any other person whatsoever.’]

“ To your erudition it must be known, that this doctrine, which is asserted to be ‘ detestable’ in the oath, is defended and maintained by most Catholic nations; and has been often followed in practice by the Apostolic See. It cannot therefore upon any account be declared ‘detestable and abominable’ by a Catholic, without incurring, by such declaration, the imputation of a proposition, rash, false, scandalous, and injurious to the Holy See.

“ Besides, it is to me a very dubious point, whether he be ‘inviolably bound, (as the new formulary prescribes), to be always true and faithful to his majesty,’ (which is afterwards explained, to affirm upon oath) ‘ according to the sense intended by the Laws of Ireland;’ because, as the laws of England and Ireland recognize the king as head of the church, and the fountain of its spiritual authority,—so he who takes such an oath, might also recognize the king as head of the church, and the fountain of its spiritual authority. Should it happen that such expressions either were or could be so understood, your most illustrious Lordship, and each of the Catholics themselves, ought to take notice, that this is a manifest error, and directly contrary to the principles of the Catholic religion, which acknowledges only one head and fountain of all spiritual authority, namely, the Roman Pontiff: And hence it appears, from this consideration, how culpable and detestable such an oath would be, since by it GOD would be assumed as a Witness and Avenger of error!

“ Since then an oath of this nature is so irregular and reprehensible, let me ask you, who can conceive with what extreme bitterness of grief the most pious mind of the most Holy Father must be affected, so soon as the account shall reach his ears, that the Catholic Laity, Ecclesiastics, and even Bishops, have either offered themselves, or shewn not the least repugnance to take such an oath to Government, by whom it is not required, without previously consulting the Holy See, and listening to its oracular decision, according to that most laudable spirit of filial obedience and subordination due to the Vicar of Jesus Christ, and of that conformity to the Center of Catholic Union, which every one ought to observe, and which the renowned Irish nation has with singular and distinguished veneration professed, so much to the glory of its immortal name!

— “ If the above-mentioned facts be true, your most illustrious Lordship, from regard to your respectable ministry, should apply forthwith, with all possible efficacy and prudence, the speediest and fittest remedies for stopping the further progress of so pernicious and scandalous a misregulation; and for recalling those who may have already taken such an oath to their proper duty, that they may in the mean time repair the scandal they have given; because, as in other respects, the oath, in its whole extent, is unlawful, so in its nature, it is invalid, null, and of no effect; insomuch that it can by no means bind and oblige consciences.

“ Your Lordship, in the next place, should take care, by all such means as shall appear to you most expedient and effectual, and most agreeable to your own discretion, to signify to your suffragan bishops, and by their instrumentality, to all the faithful, what a criminality this new oath has annexed to it; and how heinous a sin they commit who either hold themselves in readiness to take it, or, most unfortunately, have already taken it.”

THOMAS MARIA GHILINI,

Brussels, Oct. 14, 1768. Archbishop of Rhodes.”

To the Archbishop of Dublin.

The detection of this treasonable correspondence of the nuncio Ghilini with the Irish hierarchy, by the late bishop of Cloyne, Dr. Woodward, who first drew it forth from the shade, and published the original Latin letter, with an English translation, in the Appendix of his seasonable pamphlet, entitled, “ The Present State of the Church of Ireland” in 1786, representing the persecutions of the established clergy, in Munster especially, by the White Boys of that period, created no slight sensation at Rome. In consequence of which, Grandis et verbosa epistola a Capræis venit, — “ A long-winded, official letter” came, “ by the authority and command of his Holiness" the late Pope Pius VI. dated June 23, 1791, to the Titular Metropolitans of Ireland, which was inserted, with an English translation, in Dr. Troy's Pastoral Instruction of 1793,— exhorting his flock of the titular "Archdiocese of Dublin," to be loyal to his majesty, and submissive to the laws ;" which was published critically, October 18, in the Dublin Evening Post, the very day after the breaking out, and suppression of the insurrection that year ! *

Of this official Letter, the following is an extract :—

“ Most Illustrious and most Reverend Lords and Brethren,

“ We perceive from your late letter, the great uneasiness you labour under, since the publication of a pamphlet, entitled, “ The Present State of Ireland;” from which our detractors have taken occasion to renew the old calumny against the Catholic religion with increased acrimony ; namely, that this religion is by no means compatible with the safety of kings and commonwealths ; because, as they say, the Roman Pontiff being the father and master of all Catholics, and invested with such great authority, that he can free the subjects of other kingdoms from their fidelity and oaths of allegiance to kings and princes; he has it in his power, they contend, to cause disturbances, and injure the public tranquillity of kingdoms with ease:—We wonder that you could be uneasy at these complaints; especially after your most excellent brother and apostolical fellow-labourer the Archbishop of Cashel, [Dr. Butler], and other strenuous defenders of the rights of the Holy See, [Father O'Leary, &c.] had evidently refuted and explained away these slanderous reproaches in their celebrated writings.”

* See Hales's Letters on the Religious and Political Tenets of the Romish Hierarchy, addressed to Dr. Troy, &c. Second Edit. 1813. Stockdale, jun.

“ We judge, from an opinion of your learning, that the rights of the Apostolic See cannot be unknown to you, and that you are not unacquainted with the arguments by which they can be supported.—In this controversy, a most accurate distinction should be made between the genuine rights of the Apostolic See, and those that are imputed to it, by innovators of this age, for the purpose of calumniating. The See of Rome never taught that faith is not to be kept with the heterodox: that an oath to kings separated from Catholic Communion, can be violated: that it is lawful for the Bishop of Rome to invade their temporal rights and dominions. We, too, consider an attempt or design against the life of kings and princes, even under the pretext of religion, as a horrid and detestable crime.”

This extract is also published in the valuable Report of the Committee of the House of Commons, in 1817, respecting the intercourse of foreign nations with the Court of Rome, in ecclesiastical concerns, p. 427; but without either note or comment. To guard against this apparent acquiescence, therefore, in the Pope's statement, of an official document of such high authority and parliamentary importance, from which copious testimonies are adduced in the next section; the following strictures are requisite: —

1. The unqualified assertion of his Holiness, that "the See of Rome never taught that faith is not to be kept with the heterodox," is either captious or false. In the bulls of popes, and decrees of councils, the word heterodox (heterodoxis) is nowhere used; the technical term employed, being constantly heretics, (hereticis): why then did his Holiness suspiciously substitute a novel term? — if used in a different sense, the denial is captious and equivocating, calculated to blind the eyes of Protestants; if used as synonymous with heretic, it is downright false. In this dilemma, the nuncio Ghilini is much better authority than his Holiness: He honestly, because confidentially, declares, that "the doctrine has been often followed in practice by the Apostolic See;" — and that his declaration was not unacceptable to the Court of Rome, we may infer, from his being raised to the rank of Cardinal, in reward for his "precious letter," some time after.

The doctrine, however, that “Faith is not to be kept with heretics,” is not “taught” absolutely or unconditionally; not in ordinary cases, or in the common intercourse of society; but in extraordinary or spiritual cases, whenever it may be detrimental or prejudicial to the interests of the Church or See of Rome. With this restriction, it is evidently understood by the Nuncio; and in this sense, indeed, it has often been followed in practice by the Apostolic See; the practice being the best and surest comment upon the doctrine.”

Such was the practice of Pope Martin V. in his letter to Alexander, duke of Lithuania, who had taken the Bohemian Hussites under his protection, dated May 21, 1423.

“ But if, anyhow induced, you have promised to undertake their defence, know, that you could not give faith to heretics, violators of the holy faith, and that you sin mortally if you keep it; because the faithful can have no communion with an infidel.”

Pope Pius V.’s celebrated bull against Queen Elizabeth, dated February 24, 1569, absolved her subjects from their oath of allegiance; and the same doctrine was inculcated by Pope Gregory XIII. in his bull of May 13, 1580, inciting the Irish to rebellion against her; by Pope Clement VIII. in 1600, against the same “heretical queen;” Pope Paul V. in his two briefs, 1606 and 1607, against the oath of allegiance made by parliament in the reign of James I.—To these a multitude of foreign testimonies might be added.

5. In 1774, the Irish act of 13 and 14 Geo. III. chap. 35, was passed, still in use: “to enable his Majesty’s subjects, of every description, to testify their allegiance to him.”

This act, nearly the same as that proposed and rejected in 1768, was approved of by many intelligent and loyal Roman Catholics; and especially by that respectable prelate Dr. Butler, Titular Archbishop of Cashel; who, when others, as he observes in his Justification, &c. “hesitated to consider the nature of that engagement they were desired to enter into, and the foundation of those principles they were desired to disclaim; took an active part himself, and his suffragans, to explain to their flocks the propriety of such a promise, in the following declaration:—

“ July 15, 1775.

“ We the Chiefs of the Roman Catholic Clergy of the province of Munster, having met together near Cork, have unanimously agreed, that the oath of allegiance, proposed by act of parliament, anno 13 et 14 Geo. III. regis, contains nothing contrary to the principles of the Roman Catholic religion.”

“ A report,” proceeds Dr. Butler, “ was quickly circulated, that the Roman Catholic bishops of Munster were all excommunicated by his Holiness, for countenancing such an impiety" ——, "that a report had certainly reached Rome, that the Irish Roman Catholic Clergy had shaken off the Pope's supremacy in spirituals."

To counteract this malignant report, he wrote a long memorial in September, 1775, to Cardinal Castelli, president of the Propaganda at Rome, stating the grounds upon which the Munster prelates had acted; and demanding to know explicitly, what objection he had to their conduct. At length, after a delay of fourteen months, he received the following laconic censure in answer:—*

“ Most Illustrious and most Reverend Lord
and Brother,

“ Your duty, and ACCUSTOMED obsequiousness toward this Holy See, seemed absolutely to require that, in a matter of so great moment, ye should have judged, that nothing ought to be determined without having previously consulted the Supreme Pontiff; whose decision might also have been awaited by you the more readily, because you were not constrained by any compulsion, or by any law, to produce such a formulary. This it is which has affected our most holy Lord and the congregation with no slight uneasiness. — But I pray God, that he may very long preserve your Lordship.

“ J. M. CARDINAL CASTELLI.”

* See the Original, in Butler's Justification, or Hales's Letters to Dr. Troy.

This decides the point, that “ a formulary denying the Pope’s supremacy in temporals, and disclaiming those tenets imputed to the Roman Catholic religion, was judged reprehensible at Rome :” as honestly and judiciously remarked by Dr. Butler. — The pretext of the Popish partizans, that the Pope’s spiritual primacy is invaded, is only to cover his usurpation of ecclesiastical supremacy, which is in fact a temporal jurisdiction ; as will be shewn more fully in the next case.

6. In the year 1778, an act of parliament was passed for the relief of the English Roman Catholics, in order to enable them to testify their allegiance ; and in order to entitle themselves to further relief from parliament, and to be put on the same footing with Protestant Dissenters, they, under the denomination of English Catholic Dissenters, drew up a Declaration of their principles and Protestation of their loyalty, in March, 1789, which was signed by six of their prelates, including the four Vicars Apostolic, five peers, above two hundred of their clergy, and with very few exceptions, all the Roman Catholic laity of any note in England. And upon the basis of this universally approved Declaration, a very respectable Committee was appointed by the Roman Catholic body, to draw up heads of a bill, to be presented to parliament by Mr. Mitford, then Attorney-General, (now Lord Redesdale), preparatory to an “ act to relieve, under certain conditions and restrictions, persons called Protesting Catholic Dissenters, from the penalties and disabilities to which Papists, or persons professing the Popish religion, are by law subject."

But this well-intended bill was unfortunately quashed by the tergiversation of three of the Vicars Apostolic, who had signed the previous Declaration, at the instigation of the Court of Rome; for they issued encyclical, or circular letters, to their flocks, dated Oct. 19, 1789, and Jan. 21, 1791, censuring the proposed oath of allegiance as unlawful, and inhibiting them from taking it, or any new oath; and also from subscribing any new declaration, on doctrinal matters, or any new instrument, wherein the interests of religion [i. e. the Romish] are concerned, without the previous approbation of their respective bishops, [i. e. the Vicars Apostolic themselves].

In consequence of this authoritative censure and inhibition, the greater part of the Roman Catholics who had signed the declaration, withdrew their names. But the Committee, highly to the credit of their consistency, entered into a formal vindication of the soundness of their principles, in some expostulatory letters, addressed to the Apostolic Vicars, and to the Catholics of England, justifying their own proceedings; and concluding with a strong protest against the arbitrary measures of the three seceding vicars.

The clause in the existing oath of allegiance to which chiefly the Roman Catholics in general have all along objected and excepted, is the following:—" And I do declare, that no foreign prince, person, prelate, state, or potentate hath, or ought to have any jurisdiction, power, superiority, pre-eminence, or authority, ecclesiastical or spiritual, within this realm."

This clause was thus judiciously altered in the new oath proposed:—" And I do protest and declare, and do solemnly swear it to be my most sincere opinion, belief, and persuasion, that no foreign church, prelate or priest, or assembly of prelates or priests, hath, or ought to have, any jurisdiction or authority whatsoever, within this realm, that can directly or indirectly affect or interfere with the independence, sovereignty, laws, constitution, or government thereof; or the rights, liberties, persons, or properties of the people of the said realm, or any of them;—save only and except by the authority of parliament; and that any such assumption of power would be an usurpation."—Declaration, pp. 12, 152.

And, to remove doubts and scruples that might still be entertained about its meaning, whether it denied or admitted the spiritual authority of the Church of Rome, or the spiritual primacy of the Pope, the Committee proposed to the Roman Catholic Universities of Louvain, in Flanders, Paris and Douay, in France, and Alcala, Salamanca and Valladolid, in Spain, (at the requisition tion of the prime minister, Mr. Pitt), in 1769, three questions on the subject for their opinions; which were accordingly obtained, and proved satisfactory.* And still further, to satisfy such doubts and scruples, they proposed the following Case to the opinion of a most eminent lawyer and civilian, at home, Mr. Hill, premier serjeant at law :—

CASE.

“ A doubt has arisen in the minds of some [Roman] Catholics, whether some parts of the proposed oath (particularly the foregoing clause) do not amount to a denial of the spiritual rights, with which, according to their religious tenets, the Church [of Rome], and her Ministers, and particularly the Pope, is invested: —— [such] as those of preaching the faith, administering the sacraments, ordaining the ministers of the church, punishing by spiritual censures, &c. — If it amount to a denial of the Pope, the Church and her Ministers, being invested with the rights of this nature, it is an oath which a Catholic cannot take consistently with his religious principles.

“ On the other hand it is contended, that it is not meant to deny by the oath any spiritual right of the Church, or that the Pope is its spiritual head; but merely the right of the Church, or * See these Questions and the Answers of the Foreign Universities, in the Report of the Committee of the House of Commons, pp. 514—540.

Pope, to interfere in temporal concerns, or to have, either directly or indirectly, any temporal power in this kingdom.

“ The question therefore is, Whether the oath in question, and particularly this clause, is a denial of the spiritual authority of the Church, or the spiritual supremacy of the Pope ?

OPINION.

“ No form of Civil Government, nor any system of Laws was instituted by CHRIST or his Apostles, nor any comission granted to their successors, to enforce the Christian Doctrine by temporal power. The authority of the Church is derived from them. The words of the oath do not import a denial of their having this [spiritual] authority; they only deny their having temporal power, or a right to enforce their spiritual authority by temporal power. This is all the party who takes the oath will, or can, be understood to swear or assert, when he swears in the words of the oath, ‘ that they have not any jurisdiction or authority,’ &c. Therefore, I think the oath is not a denial of the spiritual authority of the Church, or the supremacy of the Pope.”

Lincoln's Inn, Feb. 18, 1791. “ G. HILL.”

The truth is, the spiritual primacy of the Pope of Rome, as successor of St. Peter, “ the first of the Apostles” in rank or precedence, but not in authority or jurisdiction over the rest of the Apostles; has been artfully and industriously confounded by the popes and their partizans, with ecclesiastical supremacy or jurisdiction over the other originally independent Churches and their Bishops. Our blessed SAVIOUR, indeed, born to fulfil all righteousness, set an example of complete obedience to the established government of his country. As a Jew, he complied with the law of Moses; as a Roman, he complied with the edicts of the Emperor: “My kingdom,” said he, “is not of this world,”— not temporal but spiritual; and he strongly marked the line which divides civil from religious duties: he paid tribute himself, and bade his followers to “give to Cæsar the dues of Cæsar, and to God the dues of God.” But when his religion spread, and was adopted by the state, the ecclesiastical regimen, so far as it was by law established in any country, became a part of the temporal government of that country. From this alliance, spiritual and temporal concerns became insensibly intermixed; and in many cases, where the two powers stood in opposition, a perplexing confusion often ensued; of which, the vigilant policy of the Roman Pontiffs successfully availed themselves, by a series of artful encroachments upon the other ecclesiastical and temporal powers, to effect their usurped supremacy, under the mask of their acknowledged primacy. A supremacy, indeed, involving temporal dominion, in matters of the highest importance, such as disposing of thrones, levying money, Peter's pence, first fruits, &c. interdicts, excommunications, &c. &c.

Finding all their efforts ineffectual to reclaim the seceding Vicars Apostolic, the Committee concluded their meritorious labours with the following PROTEST.

" We, the Catholic Committee, whose names are here underwritten, for ourselves, and for those in whose trusts we have acted, do hereby, before GOD, solemnly protest, and call upon GOD to witness our protest against your Lordship's Encyclical Letters of the 19th day of October, 1789, and the 21st of January, 1791, and every clause, article, determination, matter, and thing therein respectively contained,—as imprudent, arbitrary, and unjust; as a total misrepresentation of the nature of the bills to which they respectively refer, and the oaths therein respectively contained; and our conduct relating thereto respectively; as encroaching on our natural, civil, and religious rights; inculcating principles hostile to Society and Government, and the Constitution and Laws of the British empire; as derogatory from the allegiance we owe to the State, and the settlement of the Crown; and as tending to continue, increase, and confirm the prejudices against the faith and moral character of the Catholics, and the scandal and oppression under which they labour in this kingdom.

" In the same manner, we do hereby solemnly protest, and call upon GOD to witness this our solemn protest, against all proceedings had, or hereafter to be had, in consequence of, or grounded upon your Lordship's said Encyclical Letters, or either of them; or any representation of the bills or oaths therein respectively referred to, given, or to be given by your Lordships, or any of you.

" And from your Lordships' said Encyclical Letters, and all proceedings had, or hereafter to be had, in consequence of, or grounded upon the same, or either of them, given or to be given by your Lordship, or any of you, We do hereby appeal, and call on GOD to witness our appeal, for the purity and integrity of our religious principles, to all the Catholic Churches in the universe, and especially to the first of Catholic Churches, the Apostolical See, rightly informed."

CHAS. BERINGTON*. STANTON,

JOS. WILKS. PETRE,

HY. CHAS. ENGLEFIELD,

JOHN LAWSON,

JOHN THROCKMORTON,

WILLIAM FERMOR,

JOHN TOWNELEY,

THOMAS HORNÝOLD."

* Vicar Apostolic of the middle district, "the only faithful found." The other three renegade vicars, were Charles Walmsley, V. A. of the western district; John Talbot, V. A. of the southern district; William Sharrock, V. A. of the northern district.—See the Declaration, pp. 99, 100.

And I shall close this interesting extract from their curious and valuable publication of the Declaration, &c. and their Correspondence with the Vicars, &c. republished by Stockdale, jun. 1812, with the well-chosen and pointed mottos prefixed thereto, from two of our greatest statesmen and philosophers :—

“ Those who adhere simply to the Church of Rome, are good Catholics; those who adhere to the Court of Rome, are Papists; — enemies and traitors to the realm of England; and utterly unfit for any trust in any Protestant country.”

Lord Somers.

“ That Church can have no right to be tolerated by the magistrate, which is constituted upon such a bottom; that all those who enter into it do thereby, ipso facto, deliver themselves up to the protection and service of another prince; — for by this means the magistrate would give way to the settling of a foreign jurisdiction in his own country, and suffer his own subjects to be listed, as it were, against his own government.”

Locke.

The Roman Catholic Committee, with becoming spirit, appeal to “ all the Catholic Churches in the universe :” and that their appeal is well founded, and must be favourably received and approved by all, except the Church of Rome herself, the grand delinquent, until “ rightly informed,” will be shewn in the next section.

SECTION V.

PRECAUTIONS OF FOREIGN NATIONS TO COUNTERACT THE USURPED SUPREMACY OF THE CHURCH OF ROME.

---

THE modern distinction between the Supreme Head of the Church and the Supreme Head of the State, was unknown in ancient times. In the patriarchal ages, the royal and ecclesiastical powers were frequently united in the prince. Thus, Melchizedek, king of Salem, was also Priest of the MOST HIGH GOD; to whom Abraham offered the tythes of his spoils, after he had vanquished the Assyrian confederates, Gen. xiv. 18—20. In the heroic times, Anius was king of the sacred isle of Delos, and priest of Apollo; as Virgil and Ovid inform us :

“ Rex Anius, rex idem hominum, Phœbique sacerdos.”
ÆNEID, iii. 80.

“ *Hunc, Anius, quo rege homines, antistite Phœbus
“ Rite colebatur, temploque domoque recepit.*”
METAM. xiii.

And in early Rome, the first kings, Romulus, Numa, &c. combined both powers, as Pontifex

Maximus, and Chief of the Augurs; which were entailed upon the emperors Augustus, Tiberius, &c. down to Gratian. He relinquished these heathen titles, which were afterwards assumed by the Popes, as remarked in the Introduction, p. 45—50.

Hence, Constantine the Great*, the first Christian emperor, uniting both powers in himself, fully exercised the ecclesiastical jurisdiction. This illustrious prince used to say, that “a bishop was not only the bishop of his own diocese; but that he was the bishop of all.” And, therefore, in this august character, as Supreme Head of the Church in his dominions, or Chief Guardian of the peace of the Church, he convened the general councils of his empire, Nice, &c. whenever disputes arose about matters either of doctrine or discipline. In questions of heresy and schism, the emperor ratified the decisions of the ecclesiastical synods held thereon, and punished the delinquent bishops or clergy, by confiscation of goods, imprisonment, exile, or even death, whomsoever he should find disturbing the peace of the Church.

But a succession of ambitious and enterprizing Popes from Hildebrand or Gregory VII. to Innocent III. gradually usurped the privileges and rights of the emperors and kings of Europe; and at length established a despotic influence throughout Christendom, which the several sovereign powers have long struggled to restrain or abolish, both at home and abroad.

* See an Historical Enquiry into the Ancient Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction of the Crown, traced up to Constantine's time, by James Baldwin Browne: cited Report, &c. p. 158—160.

In the year 1812, a circular letter was written by Lord Viscount Castlereagh, * principal Secretary of State for foreign affairs; and another by Earl Bathurst, * in 1815, to his Majesty's ministers at foreign courts, requesting they would procure and communicate to Sir John Cox Hippisley information respecting the laws of foreign countries as they affect the Roman Catholics; and a Committee of the House of Commons was appointed to report from the great mass of evidence thus furnished, the system of ecclesiastical polity, which, under different shades of regulation, prevails in the several foreign states respecting their Roman Catholic subjects, and their intercourse with the Church and See of Rome.

Accordingly, the Report was drawn up, with a copious Appendix, containing the documents on which it was founded, and published in a folio volume, in 1817; which, for compass, variety, and accuracy of information, and the luminous arrangement of the materials, reflects great honour on the industry and ability employed in the compilation of the work.

* See Report, p. 3, 4. 52. 73.

The principal points to which their attention was directed, were, —

I. The modes of nominating, appointing, and electing the Roman Catholic Prelates and Clergy, and their oaths to the Pope.

II. The restraints imposed upon Papal Nunciatures, Bulls, Mandates, Rescripts, Collations, &c. &c.

III. Miscellaneous articles of ecclesiastical regulation : respecting the different orders of Monks, especially the Jesuits ; marriages of the laity, and of priests ; divorces, excommunications, interdicts, auricular confessions, &c.

The foreign states reviewed in the Report, are reduced to three classes : —

I. Those in communion with the Church of Rome in Germany, Italy, France, Spain, Portugal, and Switzerland.

II. Those of the Greek Church, not connected with the Church of Rome, Russia.

III. Those of the Lutheran and Calvinistic Churches separated from the Church of Rome, Denmark, Sweden, Prussia, &c. and the British Colonies in America and the East Indies.

Deviating from the precise order of the Report, I shall begin, in this abridgment of its substance, with

FRANCE.

This great kingdom was the foremost in Europe to found, augment, and establish the spiritual and temporal dominions of the See of Rome ; in consequence of which, its kings have long been honoured by that See, with the title of "Most Christian," and styled "the Eldest Sons of the Church." For, when the people of Rome withdrew their allegiance from the Eastern Emperors, A. D. 726, they attached themselves to the neighbouring rulers and kings of France, then most powerful in the west; and in return, Pepin conferred on the Pope the exarchate of Ravenna, A. D. 756. His son, Charlemagne, annexed the duchy of Rome, and also a considerable part of Lombardy, to be held by the Pope and his successors as fiefs of the empire, A.D. 774; and he was formally crowned Emperor of the Romans, by the Pope, A. D. 779; and his son, Louis the Pious, granted "St. Peter's patrimony" to the Pope and his successors, in their own right, principality, and dominion, unto the end of the world," A.D. 817. Hence, the Pope assumed the three keys in his arms, and the triple crown or mitre, as a temporal prince; and "his look was more stout than his fellows," "the other horns," over whom he domineered as the "little horn;" and frequently awed them by his anathemas or excommunications, as foretold in prophecy.—Dan. vii. 7, 8, 20—24. See Hales's New Analysis of Chronology, vol. ii. p. 544.

Charlemagne, however, was careful to maintain his ecclesiastical supremacy. In a council held at Rome, A. D. 782, Pope Adrian I. granted to Charlemagne, emperor and king of France, and to his successors, authority to ordain the election of Popes, and to confirm it; and declared, moreover, that the Archbishops and Bishops in each of the provinces should be obliged to receive their investiture from him, and should not be consecrated until they had done so; and the decree of this council was received among the genuine Canons of the Church, published by Sigebert; as proved against Baronius by the German writers; who judiciously remark, that the expression, Per singulas provincias, "in each of the provinces," in the Pope's grant, specially referred to Italy only, then recently conquered; and not to any of the other provinces possessed by Charlemagne, in which he made use of the right of nomination, by virtue of his succession to the monarchs his predecessors.

Report, &c. p. 262.

And accordingly, in the year 798, Charlemagne caused the Bishop of Salzburg to be raised to the rank of Archbishop, over the other bishops of Bavaria: and by his orders, Pope Leo III. conferred upon him the pall and canonical consecration, as appears from his Letter to the Emperor:—

"The mandate of your Royal Excellency was made known unto us,—that we should give the pall to Bishop Arnon: and with a willing mind we have accommodated him, according to your royal mandate; and have granted to the aforesaid Arnon the use of the pall, and canonically ordained him Archbishop, in the province of the Bavarians.” — Report, p. 156.

Gregory, of Tours, and all the ancient French historians, adduce numerous instances of the French kings of the first and second race disposing of the prelatures ; and usually state the fact in these words : Talis episcopus ordinatus, jussu regis ascensu vel decreto, — “ Such a bishop was ordained by the command, assent, or decree of the king.” The successors of Hugh Capet did the same, as appears from numerous testimonies of the fact, adduced by Fulbert, bishop of Chartres. Report, p. 262.

Sometimes, however, it happened, that prelates who were scrupulous, after their election by the Crown, would repair to Rome, to be confirmed by the Pope ; which gave rise to frequent contentions between the Popes and the French monarchs. Thus, when Boniface VIII. in 1301, insolently claimed supremacy over Philip le Bel, in the following terms :— “ Boniface, Bishop, servant of the servants of God, to Philip, king of the French : Fear God, &c. — We wish you to know, that you are subordinate to us, both in spirituals and temporals :” the king thus superciliously answered : “ Philip, by the grace of God, king of the French, to Boniface, acting as Supreme Pontiff, little or no greeting : “ Be it known to your superlative stupidity, that in temporals we are not subordinate to any one."—Indeed, even the haughty and imperious Innocent III. A. D. 1198, some time before indirectly admitted the French king's claim, in one of his Rescripts: "Besides, as the king himself, by no means, recognizes a superior in temporals," &c.

And when an interdict had been laid by the Archbishop of Rheims upon the church of Beauvois, and the Pope's chaplain, Peter de Collomedio, was ordered by his Holiness to enquire more fully concerning it, he was immediately stopped from proceeding to the enquiry, by Louis IX. A. D. 1225. "We were inhibited," says he, "by our Lord, Louis, king of the French, from taking any cognizance of the church-service of Beauvois, or of matters pertaining thereto; or to his royalties, or any matters pertaining to his temporal jurisdiction, either directly or indirectly; and we were ordered not to presume to make any inquiry whatsoever." Report, &c. p. 255.

The nature and foundation of the ecclesiastical supremacy of the Crown of France, is thus ably stated by the learned French jurist, Pithou.

"It is neither by virtue of the Concordat, of any concession or privilege granted by the Pope, nor in consequence of the practice of other sovereigns and states, that the kings of France exercise the right of appointing to prelatures. The Concordat might be abolished, but the right would still remain. It is inherent in the French monarchs from the commencement of their monarchy: it is an essential appendage of the Crown; kings appoint, because they are kings.

“ The instant the Church acquired a Civil existence, its Dignities became real magistracies; the disposal of which necessarily belongs to the sovereign, as they are a delegated portion of the Supreme Power, and protected by the laws and by the arms of the state.

“ There is nothing repugnant either to piety or to reason, that the king shall select from among those who have been regularly ordained, him whom he thinks most proper to be a bishop, or prelate; and to exact from him an oath of fidelity and allegiance. No state maxim can induce the king of France to tolerate, that a foreign power, ignorant of the true interests of this country, or whose interest may be opposite to theirs, should appoint to the prelatures. The patent of the appointed prelates, and their consecration, are left to the Pope; but the choice of those who are to be consecrated, is left to kings.—The king has no concern with the spiritual part of the clerical office; it is over its public functions that he presides.”—Report, &c. pp. 22, 23, 265.

This valuable work “ On the Regulations of the Gallican Church, and its intercourse with the See of Rome,” first published by Pithou in 1639, and 1651, and enlarged, with the Comments of Dupuy, and Durand de Maillane, and republished 1781, with the royal sanction, and registered in the parliament of Paris, with the special approbation of the College of the Sorbonne, is perfectly authentic, and a document of the first importance in this enquiry. — Report, pp. 22, 255.

THE LIBERTIES OF THE GALLICAN CHURCH.

In the Gallican Church (that is, in the Assembly not only of the Clergy, but also of all the Faithful of that kingdom) no novelties are admitted, nor any laws, statutes, decrees, or public mandates; not even of General Councils for reformation, or regulation of morals, against the laws, customs, or approved Canons of the kingdom, unless the consent of the king be annexed, according to the Proverb, “Remove not the ancient land-marks which thy fathers have set.” — Prov. xxii. 28.

And their intercourse with the Church of Rome is regulated by the following maxims, or general rules:—

1. The authority of the Pope, even in spiritual matters, is not absolute in France, but restrained and limited by those canons and regulations of the Ancient Councils, which have been adopted in that kingdom.

2. The Popes have no authority to issue any commands, ordinances, or injunctions, general or special, in any country or territory subject to the dominion of the Most Christian king: And if he should issue any such injunctions, the subjects of his Majesty, though in Clerical orders, are not obliged to obey them. — Report, pp. 255, 256.

The power of the Nuncios of the Pope in France are strictly defined; they cannot enter the kingdom but at the demand of the monarch, or with his consent. And they cannot exercise their functions, but after they have given their solemn written promise, not to attempt any thing against the Royal Authority; and not to continue in France beyond the pleasure of his majesty. This is proved in several cases, and especially by the oath of Cardinal Mauroceno to king Henry III. in the year 1576. *

French prelates cannot leave the kingdom, for whatever cause it may be, without the special licence of his majesty, even when they are sent for by the Pope.

The Court of Rome cannot levy any tithes, taxes, impositions, alms, contributions, Peter's pence, for oaths of pardon and indulgence, &c. without the express permission of the king, and the consent of his clergy.

It is not in the power of the Pope to absolve subjects from their oaths of allegiance, or to deprive the king of his kingdom, and to dispose of it in favour of any other individual. Nor can any admonition, excommunication, or interdiction, excuse the temporal obedience of the subject to the king.

* See this Oath, Report, &c. pp. 256, 257.

No jurisdiction is allowed either to the Pope, or his legate a latere, or to any of his delegates, over the subjects of the king, even with their own consent, in matters concerning marriage portions, divorces, or separations of married persons, so far as property is concerned, adultery, forgery, perjury, sacrilege, usury. The cognizance of all these and similar cases, belongs to the King and to the Civil Judges. Nor can the Pope, or his Legate, absolve the subjects of the King in these cases but in as far as it respects the conscience and penitentiary jurisdiction only. Nor can the Pope order any sequestration of property in any ecclesiastical matter.

No religious orders can be admitted nor established in France, without the express permission of the King; nor can any new monasteries be erected without it.

The Pope cannot grant any dispensation in whatever pertains to the Divine Law, or to the Law of Nature, nor in cases where General Councils do not permit him to pardon.

Papal Bulls and Rescripts, letters of citation, executorialis, preliminations, or others of a similar nature, are not followed or executed in France, without having been approved of by the King, and duly registered. They obtain the force of law by the formal letters of the King, called Pareatis; consequently, by the sole authority of the King, not by Apostolic authority.

No subject of the King can be summoned before the Court of Rome. This is now acknowledged by Pope Urban V., who formally declared, in a Bull,—that no person could, under any pretence of privilege or of service, be summoned before a foreign Judge.

Ever since the Concordat between Pope Leo X. and Francis I. in the year 1515, the French monarchs have had the actual nomination, or appointment, of all Archbishops, Bishops, and Prelates.

Even the Revolutionary government of France were no less careful and attentive to guard against the possibility of encroachment from the Court of Rome, than the Social régime; and the most material of the former regulations were revived in the recent Concordats with the Pope, of 1801, 1813, &c.

The following is the Oath of Fidelity, in use before the Revolution, required to be taken to the New Governments 1801, by the Prelates; and still in use:—

“I swear, and promise to God, upon the Holy Evangelists, to preserve obedience and fidelity to the Government established by the Constitution of the French Republic. I likewise promise to carry on no correspondence, to be present at no conversation, to form no connexion, whether within the territories of the Republic or without, which may, in any degree, disturb the public tranquillity; and if in my diocese, or elsewhere, I discover that any thing is going forward to the prejudice of the State, I will immediately communicate to Government all the information I possess." Report, &c. pp. 25, 255—305.

SPAIN.

Of all the States of Europe, the Peninsula of Spain and Portugal have always been the most devoted to the Church of Rome, and "the most obsequious servants of the Roman Pontiff."*

In Spain was first introduced and established that dreadful instrument of papal usurpation and tyranny over the consciences of mankind, the Inquisition; which France, highly to her honour, would never admit, nor suffer to be established in her dominions. But even Spain found it necessary to guard against the encroachments of the See of Rome, in the foregoing points of ecclesiastical regulation, though she nominally admitted the decrees of the Council of Trent; which France openly rejected. Report, p. 203. The Spanish writers all assert the right, and the exercise of the nomination of Prelates by the Crown.

* Hispanos reges excipio, servos Pontificum Romanorum obsequentissimos. Bodin, de Repub. Lib. i. cap. 6.

“The Catholic King has the nomination of Prelates in his kingdom and dominions, by virtue of the right of patronage.—The Catholic King has in Spain, Naples, and Sicily, and his other dominions, the right of electing, naming, and presenting Prelates to prelatures, benefices, and rectories.” Camillus Borellus De præstantia Regis Catholici.

“It is evident that the nomination of Bishops belongs to the King.” Garcias Loaysa, in 12 Council, Tolet. Anni 681. p. 607.

And this right was exercised all along in the Low Countries also.

How jealous the kings were of their prerogatives in this respect, appears from the conduct of Ferdinand II. king of Arragon, in 1479. On the demise of his father, the Pope gave the bishopric of Tarracona to Andrew Martinez. But the King, highly offended at this invasion of his right, ordered Martinez to renounce the Pope’s patent, under pain of his displeasure; and remonstrated with the Pope, that the popes had at all times conferred the benefices in his dominions at the nomination of the kings his predecessors, because they were the founders of those Churches; that the same custom was prevalent in the states of all Christian Princes; and finally, he entreated the Pope not to appoint any more to any Catholic Church in his dominions, without his consent ; and not only with regard to benefices vacated in Spain, but also with regard to those that might happen to become vacant in the Court of Rome. It was further observed by the King, that experience shewed that Churches ought to be confided only to persons who were trust-worthy, and sincerely attached to the welfare of the State ; and that such persons could be known to none, better than the king.

Again, in 1484, when the Pope had appointed to the vacant archbishopric of Seville, Don Rodrigue Borja, Cardinal of Valentia, without the presentation or consent of the king and queen, severe measures were taken. The Duke of Candia, son of the Cardinal, was ordered to retire from court, and deprived of all the pensions and emoluments he held under the crown ; so that the Cardinal was forced to desist from his rash enterprise, and the See was given to Don Diego Hurtado de Mendoça, cousin to the Cardinal of Spain, upon the presentation of the king and queen.—Zurita Annales d'Arragon. See the Originals of those cases, Report, &c. pp. 264, 265.

The present king of Spain, Ferdinand VII. gave a presentation to the Episcopal See of Segovia, in favour of Don Isidore de Celis, August 19, 1814 ; and the present Pope, Pius VII. in his rescript, “ appointing him bishop of Segovia, by desire of the king of Spain,” introduced a clause, requiring the new Bishop “to cause to establish in the city of Segovia a Monte de Piete, or charitable institution for lending money; and that he would not fail to do so, as he valued the force of his conscience.” But the King’s Advocate protested against this clause, as interfering with the Royal prerogative, in imposing a pecuniary contribution on his subjects; and an Act of Council was passed, for striking out the objectionable clause, at Madrid, Dec. 19, 1814.

With a view to preserve their own prerogatives, the Kings of Spain have ordered that every Archbishop or Bishop in Spain, or the Indian provinces, should, before his consecration, swear not to claim or receive the royal revenue, not to obstruct the collection of it, nor to injure in any way the royal jurisdiction; and lastly, to respect the royal patronage; and that, without having complied with this condition, the Archbishops and Bishops should not be put into possession of their respective Sees. This is strictly adhered to in practice.

Their consecration oath to the Pope, omits the clause of swearing “to maintain the royalties of St. Peter;” and also omits the persecuting clause against Heretics, Schismatics, and Rebels against the Pope. And about the middle of the last century, it was ordered by the King, that the Archbishops and Bishops in the Peninsula should, in their oath of consecration, include the clause of fidelity to the King, and of deference to his prerogative ; and those who of late years have been sworn, have ended their consecration oaths with the following words :—

“ All this I swear, without prejudice to the regal rights, and legitimate customs, usages, agreements, laws; and to my entire submission to my Lord Ferdinand, King of Spain and of the Indies. So help me God, and these holy Gospels of God.”

This clause of obedience, and deference to the Royal prerogative, was so disagreeable to the present ambitious Pope, who has every inclination, without the ability, to maintain the ancient usurpation of the Papacy, that a note was transmitted by his Nuncio to the Council of State, requiring that it should be omitted in the consecration oath. But by a resolution of the King in Council, Jan. 12, 1815, it was decreed; That “ inasmuch as his Majesty had been better informed on the subject, no innovation should take place respecting the clause in question.” Report, &c. pp. 312, 313.

During the captivity of the King, by Bonaparte, the Cortes, or Parliament of Spain, abolished the Inquisition, and substituted a new Tribunal, under the title of Protector of the Faith ; and ordered the decree for its establishment to be published in the Parish Churches.

But the Pope's Nuncio in Spain, Gravina Archbishop of Nicea, under-hand, opposed the publication and execution of this Decree, in behalf of his Holiness, until the Pope had given his consent or approbation ; and, by means of a secret correspondence with the Chapters of Malaga and Granada, and the Archbishop of Jaen, exhorting them to delay, and even to refuse their acquiescence to the Decree, endeavoured to sow dissatisfaction and insubordination to the Government among the Spanish Clergy. But the Archbishop of Toledo, President of the Regency, detected the correspondence ; and this induced him to issue a decree, ordering the Nuncio to quit Spain, and to seize upon his temporalities, unless, in future, he should keep within the limits of his mission, and submit all his remonstrances to the inspection of Government, through the medium of the Secretary of State ; concluding thus : “ And your Excellency may be sure, that should you henceforward forget the duties of your charge, his Highness the President will find himself in the painful, though absolute necessity of exercising his full power in the execution of those (duties) which he swore to fulfil, when he accepted the high trust committed into his hands.”

ANTONIO CANO MANUEL.

Cadiz, April 23, 1813.

To his Lordship the Archbishop of Nicea.

And the following Exhortation to the Spanish Hierarchy is subjoined by the President himself :—
“ The Reasons which have compelled me to this resolution, and the incontrovertible truths which, as Protector of the sacred Laws of the Church, I have pointed out in this Manifesto, make me trust that the worthy Prelates of the Spanish Church, and their respectable Chapters, will contribute, by means of their authority and sacred learning, to the fulfilment of the good wishes of the Sovereign Congress, and my own, in favour of Religion and the State."

(Signed)

L. DE BOURBON,

Cardinal of Scala, Archbishop of Toledo,
Cadiz, April 23, 1813.

President.

Thus did this loyal and enlightened President, though one of the College of Cardinals, and thereby more particularly connected with the Pope, temperately, yet firmly, resist the machinations of the Nuncio against the State. See the Documents at length, Report, &c. pp. 343—347.

To these we may add, the severe Edict of the Royal Council, at Madrid, reprobating a Monitory of Jan. 30, 1768, issued by the Court of Rome, against the Government of Parma; and prohibiting the same, and all other writings, letters, or dispatches of said Court, which may in future be introduced into the kingdom, and infringe upon the Royal Prerogative or other rights of Government, or that are likely to disturb the public tranquillity, from being printed or published; and, on the contrary, commanding them to be delivered to the Council, under pain of death, against the Notaries and Lawyers, who act in opposition to the present regulation.

To this Edict is annexed a circular Letter to the Spanish Bishops, prohibiting the Bull in Cœna Domini, to be published in Spain, on which the Pope's Monitory was grounded; and charging his Holiness with indirectly claiming the sovereignty of Parma, though guaranteed to the King's nephew, the Infant Don Ferdinand; and, in this instance, aiming a severe blow against the laws, customs, and prerogatives of the Crown of Spain, and even those of all Europe." And it represents these arbitrary measures of the Pope as owing to the machinations of the Jesuits, in revenge for their expulsion from the Spanish dominions, in consequence of the suppression of the Order by Pope Clement XIV. in his Bull, 1773. Report, &c. pp. 329—337.

How much, indeed, the present ambitious Pontiff is influenced by that crafty and unprincipled Order, is evident from his Bull for its revival in 1814. And, strange to tell, the infatuated Ferdinand VII. issued an edict, June 9, 1815, for their re-establishment in Spain, with their respective colleges, benefices, professing-houses, residences, &c. Report, &c. pp. 350—352.

In consequence of this edict, about thirty Jesuits had returned to Spain, by Mr. Vaughan's report, to Lord Castlereagh, dated Jan. 18, 1816. But they found some difficulty in procuring the restitution of their convents and property, because the Bulls for their re-establishment had not yet been received from Rome. “It is supposed,” he adds, “that the Spanish Government will require the residence of the General of their Order, in Spain, as the remonstrances of his Catholic Majesty have usually proved fruitless, when the Generals of Religious Orders resided at Rome.” Report, &c. pp. 305, 306.

PORtUGAL.

The Crown of Portugal has strenuously asserted its rights and prerogatives, from early times, both in the nomination of Prelates, and controul over Papal rescripts.

When a See became vacant, the Government sent three names to the Pope, who was bound to select the first on the list, and to issue a bull or patent for his consecration. The same usage was retained in the Colonies. Report, &c. p. 487.

How jealous the Portuguese Government is, in respect of the Papal claims, may appear from a recent occurrence, noticed by Sir Charles Stuart to Lord Castlereagh, in his Letter, Jan. 28, 1816.

A Portuguese clergyman, intimate with the Nuncio, wrote a pamphlet questioning the rights of Sovereigns to examine the dogmatic Bulls of the Pope, respecting some truth divinely revealed, or reproofs of errors against faith. But the author having been refused the licences necessary for publication, printed the work in England. A number of copies having been distributed in Portugal, the principles inculcated therein attracted the notice of the Royal Censors of Portugal; one of whom immediately drew up, and transmitted to Government, a critical review of the work, shewing the dangerous tendency of the doctrines supported by the Court of Rome to subvert the established laws of the realm; which induced the Government to direct the Procurador de Corona, or Attorney General, to commence a legal prosecution against the author. An interesting extract from "this very able Review," is given in the Report, pp. 31, 353, 371—373.

The edict of Joseph I. King of Portugal, dated April 4, 1768, forbidding the importation of the Bull In Cœna Domini, and of the Index Expurgatorius supporting it, into his dominions, thus warmly complains of these mischievous publications:—"of the inveterate evil of the clandestine and artful introduction of the Bull entitled In Cœna Domini, which was null and void in its very nature, with respect to all that regards the temporalities of the principal sovereigns, and of their subjects, in matters notoriously foreign to sacerdotal inspection, but inseparably inherent in the supreme secular jurisdiction of the empire;—and also of the subsequent introduction of the Indices Expurgatorii, which, by manifest fraud and irre-mediable nullity, were published in Lisbon, by evident collusion, and a notorious abuse of the absence of the Courts at that time in Madrid, without the previous Regio Beneplacito, which was indispensably necessary to give currency to these Bulls, supported by the Indices aforesaid,—whereby the crafty promulgators deluded and harassed the people, the Clergy, and even the monarchy itself. By such stratagems, they many times shook the crown of Portugal, demolished no less than three times the royal throne itself; and injured and oppressed most atrociously, not only the most respectable tribunals, and the chief magistrates of this capital and of the kingdom, but also the whole community of the Portuguese nation;—whose honours, lives, and properties have now for upwards of a century been sacrificed by the aforesaid fraudulent introduction of the said Bull, intitled In Cœna Domini, and the succeeding Indices Expurgatorii, invented to support it.” See the original Report, &c. pp. 376—381, 385.

The declaration of the Prince Regent of Portugal, from Rio Janeiro, communicated by the Marquis D’Aguillar, against the revival of the order of the Jesuits in his dominions, and addressed to the Portuguese minister at Rome, April 1, 1815, thus freely censures the present Pope, for his inconsistent and underhand dealing:

“ His Royal Highness the Prince Regent, having taken under his consideration the intentions of Pope Pius VII., as published in his bull *Solicitudo omnium,** dated August 7, 1814, by which his Holiness has thought proper to revive the Society of Jesus, which was extinct, thereby derogating (so far as the authority of the Church is concerned) from the other Bull, Dominus ac Redemptor noster of Clement XIV., of glorious memory, July 21, 1773: His Royal Highness is surprised at this determination of his Holiness, this Court never having been informed of it in any way before, although it has had most reason to complain of the Officers of the Society of Jesus; against which Portugal has proceeded in the most energetic manner, by the Ordinance Alvara, of September 3, 1759.

“ The positive instructions of his Royal Highness being to maintain, in their utmost rigour, the dispositions of the above ordinance, (whatever may be the determination of the other crowned heads who associated for the extinction of the said Society) my august Master commands me to communicate his resolution to you, in order that you may immediately present a Note [to the Court of Rome] declaratory of the invariable principles which his Royal Highness intends to maintain ; and conformably to which he enjoins your Lordship to admit no negociation, either verbal or written, on this subject.

* These two Bulls for the suppression and restoration of the Order of the Jesuits, are given at full length, in the Report, &c. the former, pp. 406—422; the latter, pp. 422—426.

“ His Royal Highness has commanded me to write upon these principles to the Apostolic Nuncio ; and, by a Circular addressed to his Ministers residing in the Courts of Europe, they are ordered to make a similar declaration, in order to prevent every indirect overture that may be attempted to be made on this subject.”

(Signed) MARQUIS D'AGUILAR.
Jose Manuel Pinto, Minister Plenipotentiary at the Court of Rome. Report, &c. p. 38.

GERMANY.

Under this head I shall begin with the first article of the Report.

AUSTRIA, including BOHEMIA and HUNGARY.

In Austria and Hungary, the Emperor has the sole right of nominating and appointing the Archbishops and Bishops, both of the Latin and Greek

Churches ; and also the titular Bishops and Prelates for those Chapters and Monasteries in the Turkish dominions, which once formed a part of the Imperial dominions. The Archbishop of Olmutz forms the single exception ; the right of choosing him being vested entirely in the Chapter of that See. The Austrian laws declare, that Bishops hold their power, as well in respect to orders as to jurisdiction, directly from God,—although they do not usually exercise their functions until after consecration. Report, &c. pp. 5, 101.

It is positively enjoined by the Austrian law, that the Episcopal Oath, at consecration, shall neither be given nor taken, in any other than its original and proper sense, of mere canonical obedience to the Pope ; in no wise infringing upon the rights of the Emperor, or the duties of his subjects : to observe which the Bishops, after their nomination, and before their pontifical oath, are obliged to take a special oath of allegiance and fidelity to their sovereign, according to the form prescribed by the Imperial decree of Sept. 16, 1782, in imitation of the Gallican Church. Report, p. 96.

“ I, &c. do swear by the most holy and sacred name of God, and promise to his Majesty the Emperor my sovereign, and his legitimate successors, to be subject and faithful to him all the time of my life ; to promote, to the utmost of my power, the good of the state and that of his service ; and not to have any share in any union, enterprise, or counsel, that might be prejudicial to either. On the contrary, if any thing of such a nature should come to my knowledge, I bind myself immediately to acquaint his Majesty therewith. So help me God, and the Holy Gospels, which I have just now touched." Report, p. 143.

THE CONGRESS OF EMBS.

The four Metropolitan Archbishops of Germany, the Ecclesiastical Electors of Mentz, Treves, and Cologne, and the Prince Archbishop of Salzburg, who all exercise temporal sovereignty in their respective states, complained to the Emperor in his capacity of Supreme Advocate and Protector of the Roman Empire, of sundry usurpations of the Court of Rome, particularly of the undue interference of the tribunals of the Roman Nunciatures, with the Ecclesiastical jurisdiction of the Church of Germany; of the frequent appeals to Rome; of the hardships suffered by the Bishops of Germany, not only from the incredible sums of money sent by them to Rome, for Annates, and Pall-money, but from the debts contracted thereby, and accumulated in many Bishopricks, &c.

Their memorials were addressed to the Emperor Joseph II., in 1784 and 1785; and on October 12, 1785, he wrote a gracious letter to the four Archbishops, declaring, that in his character of Head of the Empire, he was determined to maintain their metropolitan and diocesan rights against all attacks or encroachments of the Papal Court and its Nuncios. And accordingly, he then issued an edict, suppressing the tribunals of the Nuncios, and interdicting the exercise of all jurisdiction on their part, that could interfere with the authority of the Ordinaries.

In consequence of these proceedings, a Congress was held at the Baths of Embs, Aug. 26, 1786, by the four Archbishops; in which twenty-three Articles of Regulation were drawn up and ratified, recognising the independence of the Church of Germany, and vindicating its ancient discipline from the encroachments and usurpations of the Court of Rome.

In these Articles the leading points are the following:—

1. That the oaths required of Bishops at their consecration, devised by Pope Gregory VII. and inserted in the Decretals by Pope Gregory IX. (which Decretals were fabricated about the middle of the ninth century, and falsely attributed to Isidore) ought to be no longer taken; because they enforce the duties belonging to a vassal, rather than canonical obedience; whereby the German Bishops actually bind themselves to what they cannot possibly observe as members of the Empire.

2. That no Bulls, Briefs, or Ordinances of the Pope shall be binding on the Bishops, unless they signify their formal assent.

3. That all matters of Ecclesiastical jurisdiction, according to the primitive usage of the German Church, shall be tried in the Ecclesiastical Court of each particular diocese; with right of appeal from the Bishops to the Metropolitan Court: and that the Papal Nuncio shall not interfere in any cause, whether depending in an inferior or superior court:

4. That all Nunciatures shall cease totally. Nuncios are to be received only in the character of *Envoy*s from the Pope, pursuant to the declaration issued by his Imperial Majesty, October 12, 1785, founded upon the primitive ordinances of the Church, as well as upon the fundamental laws of the Empire.

5. That the Concordates agreed upon between the See of Rome and the German nation, in the Diets of Nuremberg, Freyburg, Worms, Augsburg, &c. have been infringed by the Popes, in a variety of ways. That in the latter Concordate of Aschaffenburg (which was extremely prejudicial to the interests of the German Church) its provisions were only temporary; as appears from the following clause, which frequently occurs:—
“ Except and unless this provision shall be rescinded at some future General Council, with the concurrence of the German nation.”

6. The Congress, therefore, implore his Imperial Majesty, if nothing can be effected by his amicable interposition with the Court of Rome, that he would vouchsafe to take the steps necessary for summoning a General Council, since that of Trent had disappointed the expectation of Reform; or, if this, from a variety of causes, appears to be impracticable, they recommend a National Convention of the German Prelates; or if this fail, from the expected opposition of the Court of Rome; a Diet, like that of Augsburg, in 1548, held by the authority of Charles V.—Report, &c. pp. 10, 12, 133, 146—156.

BADEN.

A curious and interesting Correspondence between the Courts of Rome and of Baden, in the year 1817, respecting the appointment of Baron Wessenberg, to be Vicar Capitular of the vacant diocese of Constance, which was rejected by Pope Pius VII., has engaged and engrossed public attention in Germany. It has been translated into English, from the original Latin and German documents, and lately published by Ackermann, 101, Strand, London, 1819, in a thin octavo; and as it forms a valuable Supplement to the Report of the Committee of the House of Commons, on the Ecclesiastical Regulations of the German States, I will here introduce an abridgment of the Correspondence, referring the reader for fuller information to the work itself: than which, nothing is better calculated to exhibit, in genuine colours, the obstinate aversion and opposition of the Court of Rome to any measures of Reform in the Roman Catholic Church, however moderate, or expedient; and the pertinacious vigilance and systematic views of the present hoary Pontiff, to promote, directly or indirectly, the unlimited extension of the Papal power over temporal Sovereigns, as well as Ecclesiastical Dignitaries.

Baron Ignatius Henry von Wessenberg, a Canon of the Cathedral Church of Constance, has been for many years Vicar General of the diocese, under the Prince Primate Charles Theodore von Dolberg, Grand Duke of Frankfort, Archbishop of Ratisbon, and Bishop of Constance; and with his consent and approbation, introduced sundry regulations and ordinances into the administration of the diocese of Constance, which were universally commended by the wise and good, and gained him the esteem and confidence of his own Prince the Duke of Baden, and of the sovereigns of Germany. His piety is without superstition, his moral principles of the purest kind, his charity without ostentation, his benevolence universal, and his zeal and activity to promote the glory of God and the public good unparalleled. Wessenberg, like Luther, is resolute and undaunted in his temperate reform, without his impetuosity or violence;—Wessenberg, like Luther, has many followers, and supporters of the highest rank; and both Roman Catholics and Protestants are unanimous in their wishes for his success in the present contest with the Court of Rome.

The following is a sketch of the chief regulations and provisions introduced during his vicariate in the extensive diocese of Constance.

1. Diminution of the number of holy days.— This was designed to remove the incentives to idleness, extravagance, and vice, by the excessive number of festivals required to be kept holy by the Church of Rome.

Retaining all the Sundays in the year for divine service, religious instruction, and abstinence from secular employments,— he admitted only the following festivals to be kept holy, abolishing the rest.

1. The Circumcision, or New Year's Day ;—
2. The Epiphany, or Twelfth Day ;— 3. The Purification of the Virgin Mary ;— 4. St. Joseph's Day ;— 5. The Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin ;— 6. Easter Monday ;— 7. The Ascension ;— 8. Pentecost ;— 9. Corpus Christi ;— 10. St. Peter and Paul ;— 11. Assumption ;— 12. Birth of Mary ;— 13. All Saints ;— 14. Conception of Mary ;— 15. Christmas Day ;— 16. St. Stephen's ;— and lastly, 17. The peculiar festival of the Patron, or Protecting Saint, in every parish church.

2. Dispensations from fasts on the eves of the festivals abolished. In the stead of which, all the Wednesdays and Fridays in Advent were to be observed as fast days.

3. Allowance to eat flesh meat on all the Saturdays of the year, except Saturday in Passion Week.

4. Dispensations to the Religious Orders from the vow of celibacy, in urgent cases.

5. Promise of marriage not to be binding, except solemnly made before marriage, in the presence of the lawful pastor, and two witnesses at least. To be followed by the publication of banns three separate times ; and the celebration never to take place on the day of the promise of marriage, except in special cases, with the licence of the Episcopal Commissariat.

6. Marriages of minors not permitted, without the previous consent of their parents or guardians. Males under twenty, and females under eighteen, reckoned minors.

In case both parties, or one only, are minors, the promise of marriage shall not be deemed binding, until a period of eight days for consideration shall have elapsed ; within which period, either of the parties may recede. All these legal forms and impediments were humanely designed, to prevent precipitancy, law-suits, &c. detrimental to domestic happiness and public morals.

7. Administration of Baptism in private houses permitted, and even recommended, when newborn infants were either weakly, or at a great distance from the church; or in winter, during the severity of the weather. And the baptismal cold water, in such cases, recommended to be mixed with warm; and not to be poured in great quantity, nor far from the head of the infants, in order not to injure or shock their delicate frame. Baptismal suppers and extra fees to the officiating priest prohibited in such cases.

8. Lay Baptism, by midwives, or other persons, permitted, in emergency, when infants are born dangerously ill, or become so, after their birth.

9. Seminaries for the Education of the secular, or parochial Clergy, in which they shall be instructed, not only in the course of Theology, but also in the practical duties of the Pastoral care: and after a year's residence, at least, in such seminaries, to be examined as to their proficiency, previous to their admission to Holy Orders.

10. Provisions for the payment of the salaries of Professors, and of the stipends of the Clergy, according to a new distribution of the benefices of the diocese.

11. Asylums for superannuated Professors and Clergy, if meritorious.

12. An improved Ritual for the diocese of Constance, in which were introduced additional prayers in the mother tongue, at the celebration of the Sacraments, to render them more edifying and impressive; and select hymns and popular melodies, to render the public service more engaging.

Such were the pious, benevolent, and judicious regulations, which gained the approbation of the wise and good, throughout the diocese of Constance, and all Germany; but which, unhappily, incurred the displeasure of his Holiness, and the Court of Rome, and only tended to draw down their censure and persecution upon the author and adviser!

I. The first expression of the Papal displeasure, was a brief, November 2, 1814, addressed to the Prince Primate, or Bishop of Constance, requiring him to dismiss Wessenberg from the office of Vicar General, in the following haughty terms:—
 “ Above all things, according to our supreme authority, and in virtue of your holy obedience, we command, that without any delay, you do dismiss from the office of Vicar General of the Church of Constance (the administration of which was committed to you by our special favour) that infamous Wessenberg;* of whose perverse doctrines, worse examples, and rash strivings against the commands of the Apostolic See, information has been brought to us, and proved by most certain documents, insomuch that we can no longer tolerate him without great offence to the faithful, and without injury to our own conscience.”—

* Famosum illum Wessenberg.

This mandate had no weight with the Prince Primate. In his answer, he thus vindicates the character of his Vicar General from the Pope's vague and general charge:—

— “The Canon of Wessenberg, by promoting a more perfect style of sacred music, and introducing new and more sublime forms of prayers, and maintaining them with undaunted and persevering zeal, excited the odium and scandal of the weak-minded.* Meanwhile it cannot be denied, that both by pastoral practice and theological study, by his own example and indefatigable labour, he has excited a spirit of information, zeal, and piety in a great number of the priesthood; he is a man commendable to all for his genius, piety, and integrity of life. The aforesaid Canon enjoys the best repute among all the learned, and the nobles, in Germany. Hence, I most humbly supplicate your Holiness, wish not to condemn him unheard; let his honour and his life advance with equal pace. “Hear also the other side.”

As an additional mark of esteem and confidence, shortly after, in 1815, the Prince Primate, when oppressed with age and infirmities, appointed Wessenberg, his coadjutor also; which dignified station he held till the demise of his patron, February 10, 1817, during which time the Court of * Odium et scandalum pusillorum excitavit.

---

Rome kept a profound silence respecting this new appointment.

On the Prince Primate's death, the Chapter of Constance, Feb. 19, 1817, elected Wessenberg Vicar Capitular of the diocese of Constance; and appointed Dr. Reiniger his assistant; and addressed a Letter to the Pope, requesting his Holiness's confirmation of their election.

This procedure of the Chapter was unnecessary, because the papal approbation is not required for a Vicar Capitular, though it is for a Bishop; and it was officious, because it was done without consulting their sovereign the Duke of Baden, though he approved of their choice; and it was irregular, because the election by Chapter was abolished by sect. 62. of the Recess of a Deputation of the Empire, to frame the New German Constitution of 1803, as remarked by the Duke in his Memorial, p. 21.

Their application, however, produced a severe reprimand from his Holiness, in his Brief to the Chapter of March 15, 1817: in which he censured them for contempt of his Brief to the Prince Primate, Nov. 2, 1814, requiring the dismissal of Wessenberg from the office of Vicar General; and now commanding them, in virtue of the Apostolic authority intrusted to him by God, for the good of the whole Church, to set aside the election of Wessenberg, as still more unfit to fill the important office of Vicar Capitular; and informing them, that none of the spiritual tribunals should pay the smallest attention to any writings issued by Wessenberg, or his representative Reiniger, page 1.

To this the Chapter replied, in their Letter, May 3, 1817, pleading ignorance of the Brief of Nov. 2, 1814, which the Prince Primate never had communicated to them, nor to Wessenberg; and thus maintaining with firmness the qualifications of their Vicar Capitular:—

“ We were entirely persuaded most firmly, that we acted in strict conformity to the intention of the Council of Trent, for the administration of this diocese, when deprived of its ordinary President, and as the true good of the diocese required. Nor were we led by any other reason to elect our colleague, Ignatius Henry Von Wessenberg, Vicar Capitular, than our own knowledge and experience, and that of all the Clergy of this diocese, during the whole course of his residence among us intimately for twenty years; that he acted always with approved integrity of life and morals, was perfectly versed in the ecclesiastical sciences; and that he exercised the office of Vicar General for fifteen years back, until our Bishop’s decease, with the highest approbation and the best example; and with the reputation of distinguished merit suitable to his dignity. And, further, that he had acquired the good-will of the sovereign Princes of Germany, and a singular confidence in his manner of transacting ecclesiastical business, which is most necessary, especially at this critical juncture.

"A doubt, therefore, could not occur to us, that the provisional administration of the diocese could not be consigned by us to any one more safely or more suitably, than to our colleague aforesaid, adorned with such endowments and deserts: and this election of ours obtained the full approbation of the Civil Government."

Not satisfied with this explanation, his Holiness addressed a Brief to the Grand Duke of Baden, May 21, p. 1817, complaining of the conduct of the late Prince Primate, for refusing to dismiss Wessenberg from the office of Vicar General, in obedience to his Brief of Nov. 2, 1814, complaining also of the Chapter of Constance for electing him Vicar Capitular, and paying no attention to his Brief of last March 18, 1817, requiring them to reject him, and to chuse another pious and fit successor; and calling upon his Royal Highness to support the steps he had taken, and to empower the Chapter to chuse another Vicar Capitular; concluding with these reasons for his rejection:—
 1. "What respect can be entertained by Believers for a man whom all the good abhor, and hold in contempt; and 2. Of whom they know, by certain and undoubted proofs, that he does not possess our approbation: and 3. So far from the public tranquillity finding any support in him, there is much more reason to apprehend, that the defending his cause may alienate, and even irritate the minds of the Catholics; and may consequently be attended with the interruption of peace and good order." pp. 2—5.

But his Royal Highness rejected the Pope's application; and in answer thereto, June 16, 1817, thus vindicated the conduct of Wessenberg :—

— “ Nothing more unpleasant and more unexpected could have occurred to us, than to learn that your Holiness, by an Apostolical Brief to the Chapter of Constance, issued without our knowledge, and presented to us at a much later period, should have rejected, in so contumelious a manner, as an improper person, a man whom, from the esteem in which he is held by all good and well-disposed individuals, we conceive to have deserved so highly of the Catholic Church.

“ We can therefore only account for the injury thus done to Ignatius Henry Von Wessenberg, by supposing that it originated in the envy of the undeserving. The love of justice, and of order, inherent in your Holiness, will afford him proper reparation.

“ In the mean time, we must observe, that when the first Brief (March 15, 1817) came to our knowledge, it occasioned us very much pain. And as we deem ourselves authorized, and even bound to secure the observance of the Old Concordats, and to afford protection to an innocent man, condemned without trial,—we feel ourselves called upon to oppose the execution of the Apostolic Brief in question, by all the means in our power: and in this resolution we shall persist, until it can be proved before a competent tribunal, and in the way and mode prescribed by the said Concordats, that there are Canonical impediments to the election of Henry Von Wessenberg: for, from all that is known of him to us, and to our temporal and spiritual authorities hitherto, even the most rigorous judicial investigation of his life, and the way in which he has discharged his duties, will have no other effect than to establish his innocence and rectitude in the most complete and satisfactory manner; and to recommend him to the favour of your Holiness.” pp. 6, 7.

Wessenberg now proposed, and with the approbation of his Sovereign, to go to Rome in person, “to mark his filial submission to the Supreme Head of the Church, and to offer explanations of the charges brought against him to his Holiness.” And accordingly, the Duke of Baden’s Minister for Foreign Affairs wrote to Cardinal Gonsalvi, the Pope’s Secretary of State, June 25, 1817, informing him of the Baron Wessenberg’s intention “to throw himself at the feet of his Holiness, in order to afford such personal explanations as the Holy Father might demand, in order to convince him of the unobjectionable nature of his sentiments, and of their conformity to the principles of the Catholic religion; and requesting, on the part of his Royal Highness, that his Eminency would give the Baron a favourable reception himself, and procure it for him from the Pope likewise. pp. 8, 9.

Wessenberg, after this, set out on his journey, and reached Rome, July 18, 1817. There he was kept in attendance for seven weeks, without being admitted to an audience of his Holiness; and, at length, Sept. 2, 1817, he received a prolix Note from Cardinal Gonsalvi, pp. 9—27, stating the Charges urged against him.

The Charges were of two descriptions, respecting Erroneous Doctrines and Sentiments imputed to him; and Mal-administration of the Diocese of Constance, during his Vicariate.

To these specific Charges he made a distinct and circumstantial Defence, in his Answer, Sept. 12, 1817, pp. 28—46.*

* Abstract of the leading Charges made against Wessenberg; and his Defence:—

1. C. Contempt of the Papal Brief of Nov. 2, 1814, to the late Prince Primate, in not resigning his office of Vicar General.

D. That Brief was never communicated to Wessenberg, nor to the Chapter of Constance, by the deceased Bishop.

2. C. Contempt of the Brief of March 15, 1817, to the Chapter of Constance, in not resigning the office of Vicar Capitular.

D. Could not resign it without compromising the interests of the Chapter, and of the Sovereign who concurred in his election; but, to shew his deference, he abstained from the personal exercise of his office.

A second Note from Cardinal Gonsalvi, dated Oct. 16, 1817, declared his Defence unsatisfactory

---

3. C. His Ordinance respecting Promises of Marriage, not to be binding without the previous consent of parents and guardians, &c. Dec. 10, 1804.

D. This Ordinance was Episcopal, and of long standing, in the time of the foregoing Bishop Max. Christoph. related only to promises of marriage, not to Marriage itself; and was renewed, to prevent precipitancy, fraud, and law-suits, &c. attending Promises of Marriage made without the necessary solemnities, and without witnesses.

4. C. The Ordinance relating to Mixed Marriages between Catholics and Protestants, Dec. 3, 1805.

D. Such Marriages allowed in all countries in which the Protestants enjoy the same civil and political rights as the Catholics.

5. C. The Ordinance respecting the administration of Baptism in private houses, Aug. 20, 1806.

D. This Ordinance Episcopal, and founded on its necessity, in case of danger.

6. C. Justification of Professor Dereser, against the Brief of Pope Pius VI. to the Archbishop of Cologne, condemning the doctrines taught by him.

D. The Vicariate of Constance did not conceive this Brief to be a final judgment, but merely a call on the Archbishop to enquire into the Charges, which after the strictest investigation at Constance, and also at Aschaffenburg, were found to be groundless.

7. C. Justification of Hekelsmuller, Vicar of Grizenbach, deposed on a charge of preaching scandalous doctrine, that the adoration of Saints is erroneous; that pilgrimages should be abolished, &c. by the temporal government of Soleure.

to the Pope and his Council, and urged implicit obedience to the Pope's Briefs, pp. 46—55.

---

D. The temporal government had no right to interfere in the first instance. The Vicar having appealed against their sentence, their proceedings were found to be irregular; and after a close investigation, the accused Vicar was acquitted of the charges by the Vicariate of Constance.

8. C. Offensive questions proposed for a competitive probation at Constance, May 5, 1806.

An Pontificatus ab Episcopatu Romano avelli queat?

An is, salvo ecclesiæ systemate, commutari queat in patriarchatum?

“ Whether the Pontificate can be rent from the Roman Episcopate ?

“ Whether it can be changed, saving the Constitution of the Church, into a Patriarchate ?

D. These questions, not published by the Vicariate,—were only intended to ensure the adoption of Doctrines truly Catholic, and conformable to the principles of the Church respecting the supremacy of the Holy See. If answered improperly (which however was not the case), the disputants would have been corrected, and subjected to a new probation.

9. C. Several improper books, composed, approved of, or adopted by the Vicar General.

D. Denies the fact. If they contained errors, he was very far from approving them.

10. C. Diminution of the number of Festivals prescribed by the Church.

D. Originated with the Bishop himself, in compliance with the urgent desires of the Sovereigns, and in virtue of the Bull of his Holiness Clement XIV.

11. C. Permission to eat flesh meat on Saturdays, in opposition to his Holiness's Brief of Feb. 4, 1809.

This produced a second Answer from Wessenberg, Nov. 18, 1817; in which are the following

---

D. Required by the Austrians, and their Sovereigns, on account of the high price of the food suited to festivals, and granted by the predecessor of the Prince Primate; the Prince Primate requested to enter into a correspondence with the Sovereigns, and then to return a respectful answer to his Holiness's Brief.

12. C. Agreement in Spirituals, between the Prince Bishop of Constance and the Government of Lucerne, May 25, 1807, respecting Ecclesiastical Seminaries, Asylums, and care of Superannuated Pastors, Provision for Professors, &c. Equalization of parishes, &c. as concerted by Wessenberg, and carried by his influence with the Bishop.

D. Acted in obedience to his Bishop's instructions, and from no other motive than the desire of serving the Church.

13. C. All writs from Rome to be deprived of effect, until approved by the Bishop's Court.

D. This measure a confirmation of the old practice of the Diocese, designed merely to prevent abuses of the authority of the Holy See.

14. C. Prevention of the Clergy of Constance from obtaining absolutions, and other writs from the Court of Rome.

D. They were never prohibited, but only required to make their applications through the organ of the Vicariate.

15. C. Invasion of the privileges and exemptions of regulars, and dispensations from the vow of continence.

D. These reserved cases for the Bishop granted only in smaller numbers, sede impedita; while access to the Holy See was obstructed.

16. C. Introduction of the mother tongue, and other scandalous abuses into the Liturgy, under pretence of zeal for the old discipline of the Church.

passages :—“ After dedicating, with disinterestedness, a long series of years to the service of the

---

D. No alteration made in the Liturgy itself. The additional prayers and exhortations in the mother tongue, only designed to render the administrations of the Sacrament more instructive and edifying.

17. C. That he was a member of the Free Masons; and associated with five worthless Clergymen, to banish every idea of the divinity of Jesus Christ from Germany.

D. Rejects such base calumnies with disdain, and rests on the dignity of his character, to bear him out against them.

18. C. That all good Catholics of Germany have for many years exclaimed loudly against him; and that even now, while he is at Rome, very grave accusations pour in from thence respecting his principles, and conspiracy against the centre of Catholic Union.

D. To this he replies in the following animated strain :—
 “ Are then the number of Catholics in Germany, of all ranks, who honour me with their esteem, and particularly the numerous Clergymen who are attached to me, not good Catholics? Forgive me, my Lord, this deduction: Your Eminency is too just and enlightened, not to see that it was possible for informers, who shun the open day, to succeed in darkening for a time the opinion of his Holiness with respect to my person; but that it is a singular piece of arrogance in them, to imagine that they constitute the public opinion in Germany. Every man, conspicuous from his station, his talents, or even his merits, is subject to the tribunal of public opinion. I have never had cause to dread it. My conduct will serve me as a shield against the charge or suspicion of participating in any conspiracy against the centre of unity of the Catholic Church. I have at all times avowed the principles which are taught by the Church herself. Besides, the charge of being at the head

Church, it could not fail to be painful for me to learn, that I had incurred the disgrace of the

---

of a conspiracy against the central point of Catholic unity, cannot reach me, without recoiling on the Clergymen who have uniformly given me proofs of the most perfect attachment. But these Clergymen, who are altogether deserving of the highest eulogium, on account of their information and their zeal, have always accounted it their glory, to honour in his Holiness, the Successor of St. Peter, and the Vicar of Jesus Christ on earth; and by their labours to propagate the doctrine of the Church, respecting the supremacy of honour and jurisdiction of the Holy See. What can I oppose to my calumniators but my conscience, my conduct, and the Clergymen who know me?"

In answer to this, the Cardinal, in his Second Note, objects:—

"Monsignor Dolberg, the Prince Primate himself, did not possess sufficient resolution to acquit you of this Charge. This Prelate, in his answer to the Holy Father, on the subject in question, expressed himself with respect to you thus: "The people are commonly averse to recent innovations in the forms of religious worship; and while he pointed you out as the author, added, The Canon Wessenberg, by his intrepid and constant zeal, excited odium and scandal." P. 53.

Here is a shameful mutilation and perversion of evidence: The Prince Primate added, pusillorum, "of the weak-minded," confining "the odium and scandal" to such as we have seen. By dropping this word, his praise is converted into censure. As the Letter to his Holiness was private, the Cardinal thought he might escape detection. Fortunately, a draught of it was found among his papers after his death.

Vane LIGUR!

Nequicquam PATRIAS tentasti lubricus ARTES.

"Wily Italian! vainly, to no purpose, Hast thou attempted the Papal arts."

common Father of believers. This feeling, however, shall only give additional strength to my honest zeal, to merit his approbation, by a conduct conformable to the spirit of the Gospel and of the Church.

"I have appropriate duties toward the Chapter and the Clergy of the Diocese, I have similar duties toward my territorial Sovereign, and I bear general duties toward Germany. They ought to be the more inviolable with me, from the consideration, that, in every respect, they are in unison with my duties toward the Church and her Head."

p. 56.

A third Note from Cardinal Gonsalvi, Dec. 11, 1817, rejects the foregoing plea, as giving his particular duties a preference over his paramount duties to the Church, and its supreme Head; and requiring him to evince his submission to the Brief of March 15, 1817; by resigning the Capitular Vicariate, repenting of his opposition to the doctrines and commands of the Church, with a promise of reforming his conduct in future. pp. 57 to 59.

This produced a third and final Answer, Dec. 16, 1817, stating his resolution to adhere to the duties stated in his former letter, to leave Rome directly, and refer the result of the business to the consideration of his Sovereign; at the same time expressing his readiness to make any personal sacrifice on his part that might facilitate the adjustment of the business, to the satisfaction of all the parties concerned. "I shall esteem it," said he, "honourable to me, before God and man, to offer such a sacrifice to the Church, to my Country, and to the Holy Father. I have it infinitely at heart to convince his Holiness of the purity and rectitude of my character." pp. 59—61.

Pending this fruitless negociation of five months at Rome, the cause of Wessenberg was warmly espoused by the several Chapters of the parochial Clergy in that part of the Diocese of Constance belonging to Baden. A Letter, signed by their heads, Oct. 3, 1817, was sent to him at Rome, vindicating him especially from the Papal charges, that his conduct was unpopular, and his promotion to the Bishoprick would tend to disturb the public peace and tranquillity. They deny both, in the following terms:—"We assure you, that the common people, with whom we live and converse daily, and therefore know better than all the enemies of your Excellency, do not, nor ever did, entertain that malice towards you, with which they are charged by the malevolent; and that they are altogether free from any desire of intermeddling in Ecclesiastical affairs that do not concern them. While the better sort, possessed of greater mental endowments, and more capable of distinguishing good from evil, truth from falsehood, to whom your zeal, endowments, works, and way of life are known, hold you in the highest veneration; and would be afflicted with no less grief than ourselves, should they hear that such a man as you, celebrated for the most exquisite doctrine in all Germany, nay, celebrated for your writings and actions throughout all Europe almost, acknowledged as the Father of those placed under his charge, the Benefactor of the poor, and the Promoter of every thing that is good, should be excluded from the Episcopal Dignity; a man from whom all civil as well as ecclesiastical benefits were to be expected.

pp. 203—211.

This was followed up by another most honourable testimony to his public and private worth, in a Declaration of the Clergy of the several Chapters of the Principalities of Hohenzollern, Hechingen, and Sigmaringen, parts of the Diocese of Constance in Swabia, March 5, 1818. pp. 211 to 215.

And, to crown all, his Royal Highness the Duke of Baden himself published a dignified Memorial, May 17, 1818, recapitulating the heads of this mass of evidence, and declaring his decided resolution to support the Baron Wessenberg in his office of Vicar General, against the mandates of the Court of Rome; and considering the particular case of the Diocese of Constance, as a general ecclesiastical concern of the German nation; and the conduct of the Court of Rome on this occasion as evincing a system of encroachment upon the rights and liberties of the German Church, he felt himself compelled, as a preliminary measure, to lay the whole correspondence before the high Federal Assembly of the Diet at Frankfort. p. xix to xxx.

11. Another flagrant instance of Papal aggression on the rights and jurisdiction of the venerable and extensive Diocese of Constance, is noticed in this Correspondence.

In the beginning of January, 1815, the Apostolical Nuncio in Switzerland addressed an Edict "to the Abbots, Provosts, Deans, and other Ecclesiastics in that part of Switzerland, included within the Diocese of Constance, informing them that the whole of it had been separated by his Holiness the Pope, from the Diocese of Constance, for the most just and weighty reasons, by Apostolical Letters; and that Bernard Goeldlin, Priest and Provost of the Berne Collegiate Church in Lucerne, had been elected Apostolical Vicar, to whom alone the legitimate authority shall belong."

Roused by this arbitrary and clandestine invasion of their rights and privileges, the Chapter of Constance addressed a spirited remonstrance to his Holiness, Feb. 1, 1815, of which the following is an extract. pp. 93—101.

" Most Holy Father,

" We have been afflicted with great grief by the public Edict of the Apostolic Nuncio in Switzerland—which we learned, not from the Apostolic Nunciature, but, we are sorry to say, from public report; and a few days after, the more melancholy news was communicated by our Bishop himself, that your Holiness had denounced to him, the actual separation of the Catholic Cantons of Switzerland from this Diocese, by the plenitude of your Apostolical power: the intelligence of which oppressed us with new uneasiness; the more grievous, because we are not conscious to ourselves of having committed any crime that could possibly draw down the indignation of your Holiness upon us; and still less are we able to conjecture what causes could have occurred to oppress with such great ruin the Diocese of Constance, distinguished above others for its antiquity and ample extent.

“ The Apostolic Nunciature, indeed, does not specify in its edict the particular causes which have brought this calamity upon the Diocese; but it declares them to be ‘such as should rather be lamented than recalled to remembrance.’ Let these causes, altogether unknown to us, be what they may, they can by no means affect us who are pure from all offence. Let the guilty suffer; but let not the Diocese of Constance, flourishing upwards of 1200 years, suffer for the fault of others.

“ Our conscience, tenacious of what is just and right, suggested to us by means of circular letters, from our mandatory Anthony Reiniger, Doctor of Theology and Pro-Vicar General, specially instructed by us for the purpose, addressed to the Republic of the Swiss, and each of its Cantons, and the whole Clergy, January 31, 1815, to protest against this separation; and availing ourselves of the remedy of the Common Law, to appeal to your Holiness, as ill informed, and requiring to be better informed.*

" Our Bishop is said to have assented to the dismemberment of this diocese, but on certain conditions, and saving the consent of the parties interested. He ought, however, to have been aware that his opinion alone was not sufficient in a case of so much moment.

" Among those whose rights are prejudiced by this measure, the renowned Helvetian Republic justly claims the first place: which indeed had besought from your Holiness a proper Bishop of its own nation; but never entertained a wish, of which we are certain, that the rights of its venerable Mother Church and diocese of Constance, should be so precipitately laid prostrate, as if smitten with a thunderbolt, setting aside all cognizance of the cause, and that all sense of the gratitude due thereto should be extirpated: but how foreign this was from the intention of your Holiness, clearly appears from the tenor of your Apostolical Brief of October 7, 1814, addressed to the Helvetian Republic, in which your Holiness most graciously approved of the most devoted prayers of the Cantons, and gave it in command to the Apostolical Nuncio, in the mean time, to make the proper preparations relative thereto.

* Ad Sanctitatem vestram male informatum, meliusque informandum provocaremus.

“ It was his duty, therefore, unquestionably, during the interval of those discussions, to have preserved the episcopal regimen of the diocese, untouched and inviolate, until all things were regulated, in a just and proper manner, according to the Sacred Canons ; entering into consultation, not with the Bishop only, but with the Cathedral Chapter also, who both together constitute the Church of Constance. And this we know to have been the wish of the sounder part of the Helvetic Cantons. But it seems to have been the fixed determination of the Nuncio of Lucerne, rather to exceed the limits of the Apostolic Mandate, than to omit the opportunity offered to him of inflicting a mortal wound on this diocese, which he disliked without any approved cause, and to annihilate it as far as lay in his power.”

And they conclude their admirable remonstrance, all written with the same spirit and temper, thus : —

“ While we most humbly express these our sentiments to your Holiness, we only fulfil our duty and sworn fidelity ; to furnish a document to posterity, that nothing was omitted on our part to preserve the integrity of the diocese ; and that it did not depend on us that the separation of

Switzerland from this Bishopric was not prevented.

“ Prostrate at the consecrated feet of your Holiness, with a fixed, and most devoted kiss, we most humbly supplicate your Apostolical Benediction.

“ Your Holiness’s most humble and “ most obedient servants,

“ The Senior and the Capitular Canons of the Catholic Church of Constance.”

Feb. 1, 1815.

This spirited remonstrance appears to have embarrassed the Pope and his Council not a little. A year and half elapsed before any notice was taken of it. At length, determined not to retract, a haughty and imperious Papal Brief was sent to them, Sept. 7, 1816, thus censuring their conduct:—

————— “ With great grief, we perused your Letter, full of complaints, in which you mentioned not only a mandate against that separation, transmitted by your order, to the said Cantons and their Clergy, but even a solemn act, by which you appealed to us, as ill informed, and requiring to be better informed.”

“ Truly, we shuddered in perusing these acts, and inwardly grieved that you were so miserably carried away, that, forgetting the reverence due to us and to our prescriptions, you did not blush to combat them publicly, and to declare null, void, and of no effect, the measures that were taken to carry them into execution.—In consequence of such great contempt of the Apostolic See, we are compelled to apply the power granted to us by God; lest we should be accused of acting contrary to the rule of the paternal sanctions of St. Peter, and of forsaking the cause of his See:—we therefore consigned to the consideration of some of our venerable brethren, the Cardinals of the Holy Roman Empire, the Mandate of the Pro-Vicar Reininger, dated Jan. 31, 1815;—and also the Act of Appeal, framed by him the same day, in your name. When, therefore, after mature examination, they were found to contain propositions, both in their obvious sense and in their tendency respectively false, pernicious, hurtful to the authority of the Roman Pontiff, and at least erroneous; by the advice of these our venerable brethren, We do, of our certain knowledge and Apostolical power, condemn and reprobate them, and declare that they shall be for ever held as condemned and reprobated; and both them, and whatever thence shall in any way be appointed or done against our decrees, either at present, or in future, we decree to be absolutely null, void, invalid, unjust, vain, and void of force and effect; and as far as may be necessary, we do, by the same authority, rescind and annul all the aforesaid acts, and will them to be of no force.

"Moreover, to remove and punish the scandal by which you have done so great an injury to the Apostolic See, we should have recourse to the remedies proposed by the Sacred Canons, especially by the two constitutions of John xxii. the one beginning with Salvator Noster, the other with Nuper; but that paternal charity with which we incessantly embrace you, restrains us from applying the same; and at the same time inspires hope, that when you have seriously weighed the heinousness of your misdeeds, ye may repent, and by a prompt, ingenuous, salutary reformation, retract your mandate and appeal."

This brutum fulmen having no effect on the hardened minds of the Chapter, His Holiness, as a last effort, endeavoured to prevail on the Duke of Baden to sanction the separation, in his forementioned Letter of May 21, 1817, complaining of Wessenberg; which he sent by the Archbishop of Chalcedon, Apostolic Nuncio in Switzerland.

But his Serene Highness, in answer, June 16, 1817, objected to the separation, on the ground of the New Arrangements of Germany, settled by deputation, Feb. 25, 1803; alleging that the Swiss Commissioners had claimed, and actually obtained from those of Baden, Feb. 6, 1804, the sum of 300,000 florins, from the Revenue of the See of Constance, for endowing a Bishopric and Cathedral in the Swiss territories; but still subject to Constance as the Mother Church.

Such are the ill-judged and unavailing efforts of the present bigoted and pertinacious Pontiff to establish the pretended rights and ancient usurpations of the See of Rome. Though “fallen from her high estate,” the Court of Rome still seems incapable of moderation; and, as judiciously remarked by the Bavarian Attorney-General, Rudhart, in an Introduction prefixed to the English Translation of the Correspondence, dated Aug. 1, 1818, “The spirit of the Papacy remains unaltered through a series of ages, in spite of the change manifested in the spirit of the times. It has, on the one hand, no longer the darkness of earlier centuries for ally; while, on the other, opponents of a different mettle are to be faced. Formerly the Popes, supported by the People and the Clergy, entered the list against Sovereigns only; now the People themselves, joined with their Princes and Clergy, form fearful odds; and these three, assailed by the Papal See, will, through the obstinacy of their opponents, in the end, feel induced and compelled to settle their Ecclesiastical concerns among themselves without Roman interference.”—Introduction, p. 18.

SUIS ROMA IPSA VIRIBUS RUIT.

“*Rome herself, by her own efforts,
Is falling to ruin.*”

In Germany, at least, the Reformation begun by Luther, is likely to be completed by Wessen- berg.—All Germany is in expectation, awaiting in anxious suspense the issue of this contest.—“The fate of Rome, as an Ecclesiastical Power, is now suspended in the balance; perhaps at this moment, it is already determined, or secretly understood at least among the august members of the HOLY ALLIANCE, composed of the three leading Christian persuasions. They have, with the aid of Divine Providence, succeeded in hurling the Political Tyrant from his throne, and restoring the Civil Liberties of Europe. By crushing the arbitrary power of Ecclesiastical usurpation, likewise, and thereby effecting a re-union of the whole Family of CHRIST, they would raise to themselves the noblest and most durable monuments in the hearts of their subjects, and secure the blessings of grateful ages to come.”—Introduction, p. 11.

ITALY.

THE MILANESE, AND AUSTRIAN LOMBARDY.

The Archbishop of Milan is in the sole appointment of the Crown. The Pope’s nomination of the Emperor’s subjects only, to the four Bishoprics of Pavia, Cremona, Lodi, and Como, has hitherto been attended to, in their presentation by the Crown; but the Bishops were required, previous to their consecration, to take a special oath of allegiance to the Emperor.

The Collation to all Ecclesiastical Benefices, by virtue of Papal Reservations, was no longer admitted.

All Bulls, even those concerning dogmatic points, are to be submitted to the Royal inspection, so far as necessary to ascertain that they contained no improper article, but are purely dogmatical.

The Monasteries not suppressed, are rendered entirely independent of foreign jurisdiction; and their Generals to be nominated by the Archbishop of Vienna.—Report, pp. 168—171.

VENICE.

Before the Venetian States were annexed to the Crown of Austria, the Senate was vigilant to repel the encroachments of the See of Rome.

The two Patriarchs of Venice and Aquileia were chosen by the Senate; and neither of them were allowed to interfere in the collation of Ecclesiastical benefices.

On a vacancy occurring in any Episcopal See, the names of three Ecclesiastics were transmitted by the Senate to Rome, and the requisite Bull of institution was sent by the Pope to the first on the list.

All Bulls from Rome were ordered to be sent to the Inquisitors of State, "without the seal being broken." And no brief, rescript, monitory, or general letter, of whatever nature it may be, to be executed, without the previous examination and licence of the College of Senators, under penalty of condign punishment, according to the quality of the offender, and the magnitude of the transgression.

The Austrian Code will now probably supersede that of the Republic.—Report, &c. pp. 172 — 176.

TUSCANY.

Of the Ecclesiastical Regulations of this State, the following are the principal :—

On a vacancy occurring in any Episcopal See, the Tuscan Government presents to the Pope the names of four individuals ; recommending at the same time, by means of the Minister at Rome, the one more particularly designated to fill the vacancy ; the other three being considered as objects of simple formality.—Report, pp. 181, 182.

With respect to the inferior Clergy, in all cases, whether of free nomination, or of Ecclesiastical patronage claimed by the Holy See, or the Chapter Collegiate or Cathedral, they are all required to be appointed by the Bishops, upon examination of the fittest persons; notwithstanding any asserted or pretended reservations of the Roman Court.—Report, p. 16.

The regular Clergy are required to study theology from books permitted by the sovereign.—Report, p. 17.

An Edict was issued by the Secretary of State, in 1788, abolishing in all its extent, the tribunal of the Papal Nuncio in Tuscany, and all jurisdiction over the Clergy, both secular and regular; and ordering that he shall be considered merely as an Ambassador from the Court of Rome, on a par with any other foreign minister.—Report, p. 199.

It abolishes for ever all authority of foreign Generals, or Procurators General, over any convent or monastery of regulars; ordering all their spiritual concerns to be referred to the cognizance of the Bishops of Tuscany, and the secular to the Lay Tribunals.—Report, &c. p. 198.

NAPLES AND THE TWO SICILIES.

In Naples the nomination of Bishops is at present the subject of negociation between the Papal and Neapolitan Governments, instituted in 1816, in consequence of the revival of the Papal claims by the present ambitious Pontiff.—Report, &c. p. 18.

In Sicily the nomination to all Bishoprics is exclusively vested in the Crown. And the kings of Sicily enjoy, from the beginning, by grant of the Popes, the peculiar privilege of being Legates by birth of the Holy See, and have exercised their Legantine powers by a deputy, a native of Sicily, and an Ecclesiastic, who is a Doctor of Ecclesiastical and Civil Law; and to whom there is an appeal from the decisions of the Episcopal and Archiepiscopal Courts.

No bulls, however, briefs, licences, or decrees, of the Court of Rome, are permitted to be published and executed in both kingdoms, without the regium exequatur, or royal licence.

The Bull for the restoration of the Order of the Jesuits, has, indeed, been received in Sicily, where they have instituted a seminary of education; and we learn from the dispatch of Lord William Bentinck, Jan. 19, 1813, that this restless and active brotherhood had then procured nineteen Elèves from the British Islands; of whom five have returned in holy orders; two died, and nine remain at Palermo.—Report, &c. p. 200.

SARDINIA, PIEDMONT, AND SAVOY.

In these States the nomination of Bishoprics and the great Ecclesiastical benefices, is vested in the Government—subject, however, to a Veto on the part of the Pontiff; which is considered as a mere formality, like the Congé d'Elire, or, les brevets des premières prières, issued by the kings of England, and emperors of Germany, to their respective Chapters.—Report, &c. pp. 249—254.

No Bull, or instrument from Rome, can have any operation in these States, without the sanction of the regium exequatur.

And so vigilant is the jealousy of the Sardinian Government to guard against the intrusion and dissemination of Popish principles, that the Index Expurgatorius, containing the list of books prohibited by the See of Rome, is itself prohibited in Piedmont.—Report, p. 254.

SWITZERLAND.

The appointment to Ecclesiastical livings and dignities is the exclusive right of the State. They cannot be conferred upon any foreigners.—Report, pp. 33, 395.

No Bull, Ordinance, Pastoral Letter, or any Act of the Ecclesiastical Authorities, can be published, or put in execution, without having previously obtained the placet of Government. P. 33.

The Helvetic Confederacy have always resisted the encroachments of the Papal authority. They opposed the publication of the Corpus juris Canonici, and of all bulls and decretals, in Cœna Domini, &c. interfering with the temporal and sovereign authority of the State. And the Swiss Cantons in general have always resolutely withheld the interdicts and excommunications issued against them at various times by the Papal See. P. 35.

In 1426, when the Pope sent a special messenger to Basil, to publish his excommunication of the emperor Louis, the messenger was led to the highest spot of the city, and from thence precipitated into the Rhine, where he was drowned. P. 398.

RUSSIA.

The emperor of Russia nominates to all the Bishoprics in his dominions, upon the recommendation of the Ministry of Religious Worship, or the Consistory. But the Consistory neither has nor can have any connexion with the Court of Rome; for all cases of Ecclesiastical Polity are referred entirely to the Ministry of Religious Worship; and judicial cases are referred to the decision of the Senate.

At the installation of the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Mohilow, in 1783, he objected to take the usual consecration oath, on account of the persecuting clause, Hæreticos persequar, &c.; and his conduct was approved by the empress Catharine.

rine. Accordingly, the obnoxious clause was omitted, his Holiness not wishing to offend the Empress; and a new clause was added to the oath, concluding thus:—

“ I will observe all and every one of these things the more inviolably, as I am firmly convinced that there is nothing contained in them which can be contrary to the fidelity I owe to her Imperial Majesty, Catherine, and to her successors to the throne. So help me God, and those holy Gospels of God. Thus I promise and engage.”

This important emendation of the Consecration Oath in Russia, was noticed not long after, by Bishop Woodward, in his Present State of the Church of Ireland, in 1786, and warmly recommended to the adoption of the Romish Hierarchy in Ireland. Accordingly, they petitioned the Pope “to remove misinterpretations of the oath by Protestants,” &c. And his Holiness was graciously pleased, at an audience, June 9, 1791, to grant, that the Irish Bishops, at their consecration, and Archbishops, on receiving the pall, may use the same form of oath which was taken by the Archbishop of Mohilow. This we learn from Doctor Troy’s Pastoral Letter, cited in the Report, &c. pp. 426—428.

On the suppression of the Order of the Jesuits, and their expulsion from the Roman Catholic States, Catherine II., Empress of Russia, granted them an asylum in her dominions, with the free exercise of their worship, and licence to undertake the education and instruction of youth. And this toleration was extended by her successor Paul I., who applied to the Pope to licence the society in his dominions, by his Letter of August 11, 1800; and this was made the principal pretext of the present wily and encroaching Pontiff, to issue his Bull for the general restoration of the Order, in 1814, of which the following is an extract. See the Original, Report, &c. pp. 422—424.

“ We felt it our duty to comply with the prayer of the ex-Jesuits, Francis Kareu, &c. resident in Russia, the more willingly, inasmuch as the then reigning Emperor, Paul I., had warmly recommended the establishment of the Society of Jesus in his empire, under our authority. We also thought proper to extend the same favour to the kingdom of the Two Sicilies, at the request of our dear son in Jesus Christ, Ferdinand, king of that nation; who begged that the Society of Jesus might be established in his dominions and states, as it had been in Russia;—which we did, by our brief of July 30, 1804.—The Catholic world demands, almost unanimously, the restoration of the Society of Jesus.—We have therefore decreed, of our certain knowledge, and plenitude of Apostolical authority, to ordain and appoint by this our Constitution of perpetual validity, that all the concessions and faculties, granted solely by us to the Russian empire, and the kingdom of the Two Sicilies, shall henceforward be understood to extend, as we truly extend them, to our whole Ecclesiastical States, and to all other States and Governments likewise.”—Thus encroaching on the indefeasible rights of “all other States and Governments,” in the genuine spirit of the most arrogant of his predecessors.

But this crafty and unprincipled order of monks most devoted to the See of Rome, of all its satellites, which, indeed, was the true cause of their re-establishment, in opposition to the wishes of all the powers of Europe, (Russia, and the Two Sicilies excepted) abused the trust and confidence reposed in them by the Russian monarchs. They perverted from the National Greek Church several of the youth granted to their care, and some women of weak and inconsiderate minds, whom they drew over to their own religion.

To correct these misdemeanors and punish the offenders, the present Emperor, Alexander, published an Ukase, or Royal Edict, dated Dec. 20, 1815, for the immediate expulsion of the Jesuits from St. Petersburgh, prohibiting them from entering the two capital cities of the empire, Petersburgh and Moscow; and ordering the Archbishop of Mohilow to replace the Jesuits employed in the Roman Catholic Churches, by other priests or monks of a different order; and re-establishing the Romish Church in Russia upon the same footing that it was in the Empress Catherine's reign, before the innovations of 1800.

The Empress Catherine, indeed, notwithstanding her toleration of the Romish religion in her dominions, imposed several restrictions thereon. By her Ukase of January 17, 1782, she placed all their religious orders under the superintendance of the Archbishop of Mohilow and his consistory, “without daring to submit to any foreign Ecclesiastical power;” she prohibited all Bulls, or Rescripts from Rome, to be published, until they were inspected by the senate and sanctioned by imperial authority.—Report, pp. 399—405.

PROTESTANT STATES.

DENMARK.

During the reign of Christian V., an artful plot was discovered for the restoration of the Romish Religion in the north of Europe; in which several priests, educated at the Jesuit College of Braunsberg, in Prussia, but outwardly professing the Protestant Religion, were secretly and actively employed in propagating Popery in their parishes. In consequence of this discovery, several severe laws were enacted in 1683, against Roman Catholics in general, and the Jesuits in particular.

No Romish Prelates are admitted into the kingdom; nor any Secular Priests or Missionaries, except such as are appointed by the Romish Bishop of Hildesheim, in Lower Saxony, who acts as Legate, or Vicar Apostolic.

No Monks, Jesuits, or the like papistical persons, are allowed to settle, or even to make any long stay in the Danish dominions, under pain of death; and whoever harbours them, to be punished like the harbourers of outlaws.

No persons who have studied at any Jesuit school, or college, are capable of being entrusted with any office, either in the schools or churches.

So strictly is the law against Jesuits enforced, that when Hall, the celebrated astronomer at Vienna, but a Jesuit, wanted permission to observe the transit of Venus over the sun's disk, 1769, in Norway, he was obliged to procure a special dispensation from the king.

The Roman Catholic Clergy are tolerated in Denmark, but are prohibited from making proselytes, from exercising their functions, except in their privileged chapels in the city; and from making processions, or performing any public ceremonies, out of their church, or houses.

The Roman Catholic Laity are allowed to acquire funded property, and even lands; but they are forbidden, in common with all persons professing any other than the established religion, to nominate to vacant cures in their churches, even though they be nobles, or persons privileged. By order of the king, Sept. 20, 1741; and another edict of Sept. 7, 1770, takes from them the right of naming the parish officers for the churches on their own estates.

There is no law by which Roman Catholics are expressly excluded from civil and military employments: but the spirit of the law is so understood; and though there are examples of several Roman Catholics arriving at some of the first posts, especially in the military line, there is no example of their attaining to the first offices in the civil administration, or in the tribunals of justice.—Report, &c. pp. 429—438.

SWEDEN.

The Edict of Toleration, by Gustavus III., in 1781, permits the free and unconstrained exercise of religion and perfect liberty of conscience throughout the Swedish dominions; subject, however, to several restrictions:—

That persons of a foreign religion, resident in this country, shall on no pretext be admitted into the higher or lower offices or services of the State, or become members of the Diet. They may however be admitted into the military line.

That they shall not establish any public schools or places for instruction, for the diffusion of their own doctrine, at any place in the kingdom.

That they shall not be suffered to admit or send Missionaries, in or out of the kingdom, to extend their own religion, or to make proselytes. — “ This prohibition to be enforced with the utmost severity.”

That no convents shall be established, nor monks be suffered or admitted, of what religion or sect soever the same may be.

That no Lutherans be allowed to attend the divine service of the other religions : for no person must be suffered to neglect his own divine worship, from a curiosity to witness that of others.

In like manner, persons professing other religions must not admit to their service any others but such as are of their own persuasion.

Under these restrictions, the Roman Catholics were permitted to build churches, to have bells and church-yards, to bring up their children in their own religion, under private teachers, to practise the ceremonies of their worship within their churches, but not in public. Report, &c. pp. 442—452.

PRUSSIA.

The king of Prussia, Frederic the Great, declared himself the immediate head of all the churches in his dominions.

Wherever the appointment of Bishops has not been reserved to the Crown, the Chapter has the right of election, still subject to the King's approbation. The nomination of Roman Catholic Bishops is vested in the Crown : The confirmation of the Pope is suffered only as a mere formality.

No kind of communication between either the Bishops or Individuals with the Court of Rome can lawfully take place, but through the medium of the Prussian Government.

This Government has never allowed a Nuncio to be sent to it from the Court of Rome ; but has always warily preferred to transact business therewith by means of an agent of its own, residing there.

Although perfect liberty of conscience prevails throughout the Prussian dominions, and no individuals are called to account for their religious principles or opinions, provided they act conformably to the national laws, — yet the State requires to be informed of the religious principles of every society, because it cannot permit principles to be propagated which are injurious to a due reverence for God, to the allegiance to the State, and to morality ; and reserves to itself the right of deciding whether any of their principles have such a tendency.

Confessions to Clergymen are to be kept secret in ordinary cases, unless with the consent of the party confessing, under pain of deprivation of office. But whenever the revelation of such confession becomes necessary, either to avert a danger which threatens the State, or to prevent a crime from being committed, or to remedy or obviate the bad consequences of a crime already committed, the Clergyman must declare the same to a magistrate.

No subject of the State, either spiritual or temporal, can be brought under the jurisdiction of any foreign spiritual superior, under any pretext whatsoever.

All Papal Bulls, Briefs, and other Ordinances of foreign spiritual superiors, must be laid before the Government for examination, and approved previous to their publication and execution.—Report, &c. pp. 40, 44, 453—459.

There is much precautionary policy in these regulations.

HOLLAND AND THE NETHERLANDS.

In 1730, a placard was issued by the United States, “to oppose and prevent the encroachments of the Papacy, and dissemination of the dangerous doctrine of the unlimited power of the Pope, not only in religious matters, but in those also of civil government.”

By this placard, no Roman Catholic priests shall be permitted to perform divine service, or any of the priestly functions, but such as are natives; excluding all regular priests or monks, and especially Jesuits.

No Roman Catholic priest shall be tolerated, without the written consent of the Burgomasters in the towns, and the chief magistrates in each district. And previous to the Act of Toleration being granted, the priests shall make and sign a declaration, in verbum sacerdotis, "on their priestly word," instead of an oath ; that they have a sincere abhorrence of such principles as maintain that the Pope, or any other Ecclesiastical authority, has power to release, or dispense any subject, for heresy, or for any cause whatsoever, from the oath of obedience to the civil authorities ; and that no faith or allegiance is due to such as are under excommunication, or without the pale of the Church of Rome ; and that they do not merely profess their abhorrence of these notions, but will, to the utmost of their power, inculcate into the members of their community, and teach, by their example, as well as by their precepts, obedience to the States and Magistrates, as their lawful superiors, and exhort them to a peaceable and decent conduct. And, finally, that they shall not solicit, nor accept any absolutions or dispensations from the Pope, or from any other person whomsoever, on the subject of the above declaration, or any part or portion thereof, none excepted."

That the priests who are already in office, shall be equally compelled to make the aforesaid written declaration and signature within the space of one month after the date of these present regulations ; and if any of them, after being summoned, shall refuse to make the aforesaid declaration and signature, he or they shall be banished, without any further consideration.—Report, &c. pp. 460—463.

HAMBURGH.

No Romish Bishop, or Dignitary, is suffered to reside in this State. Roman Catholic priests, however, are tolerated, subject to the nomination of the Bishop of Hildesheim and the confirmation of the Senate. No papal edicts have been published there since Luther's time.—Report, p. 48.

SAXONY.

No Romish Bishops, or Dignitaries, have resided here since the Reformation, which took its rise in this country.

When the Elector Augustus II., in 1697, embraced the Romish faith, his Protestant subjects were so much alarmed, that he was obliged to promise not to interfere with their religion in any way; and he actually resigned all power over the Lutheran church and schools to his Privy Council, with full liberty to act without responsibility to him.

When the Pope wished to establish monasteries, or send friars into Saxony, to make collections for pious uses, the official answer was, That his Holiness could not do it of his own authority, without obtaining the king's consent.—Report, &c. pp. 466—468.

The reports of the other smaller States are immaterial, and therefore omitted.

BRITISH COLONIES.

CANADA.

Formerly the French Government solely appointed the Roman Catholic Bishop of Quebec; and the same privilege continues, and is exercised under the British sway: the nomination of the Bishop and of his coadjutor rests entirely in his Majesty's Government, without any interference from any other quarter, either spiritual or temporal. And the Pope has acquiesced in their nomination, by sending bulls of institution to the person so appointed. Thus, when General Prescott was Governor of Canada, the Roman Catholic Bishop having died, the Governor appointed his coadjutor, Monsieur Plesses, to succeed him; who, in a few months, received his bulls from the Pope, and was consecrated accordingly.

By the definitive treaty executed at Paris, in 1763, “The Roman Catholic Religion was to be tolerated in Canada, so far as the laws of Great Britain permit," and accordingly the inhabitants are entitled to the free exercise of the Romish Religion, but not to the powers and privileges of it as an Established Church; "for that is a preference which belongs only to the Protestant Church of England."

Upon these principles, therefore, and in order that the just supremacy of the Crown of Great Britain, in all matters Ecclesiastical and Civil, may have its due scope and influence,

All appeals to, or correspondence with any foreign Ecclesiastical jurisdiction, of what nature or kind soever, are absolutely prohibited, under very severe penalties.

The oaths and declarations of allegiance, supremacy, &c. are required to be taken and subscribed by the Romish Clergy, who may be appointed to any Ecclesiastical benefice, or licenced to exercise any power or authority in respect thereto.

Such Ecclesiastics as may think fit to enter into the holy estate of matrimony, are released from all penalties to which they may be subjected by the See of Rome.

The Society of the Jesuits was suppressed and dissolved in 1770, and all their rights, possessions, and properties vested in the Crown; but sufficient stipends and provisions were granted to the members during their natural lives.

See the Instructions of the British Ministry to the Governors of Canada, from 1763 to 1811.—Report, pp. 471—482; and Baron Maseres' valuable Quebec Papers, 2 vols. 1775—1786, of the occurrences while he was Attorney-General of that province.

ST. DOMINGO.

After this island became subject to his Britannic Majesty, on a vacancy in the Episcopal See, an application was made to the Court of Rome to expedite bulls of institution in favour of a prelate actually nominated to that See by the British Government; but his nomination having been withdrawn, from local considerations, another communication was made to the Court of Rome to obtain suspension of the faculties requested.—Report, p. 49.

MALTA.

Upon the decease of the Bishop of Malta, in 1807, the Pope nominated Monsignor Mattei to the vacant See; and his Sicilian Majesty also applied in his favour, to the Governor, Sir A. Ball, through his Minister, the Marquis of Circello, to have the Pope's Bulls carried into effect, as usual, for his institution, and enjoyment of the revenues of the See of Malta. But the nomination of the Pope, and recommendation of the Sicilian Court, were not sanctioned by his Majesty until the new Bishop had subscribed to certain stipulations required by the British Government previous to his installation.—Report, &c. pp. 482—486.

EAST INDIES.

The official papers under this head relate to the encroachments of the Eastern Popes, the Portuguese Archbishop of Goa, and the complaints of the Romish inhabitants of Bombay in 1813, to the British Government, claiming its protection against the Archbishop's undue interference in their Ecclesiastical regimen; which was accordingly granted, and no foreign jurisdiction permitted to be exercised in the British Colonies in the East, independent of the control of Government.—Report, &c. pp. 488—507.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

No particular religious community can be said to be established in the North American States. It is noticed, however, in the Report, as a matter of public notoriety, that for many years past, a Roman Catholic Bishop has resided at Baltimore, to whom, some time since, an Archbishop's pall was sent from Rome; and at the same time, five suffragan bishops were appointed by the Pope:—the vigilant policy of this wily Pontiff seizing every opportunity of extending his influence, wherever he can get footing.—Report, &c. p. 50.

Intercourse of the Court of Rome, at present, with the English and Irish Papists.

This is the last, but most important article of that curious, valuable, and authentic mass of evidence contained in the Appendix to the Report.

From this and the preceding section, it appears plainly, that one common sentiment of jealousy, distrust, and precaution, against the unremitting usurpations and encroachments of the Court of Rome, equally pervades all the States of Christendom, whether they be of the Romish, Greek, or Reformed Churches.

2. That, notwithstanding the early opposition of the Irish and British to the usurped supremacy of the Church of Rome, all along from the days of St. Patrick, and the Saxon kings, until the Reformation, — of late years, papal interference and jurisdiction in the British Isles has become more extensive, and less controlled by the Government than in any other foreign State, and even in the British Colonies abroad. — “It has increased, is increasing, and ought to be diminished,” if not totally abolished, by a Protestant Legislature.

This progressive and alarming increase began about the year 1732, in the reign of his present Most gracious Majesty, with the hazardous experiment of relaxing the penal laws against Popery; until, at length, in 1793, the elective franchise was granted to the Roman Catholics of Ireland. Not satisfied with this admission to a considerable share of political power, “the restless spirit of popery” (so well described by king James’s parliament, as we have seen) pants for total emancipation, as it is miscalled; and has harassed parliament, session after session, for the unconditional repeal of the few remaining disqualifying statutes and restrictions.

In the year 1813, a bill was brought into parliament for granting their claims, under certain restrictions; which was fortunately negatived by a very small majority in the House of Commons,

Since that time an open and avowed intercourse has subsisted between the English and Irish Papists and the Court of Rome; and the Rescripts of the Pope himself and his agents, are freely circulated in both islands. Among these, two of the most public notoriety, the Letters of Monsignor Quarantotti, Vice-President of the Propaganda, Feb. 16, 1814; and of Cardinal Litta, the President, April 26, 1816, addressed to Dr. Poynter, one of the English Vicars Apostolic, are registered in the Appendix of the Report, for the cognizance of Parliament, among the Miscellaneous Papers, pp. 508—514, both in the original Latin, and with English translations.

These letters, especially the latter, enter fully into the main political disquisitions now pending between the British Government and the Court of Rome, viz. : —

1. The absolute appointment of Romish Prelates, by the Pope, to vacant Sees.
2. The Oath of Allegiance to the Pope, hitherto taken at their consecration.
3. The unlicenced admission of Bulls, Briefs, Rescripts and Ordinances from the Court of Rome to the Popish Hierarchy and Laity.

The Pope insists, as an essential preliminary, that Parliament shall first grant full emancipation to the Catholics; and then that he will condescend to grant what securities he thinks proper, in the foregoing points : —

1. “ His Holiness will not hesitate to permit, that [the Chapters of the vacant Sees] to whom it appertains, [not the Administration] shall present to the King’s Ministers a list of several Candidates, in order that Government may immediately point out and expunge any of them that may be obnoxious or suspected; and that, out of the rest, his Holiness may freely choose those whom he shall judge fittest for ruling the vacant churches.”

This sort of Veto is nugatory and delusive, because it leaves the Pope in full possession of the power of appointing Prelates to the vacant Sees ; and it is directly the reverse of foreign usage : where the Veto is assigned formally to the Pope. For the executive Governments abroad, as we see, first take the recommendation of three or four Candidates, from the Chapters of the vacant Sees, or from the Consistories, and then choose among them the Candidate that appears to them most eligible, or least objectionable ; who is placed at the head of the list : this is sent to the Pope, with the nominal power of rejection indeed ; but he usually gives canonical institution to the Government Candidate.

2. His Holiness next dictates to Parliament what qualification or restriction he will permit in the Prelate's Consecration Oath, or rather the Oath of Allegiance to the Crown, of which he offers the choice of these three forms : —

The first runs thus : “ I swear and promise, on God's holy Gospels, obedience and fidelity to his Royal Majesty George III. I also promise, that I will hold no communication, will be engaged in no council, and will keep up no suspicious union that may be hurtful to the public tranquillity, either at home or abroad ; and that, if I shall know any thing to the detriment of the State carrying on in my diocese, or elsewhere, I will communicate it to the Government.”

The second, thus : “ I swear and promise, that I will be constantly faithful, and entirely subject to his Royal Majesty George III.; and that I will in no wise disturb the peace and tranquillity of this realm; nor will afford aid or assistance to any person that shall, either directly or indirectly, be adverse to his Majesty and the present Government of England."

The third, in fine: "I swear and promise obedience and true fidelity to our most acceptable Lord George III., whom I will defend against all conspiracies, attacks, or attempts of any kind, against his person, crown, and dignity; and that, if I shall know of any such plotting against him or them, I will communicate them to his Royal Majesty. And further, I faithfully swear and promise, that, according to my ability, I will preserve, protect, and defend the Succession to the Crown in his Majesty's family, against any person or persons whatsoever, whether in or out of the kingdom, that may claim or pretend a right to the crown of this kingdom."

These forms are all insufficient, for they afford no security against the Pope himself, "the common enemy of the kingdom," as he was styled by a Romish Parliament formerly, infinitely more dangerous than the Pretender ever was, whose family is now extinct. No notice is taken of the Consecration Oath itself in this Rescript, which ought to be new-modelled; as it was by Cranmer, in England; the Archbishop of Mohilow, in Russia, &c. &c. or rather reduced to a simple oath of canonical obedience, as at its first introduction; if not totally abolished, as an innovation unknown to the primitive Catholic Church.

3. His Holiness feels particularly sore upon the third point.

"As to the revision of Rescripts, or the regium cæquatur ('the royal licence'), it cannot even be made a subject of negotiation: for your Lordship well knows, that since it would essentially injure the free exercise of that supremacy, divinely entrusted to the Church, it would assuredly be an impiety to permit or assign it to any Lay-power; and, indeed, it has nowhere been ever permitted [formally by the Pope]; for if some governments, even Catholic, arrogate to themselves a right of that kind, it is to be attributed to the abuse, not the right exercise of just power; which the Holy See, in order to prevent greater evils, is forced indeed to endure and bear, but can by no means approve. And as the Bishops and Vicars Apostolic, in the first article of the Quæstionarium, published by the Holy Congregation of the Propaganda, are severely prohibited from adverting to the Political State, in the reports of their Churches, which they are bound to return to the Holy See,—it is entirely to be hoped that Government will not persist in their opinion on this matter: inasmuch as the Church cannot recede from its right, and from the exercise of such a right as experience testifies is not prejudicial to the Government itself."

This whole paragraph is a tissue of total misrepresentation and glaring falsehood. Long and multiplied experience abundantly testifies, that the intromission of Rescripts, &c. from the Court of Rome, is prejudicial to every other Government; and that all the Powers of Europe have been forced, by dire necessity, to restrict, or to abolish it totally, under the severest penalties. The abuse and encroachments on the just rights of foreign Princes, rests entirely on the Pope's side; and he has everywhere else, except in the British dominions, been compelled, reluctantly, to relinquish it. The pretext of the Popish Bishops in Ireland, and Vicars Apostolic in England, not being allowed to meddle in State-politics, is impudent in the extreme: these very Rescripts prove, that they do so with a vengeance; and Quarantotti and Litta only tread in the steps of Ghilini and Castelli, &c. &c. whose treasonable correspondences with the Popish Hierarchy were exposed in the preceding section.

Of late, his Holiness has, moreover, opened a direct correspondence himself, not by proxy, with "his dearly beloved Children, the General Board of the Catholics in Dublin."

The occasion was this: That turbulent and seditious Board, dissatisfied with Quarantotti's Letter, recommending the foregoing nugatory Veto, sent a Remonstrance to his Holiness, by their delegate, the Rev. Richard Hayes, in 1715 ; for which he was imprisoned for two years, and then banished from Rome. Upon his return, re infect&ta; the indignant Board wrote a fresh Remonstrance, complaining that his Holiness was under undue influence in his treatment of their Delegate, and inattention to their Remonstrance. Whereupon he wrote them a Letter, Feb. 21, 1818, in which he condescends to apologize for the delay, and to chide them for intermeddling in his concerns : —

“ We had a double reason for adopting this course : for, in the first place, Whereas, at the same time, there was brought unto us, along with yours, a Letter from the Irish Bishops also, relating to the same subject ; and as we stated to these Bishops, as well by personal communication to their delegates, as by our Letter, dated Feb. 1, 1818, our opinion concerning the proposed difficulties, and the subject of your alarm, we thought it by no means necessary to repeat the same to you, which you could have so easily learned and ascertained from them. Secondly, The tenor of your Letter, addressed to us on that occasion, contributed in no small degree to induce us to act towards you in that manner ; for though many assurances of your devotion to the Catholic Faith were mingled with your expostulations, yet, contrary to our expectation, we observed that you frequently gave expression to such language and sentiments as seemed by no means in unison with that devotion and zeal which the people of Ireland have at all times manifested towards the Apostolic See, from which they justly glory that they have derived the light of the Faith,"* &c.

Upon the receipt of this reprimand, the Board applied to Dr. Troy for a copy of the said Letter to the Bishops, Feb. 1, 1818; who sent them a copious extract; but this not satisfying the Board, they requested a copy of the entire Letter; which Dr. Troy positively refused, in the following terms:—

——— “I have already communicated almost the whole of the Pope’s Letter to the Catholic Prelates of Ireland, containing all that his Holiness has diffusively remarked on the Veto question: it is fully sufficient for all the information which the Board can reasonably require.

“The remainder of the Letter is of a confidential nature, and relates exclusively to the Prelates, as precisely such: I cannot, therefore, communicate it to the Board.

“J. T. TROY, D. D. &c.

“Dublin, June 12, 1818.”

This decides the point, that the private Rescripts from Rome contain matters of a “confidential,” or rather treasonable nature, “not fit to be communicated” to the public, and still less to the Government. The more anxious therefore the Pontiff is to maintain this pestilent intercourse uncontrolled, the more vigilant should the Legislature be to restrain it effectually, under the severest penalties of præmunire; and to bind this wily Proteus with fetters and manacles, sufficiently strong to compel him to resume his native form and proper shape, and his primitive insignificance.

* This alludes to the unfounded mission of St. Patrick to Ireland, by Pope Celestine.

To what a state of servile degradation to the Pope, and to their superiors, the Popish Ecclesiastics of England and Ireland are now sunk, is evident from the late most humiliating declarations and recantations of Gandolphy, in England,* and Hayes, in Ireland!

* The Rev. Peter Gandolphy, in 1812, published a Romish Liturgy, in English,—and in 1815, a Defence of the Ancient Faith, &c. 4 vols. 8vo. :—both designed “to confirm Catholics in their faith, and to bring back to the bosom of Holy Mother the Church, those who have gone astray.” And these works received the approbation of Philip Anfossi, Master of the Apostolical Palace, June 24, 1816. But, notwithstanding this, Dr. Poynter, Vicar Apostolic of the London district, refused to licence these works; and at length Mr. Gandolphy, after much opposition, was forced to submit entirely to the authority of Dr. Poynter, in the following humiliating

DECLARATION:—

“I, the undersigned, ardently wishing to be reconciled to my Prelate, the Right Reverend Lord Bishop of Halia, the

Hayes's submission, after he had been so maltreated at Rome, for undertaking the office of

---

Vicar Apostolic of London, do profess and declare, that I was by some persons led into the persuasion, that the approbation of my works, entitled Exposition of the Liturgy, and Defence of the Ancient Faith, which I obtained at Rome, from the most Reverend Master of the sacred Apostolic Palace, was exactly the same as the approbation of the Apostolical See;—on the ground of which opinion, I thought that these works were undeservedly condemned and prohibited by my Bishop; and on that account I opposed him. But I acknowledge that I was deceived, and that the approbation which I obtained, was not such as may be truly called the supreme and definitive approbation of the Holy See; for in reality, sometimes works which have been published with the licence of the same Reverend Master, have been afterwards prohibited and condemned by a sentence of the Sacred Congregations. Now, therefore, having detected the error into which they led me, I humbly beg pardon of the same Right Reverend Bishop for my disobedience, and for every particular, in which I have in any manner offended him, and resisted his authority; and I willingly recall and retract whatever I have advanced in my printed address to the public, of the 5th of October, 1816, and in any other of my publications, either against him, or against any of the Clergy. I promise, that I will in future sincerely shew him all obedience and subjection; that I will readily and faithfully correct any mistakes or errors that shall be pointed out in the same works by the Holy See, or by my own Prelate. In the mean time, as far as it depends on me, I will entirely refrain from promoting the circulation of the same works, so long as they shall not have been lawfully corrected. I humbly entreat my Prelate that he will kindly forgive me, and, as I hope, graciously receive me into his favour.

“ PETER GANDOLPHY.”

“ London, July 8, 1817.”

delegate from the Catholic Board, is couched in the following abject Declaration, at the time that the Pope's Letter, censuring his conduct, was publicly read at the Board, June 1, 1818.

— — “ If the document now read censures my conduct whilst at Rome, I stop not to enquire whether it be authentic or not; whether its charges be vague or specific; whether proved, or otherwise; I stop not to investigate how the name of his Holiness came to be attached to it; whether it be the result of legal, or canonical discussion; or whether those who deprived me of my liberty, have succeeded in depriving me of my character in the eyes of the Sovereign Pontiff: I stop not to ask why the document did not precede my arrest; why it has been issued a twelvemonth later; in a word, why the indictment should follow the punishment?—enough for me, if the Holy Father has been pleased to censure my conduct.

“ By faith a Catholic, by ordination a Priest, by obedience a Child of the Holy See, I bow with unhesitating submission, respect, and veneration, to the centre of Catholicism, the source of Ecclesiastical subordination, the Vicegerent of JESUS CHRIST. I solemnly declare, that I should choose death rather than to allow any private or personal feeling or consideration to betray me into the slightest contest with, or disrespect towards the authority or dignity of the Head of the Catholic Church, Pope Pius VII. — My tongue shall never utter a syllable of complaint, nor my pen trace a line of vindication : for, lest scandal should arise, in the words of the Prophet (Jonah) I exclaim, “Take me up, and cast me into the sea,” &c. &c.

“ June 1, 1818.

RICHARD HAYES.”

For a fuller exposure of this open and undisguised correspondence between the Court of Rome and his Majesty’s Popish subjects in Ireland, which was blazoned in the public prints at the time,—see the Antijacobin Review for July and September, 1818.

The arbitrary measures and mandates of the Court of Rome, and the abject principles of passive obedience and non-resistance, displayed by such devoted Children of the Pope, as Gandolphy and Hayes, forcibly remind us of the Sheik of the Assassines, in Syria, during the Crusades, whose will was law to his children or subjects. At his beck, they stabbed, drowned, or precipitated themselves, to shew their implicit obedience ; at his command, they assassinated the neighbouring princes and rulers who refused to pay tribute to the Old Man of the Mountain, as his vassals, utterly regardless of their own lives.

Of the Children of the Pope, the most devoted, the most unprincipled, and beyond all comparison, the most dangerous, are those modern Assassines, the society of Jesuits; who, from gratitude for their restoration by the present Pontiff, in opposition to almost all the Powers of Europe, are necessarily more attached to the Papacy than ever. We cannot, therefore, notice their clandestine introduction of late into the British Isles without alarm;* and the several considerable seminaries of education they have already formed, in England and Ireland, without consternation and dismay:— We shudder at this silent, but rapid progress, and at the consummate policy with which they are labouring to get a complete ascendancy over the minds of the youth committed to their care. One of the rules prescribed for the admission of pupils into their Irish colleges, is this:— “The progress and happiness of the young student, not less than the discipline of a collegiate life, require that he should not be removed, even at the times of vacation,”— lest their parents or friends, or a more liberal intercourse with the world, might eradicate the seed sown in their hearts by these wily preceptors: well knowing, that young and tender minds are the most pliant and ductile to seduction; and also the most susceptible of the strongest and most lasting impressions:— Cereus in vitium flecti — Quo semel est imbuta recens, servabit odorem Testa diu.

The expulsion of the Jesuits, and confiscation of their properties, as common incendiaries from

---

* See the foregoing Article of the Two Sicilies.

France, Spain, Portugal, and their Colonies; from Germay, Russia, and even Canada, at the western termination of the British empire, furnish unanswerable motives and precedents for removing them from the heart of the empire without delay, where they can do infinitely greater mischief than in the extremities. And, indeed, the removal of these prime satellites of the See of Rome, the youngest, and the favourite children of the Pope; and also of the other monkish orders too, would not be unacceptable to the Romish Prelates and Secular Clergy. The Prelates dislike them, as being exempt from their jurisdiction and controul; and the Clergy, as intruders into their parishes and benefices; while the restless, domineering spirit, and flagitious tenets of the Jesuits, render them peculiarly odious to all.

How reluctantly the papal yoke is borne in Great Britain and Ireland, by the most intelligent and best informed of the Romish Clergy and Laity, is evident from the Declaration of the Protesting Catholics of England, so respectably and numerously signed; and the spirited Appeal of their Committee from the arbitrary inhibitions of their Vicars Apostolic, noticed in the preceding section; and from the Loyal Irish Remonstrance in 1661, which was defeated only by the opposition of the Pope's Nuncios and Partizans. Even the Catholic Board in Dublin, uncontrolled as it is, by the most respectable of the Irish nobility and gentry, who forsook their seditious meetings, have not failed, we see, to express their displeasure at the Pope's ill treatment of their delegate, and supercilious neglect of their Remonstrance. And great discontents prevail among the Romish Clergy in Ireland, at the arbitrary disposal of the chief dignities and benefices in their Church, by the Pope and his Hierarchy, to their own creatures, without regard to merit, or the recommendation of the Chapters or Consistories in the several dioceses. This is a grievance of which they openly and loudly complain. Among all their classes, therefore, the reduction of the Pope's usurped supremacy, by the Legislature, to the lowered standard, prescribed by foreign governments, or rather to the primitive standard, in the reign of Constantine the Great, when the Bishop of Rome claimed no jurisdiction whatsoever beyond the limits of his own See, would unquestionably be considered as a great and most desirable emancipation.

From such emancipation the noblest and most important benefits, religious and political, might reasonably be expected to flow.

1. All ranks and classes of Roman Catholics might then shake off the invidious title of Papists, or vassals of the Pope, and freely and fully testify and declare their fidelity to the Crown of Great Britain, and allegiance to the Government; and, having given sufficient securities, may then with safety be put on a par with other Protestant Dissenters, and admitted to an equal degree of political power.

2. A considerable reform in the doctrine and discipline of the Romish Church in the British Isles, might then be hoped. The Creed of Pope Pius IV., the standard of modern Romish faith, might then be stripped of its supernumerary articles, tacked incongruously to the Nicene Creed; and their beneficed Clergy be exempted from swearing belief and obedience thereto; their Episcopal regimen might then be restored to its native simplicity, and their religion be purged and regenerated to its native purity, according to the primitive Apostolical standard of St. Patrick in Ireland, and St. David in Britain, and St. Columkille in Scotland. A Reformation most devoutly to be wished by all genuine Christians, good citizens, and loyal subjects!

SECTION VI.

PURITY OF THE DOCTRINES OF THE PRIMITIVE
CHURCH OF THE BRITISH ISLES.

THIS subject has been partly anticipated in the second and third sections; in which were noticed the leading doctrines of our early fathers, Patrick, Sedulius, Claudius, Taliessin, &c. respecting the prime articles of Christian Faith, the Holy Trinity, the foundation of the Church upon the rock Christ; and the rejection of the heresy of Pelagius and Celestius, of Purgatory, of prayers to saints and angels. In this section the subject shall be further illustrated, in the important articles of the Holy Scriptures, Grace, Faith, Works, and Justification, the Lord's Supper, Prayers and Maxims.

THE HOLY SCRIPTURES.

These were considered as the only true standards of religion and morality by our early Divines, rejecting all vain traditions built upon human authority. St. Patrick finely observes, * “the continual meditation and recital of the Scriptures, gives vegetation to the soul;” or vital growth in grace. And the Abbot Columbanus recommends †, “Let thy riches be the precepts of the Divine Law.”

And we are told, ‡ that “his disciples diligently observed only those works of piety and chastity, which they could learn from the Prophetical, Evangelical, and Apostolical writings,” or from the Law and the Prophets of the Old Testament, and the Gospels and Epistles of the New.

The proper study of the Scriptures is thus recommended by Sedulius : § “Search the Law, in which is contained the will of God;” on Ephes. v. adopting our Lord’s precept, “Search the Scriptures,” John v. 39; and also St. Paul’s, “Be ye not unwise, but understanding what is the will of the Lord,” Ephes. v. 17. But with this sage caution ||, * Bonis semper moribus delectatur et consentit, et assiduis scripturarum meditationibus et eloquiis, anima vegetat. Patric. De abusionibus Seculi, cap. 5. de pudicitia.

+ Sint tibi divitiae, Divinæ dogmata legis. Columban. in Monastichis, et Epist. ad Hunaldum.

‡ Tantum ea quæ Propheticis, Evangelicis, et Apostolicis literis discere poterant, pietatis et castitatis opera diligenter observantes. Bede Hist. Eccles. lib. iii. cap. 4.

§ Scrutamini Legem in quâ voluntas ejus continetur. Sedul. in Ephes. v.

|| Plus vult sapere, qui illa scrutatur quæ Lex non dicit. Id. in Rom. xii.

"He willeth to be overwise, who searcheth those things of which the law doth not speak :" on Rom. xii. according with St. Paul, "Be not wise above that which is written. 1 Cor. iv. 6.

They further recommended the study of the Scriptures to all, learned and unlearned. We are told by the venerable Bede,* that "the disciples of Bishop Aidan, whether of the Clergy or of the Laity, were required to exercise themselves in meditation; either in reading the Scriptures, or in learning the Psalms." And he gives this honourable testimony to the National Church, in his days:† "It searches and professes one and the same knowledge of the highest truth, and of real sublimity, by meditation of the Scriptures; as well in the vulgar tongues of the English (or Savons), Britons, Scots, (or Irish), Picts, (or Caledonians), as in the Latin language, common to them all." Thus intimating, that the common use of the Latin among the learned of those nations, did not preclude the unlearned from searching the Scriptures in their own vernacular translations. And that such translations, indeed, were early and widely prevalent, we learn from Chrysostom : * “ Although thou didst go to the ocean [westwards] even to the noted British Isles; although thou didst sail to the Eurine Sea [eastwards]; although thou didst go to the southern regions [of Africa], thou wouldest hear all, every-where, reasoning about subjects of Scripture, with different voice indeed, but not with different faith; with different tongue indeed, but with accordant understanding.”—Such is the honourable testimony borne to the uniformity and harmony of the “ Holy Catholic Apostolic Church” in all the essentials of Christianity, even in his age.

* In tantum autem vita illius, a nostri temporis signitâ distabat, ut omnes qui cum eo incedebant, sive adtonsi sive laici, meditari deberent; id est, aut legendis Scripturis, aut Psalmis discendis, operam dare. Bed. ibid. cap. 5.

† Quinque gentium linguis unam eandemque summæ veritatis et veræ sublimitatis scientiam scrutatur et confitetur; Anglorum scilicet, Britonum, Scotorum, Pictorum, et Latinorum, quæ, meditatione Scripturarum, cæteris omnibus est facta communis. Bed. ibid. cap. 1.

Nor did our learned divines confine themselves to the Latin versions alone, the Old Italic, the Milanese of the Younger Eusebius, the Gallican, and the Latin Vulgate of Jerome: Sedulius and Claudius, in the Old Testament, frequently follow “ the Hebrew Verity;” and in the New, they often correct the Latin Vulgate by the Greek text; while St. Patrick, as observed before, in his Confession, usually adopts, in the Old Testament, the Greek version of the Septuagint, in preference to the Vulgate. And Ricemarch, the Briton, the learned son of a learned father, Sulgen, Bishop of St. David, in the following elegant epigram, commends Jerome's translation of the Psalter, for ascending to the pure source of the Hebrew Scriptures, not like other translators, at second hand, who “darkened the Hebrew sun-beams with their Latin cloud*.”

* Καν εις τον ακελλον απελθης, καν προς τας Βρεταννικας νησις εκεινας, καν εις τον Ευξηνον πλευσης ποντον, καν προς τα νοτια απελθης μερι- παντων ακεσης πανταχο τα απο της γεραφης φιλοσοφιατων, φωνη μεν ετερα, πιστη δε υπ. και ετερα γλωσση μεν διαφορη, διανοια δε συμφωνη. Chrysost. in Serm. de utilitate lectionis Script. tom. viii. p. 3. edit. Savill.

“ In Hebrew characters the scroll retains
 The Harp of David's most harmonious strains :
 But other nations, from a ruder source,
 Destroy their beauty, purity, and force ;
 While they explain, in their peculiar phrase,
 The sacred meaning of these heav'nly lays,
 And in a tongue but vaguely understood,
 Obscure the sun-beams with their Latin cloud ;
 Like precious wines, through sundry vessels tost,
 Whose strength and choicest flavour thus are lost :
 But holy Jerome, fraught with Hebrew lore,
 Draws from this fountain, truths of heavenly power ;
 And from their native character, explains
 The force and beauty of those sacred strains,
 And every secondary source disdains.” } }

* Ebræis nablam custodit litera signis :
 Pro captu quam quisque, suo sermone Latino,
 Edidit, innumeros linguâ variante libellos ;
Ebræumque jubar suffuscat nube Latinâ :
 Nam tepefacta ferum dant tertia labra saporem.
 Sed sacer Hieronymus, Ebræo fonte repletus,
 Lucidius nudat verum, breviusque ministrat,
 Namque secunda creat, nam tertia vascula vitat.

How widely different was this from the superstitious attachment of the modern Church of Rome to the Latin Vulgate; to which she ascribes higher authority than to the Hebrew and Greek originals!

GRACE, FAITH, WORKS, JUSTIFICATION, AND SANCTIFICATION.

The important controversy, Whether of the twain, faith in Christ or good works, be more available to Justification or Salvation, — has long harassed and divided the Church, even from the Apostolic Age to the present day. It was early noticed by the Apostles, Paul and James; each wishing to guard against opposite errors:—“I have faith, thou hast works.” Jam. ii. 18. Against the Judaizing Roman Converts, who maintained the superior efficacy of works; including also the modern Romish Church, which admits works of supererogation, or more than are necessary to salvation, and lodges the supposed surplus in the treasury of the Church, to be dispensed at the will and pleasure of the Roman Pontiff, in indulgences for the benefit of his loving children; St. Paul declares, that “a man is justified by faith, without the works of the law.” Rom. iii. 28. Thus considering faith in Christ as the only meritorious cause of justification, independent of any legal works; for “whatsoever is not of faith, is sin.” Rom. xiv. 23. Which our thirteenth Article understands of works before justification; but by no means excluding good works; for, in his instructions to Titus, he thus guards against misrepresentation of his meaning: “This is a faithful saying, and I desire thee firmly to maintain (διαβεβαιοθαι) that they who have believed in GOD, be careful to practise good works (Tit. iii. 8); for “without holiness, no man shall see the Lord.” Heb. xii. 14. And his whole argument may be thus summed up:—“For by grace we are saved, through faith; and this not of ourselves: it is the gift of GOD, not [the reward] of works,—that none should boast.” Ephes. ii. 8, 9.—“We are justified freely by GOD’s grace, through the redemption in JESUS CHRIST.” Rom. iii. 21.

On the other hand, against the heretics of the Apostles’ days, and against their followers, the enthusiastic sectaries who disgraced the Reformation, out of affected humility, but real libertinism, using their gospel liberty from the yoke of the law, as a cloak of licentiousness:” 1 Pet. ii. 15, 16. St. James, in his excellent practical Epistle, carefully distinguishes mere speculative or dead faith, from that which is operative and lively. The former he ascribes even to “the Demons, who believe and tremble.” Jam. ii. 19. And he considers good works as the proper evidence of faith. “Show me thy faith without thy works, and I will shew thee my faith by my works.” Jam. ii. 18; and thence he concludes, that a man is justified by works, and not by faith only. Jam. ii. 24; thus intimating the joint necessity of faith and obedience to salvation; as well expressed by one of our early divines, Justificamur per fidem solam, sed non per fidem solitariam; or, according to his own excellent translation, “We are justified by faith alone, but not by that faith which is alone, or exclusive of good works.” And more fully by Burkitt :—“What God hath joined, none must divide; and what God hath divided, none must join: He hath separated faith and works in the business of justification; but he hath joined them in the lives of justified persons;” or in the business of sanctification: thus excellently explaining St. Paul’s doctrine, “Being freed from [the punishment and dominion of] sin, and made servants to GOD [by faith], ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life.” Rom. vi. 22. Here, the first requisite for the final attainment of salvation, or everlasting life, is the righteousness of justification; the second, the righteousness of sanctification: as critically remarked by the profound Hooker, Eccles. Polity, page 20.

How well this abstruse and intricate doctrine was understood and expounded by our primitive divines, will appear from a few extracts, selected from Usher’s Ancient Religion of the Irish and British, chap. ii.

Sedulius observes, * “The Law was given, not that it might take away sin, but that it might conclude all under sin (Galat. iii. 22.); that men, being by this means humbled, might understand that their salvation was not in their own power, but in the power of the Redeemer ;” on Galat. iii. “God has freely proposed by faith only to remit sins ;” on Rom. iv. — That believers shall be saved by faith only ; on Galat. iii. : and that where men have fallen, they are to be renewed “only by the faith of Christ, which worketh by love ;” on Heb. vi. —“And this faith, when it has been justified [by works of love], cleaveth to the soil of the soul, like a root moistened by rain ; so that, when it begins to be cultivated, by means of the law of * Non, ergo, Lex data est, ut peccatum auferret, sed ut sub peccato omnia concluderet : Lex enim ostendebat esse peccatum, quod illi per consuetudinem cæcati possunt putare justitiam. Ut hoc modo humiliati, cognoscerent non in sua manu esse salutem suam, sed in manu Mediatoris. Sedul. in Galat. iii.—Deus proposuit ut solâ fide salvarentur credentes. Id. in Hebr. vi. —Gratis proposuit [Deus] per solam fidem dimittere peccata. Id. in Rom. iv. — Per solam fidem Christi quæ per dilectionem operatur, in Hebr. vi. — Hæc fides cum justificata fuerit, tanquam radix imbre suscepto, hæret in animæ solo ; ut cum per legem Dei excoli cœperit, rursum in eam surgant rami, qui fructus operum ferant. Non ergo ex operibus, radix justitiæ, sed ex radice justitiæ, fructus operum crescit : illa scilicet radix justitiae, cui Deus acceptum fert justitiam sine operibus. In Rom. iv.

God, it furnishes branches anew, which may bear the fruit of works. Therefore, the root of righteousness doth not grow out of works—but the fruit of works out of the root of righteousness; even that root of righteousness which God accepts for righteousness, without works." On Rom. iv.

In like manner Claudius teaches :* " This doctrine refutes those who think that faith alone is sufficient to the salvation of their souls: not as if the works of the law shall be contemned, and without them simple (or solitary) faith should be sought; but that the works themselves should be adorned with the faith of Christ: for that sentence of the wise man is excellent, that the faithful does not live by righteousness, but 'the righteous by faith.'" (Habbak. ii. 4.) on Galat. iii.

And this justifying or saving faith, is finely represented by Columbanus,† as productive of higher degrees of faith: " Faith alone will be enriched with the bounteous gift of faith;" in conformity with the humble petitioner's request, " Lord, I believe; help thou my unbelief!" Mark ix. 24.; and of the Apostles themselves:

* — Non quò Legis opera contempnenda sunt, et absque eis simplex fides adpetenda; sed ipsa opera fidei Christi adorantur. Scita est enim sapientis viri [Habbakuk] illa sententia: non fidelem vivere ex justitia; sed 'justum, ex fide.' Claud. in Galat. iii.

† Sola fides fidei dono dilabitur alma. Columban. in M<sup>z</sup>. pastichis.

"Lord increase our faith!" Luke xvii. 5. "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, (who giveth to all liberally, and upbraideth not) and it shall be given to him; but let him ask in faith, nothing wavering." Jam. i. 5, 6. "For whosoever hath [faith], to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance." Matt. xiii. 12. As our gracious Lord himself declares: "I came, that (my sheep) might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." John x. 10. And this promised "wisdom," this promised "life," is saving faith, according to the apposite observation of Sedulius: "As the soul is the life of the body, so faith is the life of the soul*." The insufficiency of the law of Moses is well described by Claudius †: "He hath the perfection of the law who believeth in Christ. For since none could be justified by the law, because none fulfilled the law, except he who hoped in the promise of Christ,—faith was appointed as a substitute for the perfection of the law, that in all omissions, faith might satisfy for the whole law.”—“Faith, procuring the remission of sins by grace, makes all believers sons of Abraham: for it was just, that as Abraham, a Gentile believer, was justified by faith only, so the rest, who imitate his faith, shall be saved.”—“Through adoption we are made sons of God, by believing on the SON OF GOD.” And Sedulius observes, “This is the testimony of our adoption, that we have THE SPIRIT; by which we pray, and cry ABBA, FATHER: forasmuch as none can receive so great a pledge as this, but such as be sons only.”

* Vita corporis anima, vita animæ fides est. Sedul. in Hebr. x.

† Perfectionem Legis habet qui credit in Christo. Cum enim nullus justificaretur ex Lege, quia nemo implebat legem nisi qui speraret in promissionem Christi; fides posita est quæ cederet pro perfectione Legis: ut in omnibus prætermissis fides satisfacerit pro totâ Lege. Claud. in Rom. x. — Fides, dimissis per gratiam peccatis, omnes credentes filios efficit Abrahæ. Id. in Rom. iv. — Justum fuerat ut, quomodo Abraham credens ex gentibus, per solum fidem justificatus est, ita cæteri, fidem ejus imitantes, salvarentur. Id. in Rom. i. — Per adoptionem efficimur filii Dei, credendo in FILIUM DEI. Id. in Matth.

“Thus did Sedulius and Claudius, two of our most famous divines (as remarked by their worthy successor, Primate Usher,) deliver the doctrines of free-will and grace, faith and works; the law, and the gospel, justification and adoption, no less agreeably to the faith which is at this day professed in the Reformed Churches, than to that which they themselves received from the more ancient doctors ;” and we may add, both derived their information from the pure fountain of the Holy Scriptures themselves, skilfully compared, and faithfully expounded.

THE LORD'S SUPPER.

The modern Romish distinction between “the sacrifice and the sacrament of the Mass,” was unknown to our early divines. By the Mass, they understood, in general, the service of the Church, or the public Liturgy; whether prayers only were said, or whether the Holy Communion was celebrated. Thus Adamnanus relates, that the last Mass which St. Colme attended, was the Vesper Mass of the Lord’s Day (June 9, A.D. 597). Nor did they distinguish the Sacrifice from the Sacrament, as the Romanists do now; but used the name of Sacrifice indifferently, both for that which was offered to God, the Eucharist, “the special sacrifice of prayer and thanksgiving;” and for that which was given to and received by the communicant, namely, the elements of bread and wine. Thus Sedulius says, “Tarry one for another: that is, until you receive the sacrifice;” explaining 1 Cor. xi. 33.

Our ancestors received the Sacrament in both kinds, according to the Scriptures, both clergy and laity: “As oft as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye do shew forth the Lord’s death until he come.” 1 Cor. xi. 26. — “Drink ye all of it.” Matt. xxvi. 27. In his Pastoral Hymn, Sedulius

thus eloquently expresses the Evangelical doctrine :* —

“ In fine, who else is present, as Chief Pontiff
And High Priest of the Order of Melchisedek,
But CHRIST? the author of the two-fold libation;
To whom always his own gifts are offered,
The fruit of the Corn, and the joys of the Vine.”

And, in his Comment on St. Paul's Epistles, he thus ably explains it:—“ Melchisedek offered bread and wine to Abraham, for a figure of CHRIST offering his body and blood upon the cross, to GOD HIS FATHER.” Here Melchisedek is represented as a Royal High Priest, the type of CHRIST; the bread and wine were offered to Abraham (not to God); and they were a figure of CHRIST's body broken, and blood shed on the cross for an offering to GOD. The bread and wine therefore are offered to the Communicants (as to Abraham) daily, for a commemoration of the Lord's passion (once performed) and of our own salvation.” And he thus aptly and eloquently illustrates our Lord's command, “ Do this in re-

* Denique Pontificum princeps, summusque sacerdos,
Quis nisi CHRISTUS adest, gemini libuminis auctor,
Ordine Melchisedeck? cui dantur munera semper
Quae sua sunt, segetis fructus et gaudia vitis.

Sedul. Carm. Pasch. lib. 4.

membrance of me." Luke xxii. 29. "He left us a memorial of himself; even as if one that was going a far journey should leave some token to him he loved, in order that, as often as he beheld it, he might recollect his benefits and acts of friendship."

Claudius also remarks †, that "Our Saviour first wished to deliver unto his disciples the sacrament of his body and blood; which he signified by the breaking of the body and the effusion of the cup; and afterwards, to offer up the body itself upon the altar of the cross." — Here it is remarkable, that in the second clause, the thing signified, "the body," is substituted for the sign, "the bread;" even where the direct intention of the speech was to distinguish the one from the other; "the body" in the figurative sense, from "the body itself," in the literal sense. And this apparent solecism is perfectly conformable to primitive usage, and warranted by the genius of the oriental languages, the Hebrew, Chaldee, and Syro-Chaldee; in which the verb substantive frequently supplies the place of the verb of similitude; "it is," put for "it denotes, signifies, or represents." When our † Voluit autem discipulis suis tradere sacramentum corporis et sanguinis sui; quod significavit in fractione corporis et effusione calicis; et postea, ipsum corpus immolari in ara crucis. — Claud. lib. 3, in Matth.

Lord, therefore, said, “This is my body”—“this is my blood,” (Matt. xxvi. 26, 27) he meant, according to the vernacular, or Syro-Chaldee phraseology, “This represents my body;”—“this represents my blood;”—and not merely his body and blood, in their natural or sound state, when he spake these words; but as afterwards, in their suffering state, when “broken,” and “shed” on the cross. And our Lord himself demonstrates this figurative application, when he calls the wine, not simply, “my blood,” but “my blood of the New Testament,” or new covenant ratified thereby. Matt. xxvi. 28. And analogy decides the figurative sense of the bread likewise: “this represents my body, which is to be broken shortly on the cross.” ( $\kappa\lambdaωμενον$ , put for  $\tau\alpha\ \mu\varepsilon\lambda\lambda\omega\nu\ \kappa\lambda\alpha\sigma\theta\alpha\iota$ .) 1 Cor. xi. 22.

The Romish doctrine of Transubstantiation, therefore, grounded on the literal expressions, “This is my body,” &c. is not only revolting to common sense, that Christ should have two bodies at the same time, his own natural body, and the bread in his hands at the time he spake these words,—but is also contrary to scripture critically explained. It even stands convicted and confuted by the evidence of the Romish Missal itself; reciting and paraphrasing our Lord’s words more correctly and fully, than even our Communion Service: —

“ Verba autem consecrationis (quæ sunt forma hujus sacramenti) sunt hæc :

“ Hoc est enim corpus meum :” et, “ Hic est enim calix sanguinis mei, Novi et eterni Testamenti, mysterium fidei; qui pro vobis et pro multis EFFUNDETUR, in remissionem peccatorum.”

“ The words of Consecration (which are the form of this sacrament) are these : —

“ For this is my body :” and, “ For this is the cup of my blood, of the New and eternal Testament, the mystery of faith; which SHALL BE SHED for you and for many, for the remission of sins.”

Here the future tense, effundetur, “ shall be shed,” shews that no transubstantiation or change of the bread and wine into the substance of our Lord’s body and blood, actually took place at the time when our Lord consecrated the elements; nor, consequently, when the priest consecrates them at present. The verb, effundetur, “ shall be shed” (it is but justice to the Latin Vulgate to remark) is surely a more correct rendering of the original, το εκχυνομενον, (put for το μελλον εκχυνεσθαι) than our received translation, “ which is shed;” instead of “ which is to be shed,” shortly, on the cross. Matt. xxvi. 28.

How well the sacramental doctrine was understood in England also, we learn from the admirable Homily of Elfric, Archbishop of Canterbury, in the reign of Ethelred II. A. D. 979, in his Sermones Catholici, of which an old English translation is preserved in the Bodleian Library, Oxford, and in that of Bennet College, Cambridge.

“ There is a very great difference between the invisible virtue of this sacrament, and what it appears to us in the qualities of its own nature.—In its own nature, it is corruptible bread and wine; but by virtue of the divine institution, it is truly the body and blood of our Lord Jesus Christ after consecration, not in a corporeal, but spiritual manner. The body in which Christ suffered, and the eucharistical body, are widely different: the first was born of the Blessed Virgin, and consisted of blood, bones, nerves, limbs, animated with a rational soul; but the body which we call Eucharistical, is made up of several grains of wheat; it has neither blood, bone, nerve, limb, nor soul in it: we are therefore not to form any corporeal idea of it, but to understand it wholly in a spiritual sense.—In the Eucharist, whatever repairs our nature and forms us to a better life, proceeds entirely from the mystic virtue, and a spiritual operation. For this cause the Eucharist is called a sacrament, because one thing appears to our senses, and another to our understanding: what in the sacrament is the object of sight, has a corporeal figure; but what is represented to our understanding, has a spiritual force and efficacy.

" Moreover, the body of Christ which suffered and rose from the dead, is eternal and impassible, and no more subject to decay or death ; whereas the Eucharist is not eternal, but corruptible, subject to the force of time, and divisible into many parts ; it is ground by the teeth, and passes through the common channels of the body ; but notwithstanding, the spiritual efficacy of it remains in every part. A great many persons receive this holy body, or Eucharist, and yet the multitude of receivers weakens not the force of the operation ; the virtue of the Sacrament being lodged in every part of what is consecrated, the least having as much efficacy as the greatest : the reason is, because the virtue does not operate in proportion to the corporeal magnitude, but by means of the Divine institution.

" The Sacrament is a type or pledge ; but the body of our Lord Jesus Christ is the truth and reality of the representation. God has vouchsafed to give us this pledge or earnest, till we come to the truth itself, and then the pledge will disappear : for, as hath been observed, the holy Eucharist is the body of Jesus Christ, not corporeally, but spiritually. The Apostle St. Paul, speaking of the Israelites, has these words :—‘ I would not that ye should be ignorant, how that all our fathers were under the cloud, and passed through the sea ; and did all eat the same spiritual meat, and did all drink the same spiritual drink; for they drank of the spiritual rock that followed them, and that rock was Christ.' 1 Cor. x. 1—4. That rock whence the water flowed, was not Christ in reality, but a type and representation of Jesus Christ, who made this gracious declaration to all the faithful: 'If any man thirst, let him come to me and drink, and out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. By this he understood the Holy Ghost, which those that believed on him should receive.' John vii. 37, 38.

"The Apostle declares, that 'the children of Israel, who were in the wilderness, ate the same spiritual meat, and drank the same spiritual drink;' because the manna with which they were supported forty years together, and the water which flowed from the rock, were types of the body and blood of Christ, which are daily offered in the Church.

"That manna and that water were the same which we now offer, not corporeally but spiritually. To understand this, observe, that our Lord Jesus Christ, before his passion, converted the bread and wine into the sacrament of the Eucharist, and said, 'This is my body; this is my blood.' Although his passion was not over when he pronounced these words, yet, by a mystical operation, he changed the bread into his body, and the wine into his blood; just as he had done in the wilderness before his incarnation, when he turned the manna into his flesh, and the water that flowed from the rock into his blood."—See Rapin's History of England, vol. i. p. 143, second edition, where this masterly argument is given at length, furnishing the ablest explanation, perhaps, of this mysterious rite, anywhere to be found; and an advantageous specimen of the scriptural information of those Saxon times.

P R A Y E R S.

This poetical Paraphrase of the Lord's Prayer, in the Welsh language, is attributed to Cadoc the Wise, the contemporary of Taliessin, who flourished in the sixth century. See the Welsh Archaiology, vol. iii. p. 5.; or, Robert's Visitation Sermon, Appendix.

GWEDDI Y BADER: SEF GAIR DUW YN UCHAF.

I.

Ein Tad hollaluog gwreddgar a thirion,
Sy'n trigo'n y lleodd a'r pethan nefolion,
Glan ydwyd a sanctaidd, dy enw mawr sancteidier
Hyd eitha'r hell endid lle treigla'th hynawsder.

II.

Deued arnom dy Deyrnas a bydded dy 'wyllys,
Fal y mae yn y nef, ar y ddaear yn ddilys,
Rhe dad ini beunydd ein bara beunyddiol
Boed ini fyth ynod ymddiried yn holol.

III.

Rho di'r un faddeuant i bawb o blant dynion
Ac y rhoddown ni'n ddidwyll i'n llidiog elynion
Bydd drugarog i'n gwared rhag hud ein peehodau, Rhag a'n ennyg ar gam, rhag pob anian o ddrygau.

IV.

Ti Frenin gogoned yw perchen y Deyrnas,
A'r nerth, a'r gwyr glod, a phawb mawl itt'in addas,
Bydd di'n amddiffynwr, a'n dedfwr, a'n llywydd,
Hyd oesoed diderfyn, hyd fyth, yn dragwydd. AMEN.

For the following English translation, I am indebted to that learned Cambrian Antiquary, the Rev. Peter Roberts.

“ THE PRAYER, ‘ PATER,’ &c. or, THE WORD OF GOD ABOVE ALL.”

I.

“ Our Father Almighty, full of truth and mercy,
Who dwellest in the heavens, and art pure and holy,
Thy name be sanctified to the utmost bounds
Of that existence where thy goodness dwells!

II.

Thy kingdom come upon us; and thy will be done
Truly on earth, as it is in heaven.
Give us, day by day, our daily bread,
And may our whole trust be in Thee.

III.

And forgive all the children of men,
As we sincerely forgive our bitter enemies.
Defend us mercifully from the temptations of sin,
And from all inclinations to evil, lest they lead us astray :

IV.

For Thou, Lord of glory, art the Sovereign King,
And thine is the power, and true praise, and all honour.
Be Thou our Protector, and Lawgiver, and Governor,
To endless ages, eternally, for ever and ever. AMEN.

To the kindness of the same literary friend, I also owe the following translations of prayers from a Welsh manuscript, in the beginning of the fifteenth century, before the Reformation : —

PRAYERS TO CHRIST.

I.

“ O Jesu, who art the true Liberty of the Angels of the highest Paradise, remember the sorrows which Thou didst suffer, when all thine enemies, like savage lions, stood around Thee, bearing false witness against Thee, reviling, buffeting Thee, and spitting in thy face, shamefully entreating Thee, in many ways, by word and deed : O Lord Jesus Christ, for the sake of the many sufferings inflicted on Thee by thine enemies, deliver me, I beseech Thee, from mine enemies visible and invisible, and keep me under the shadow of thy wings, that so I may obtain protection and eternal salvation." Amen.

II.

" O Jesu, the only Son of the Father Most High, and the image of his existence, remember how lowly Thou wast, when Thou saidst Father, into thy hand I commend my spirit! and that though Thou wast pure, yet was Thine heart wholly broken, when with a loud cry, Thou didst proclaim the mystery of thy grace, [ It is finished! ] that Thou didst redeem us by Thy death : Blessed Lord Jesus, I beseech Thee, by the bitterness of Thy death, as Thou art the Great King of Heaven and Earth, so guide me safely, that I may resist my three enemies, the Devil, the World, and the Flesh ; and grant that I may live to Thee, and be dead to them ; and take Thou my spirit into Thy protection, that so at my last hour I may attain to joy eternal. Amen."

These devout and scriptural prayers are immediately addressed, we see, to our Lord Jesus Christ, in conformity with the primitive Liturgies; corresponding to the admirable Prayer of St. Chrysostom, at the conclusion of our Evangelical Liturgy, “Almighty God, who hast given us grace,” &c. and to the pathetic Petitions of our venerable Litany, “By thine agony and bloody sweat, by thy cross and passion, &c. Good Lord deliver us.”

MAXIMS AND TRIADS.

The following translations furnish an advantageous idea of the morality of the early Fathers of the British Church about the sixth century; selected from the Welsh Archaiology, vol. iii. ; or, Roberts's Visitation Sermon, Appendix.

I.

Seek not to enter Paradise by craft; or Heaven by bitterness of spirit; or to stand in the presence of the Trinity, if thou attain it not by the love of unity, p. 33. No. 120.

II.

The Three Precepts of Lazarus: Love thy God for He made thee; Trust in God, for He supported thee; Fear God, for He will judge thee.

III.

There are three kinds of Children: The Child of God, who renders good for evil; the Child of Man, who renders good for good, and evil for evil; and the Child of the Devil, who renders evil for good.

IV.

There are three advantages of Piety: a sufficiency in this world; peace of conscience; and joy in Heaven.

V.

Three things a Christian should keep in mind, lest he fall into deadly sin: the Commandments of God, the Joys of Heaven, and the Torments of Hell.

VI.

Three things result from Idleness: To think Evil, to speak Evil, and to do Evil.

VII.

Without an instructor, no learning;
 Without learning, no knowledge;
 Without knowledge, no wisdom;
 Without wisdom, no religion;
 Without religion, no [grace of] God;
 Without [grace of] God, without every thing.

VIII.

INSTRUCTIONS OF CADOC THE WISE,

To be learned, or committed to Memory, by his Pupils.

1. WHO IS WISE?

He who is neither provoked by reproach, nor elated with praise.

2. WHO IS PRUDENT?

He who considers before he speaks.

3. WHO IS STRONG?

He who is able to master his passions.

4. WHO IS MIGHTY?

He who is not ashamed of his poverty.

5. WHO IS WEAK?

He who cannot keep his own counsel.

6. WHO IS INDEPENDENT?

He who has a trade or profession, by which he is able to maintain himself everywhere.

7. WHO IS LIKED BY OTHERS?

He who can support himself.

8. WHO IS CHEERFUL?

He whose conscience does not accuse him.

9. WHO IS OF A GOOD HABIT OF LIFE, [OR GOOD-TEMPERED?]

He who can bear with an ill-tempered person.

10. WHO IS CHARITABLE?

He who can deprive himself to help others:

[ for the love of God, and for the sake of Christ.
1 Cor. xiii. 3. ; Matt. xxv. 34—40 ; x. 42 ; Mark ix.
41 ; 2 Cor. xii. 15.]

11. WHO IS HAPPY?

He who hates that which leads to evil, and loves that which leads to good.

12. WHO IS RELIGIOUS?

He who believes in God, and loves God, and perceives that the will and work of God, in all things, is best.

Such were the admirable maxims of these primitive Christians.

---

---

WE learn, with much pleasure, that a very respectable CAMBRIAN SOCIETY has been lately instituted, for “the preservation of Ancient British Literature, Poetical, Historical, Antiquarian, Sacred, and Moral,” under the patronage of the Duke of Beaufort, the Earl of Powis, the Bishops of Bangor, St. David’s, St. Asaph, and Llandaff; the Lords Dynevor, Kenyon, Cawdor, and Clive; the Baronets Watkins William Wynn; Thomas Mostyn, Robert Vaughan, and Charles Morgan; the Reverend Peter Roberts, &c. &c.

From their proposed Researches for “inedited Welsh Manuscripts, relative to Antiquities and Literature, in the British dominions, and in Continental Libraries,” a valuable stock of materials may be expected, for the composition of a “New History of Wales,” under the auspices of the Society; of which a “prospectus,” by a bardic member, Edward Williams, is announced to “be published at their expense.”

The principal promoter of this laudable institution appears to be “the Lord Bishop of St. David’s,” that worthy successor of Sulgen; “to whom the Society,” at a meeting held October 29, 1818, voted “thanks, for his great exertions in conducting its formation, and the lively interest he has taken in promoting its objects.”

In IRELAND, no public encouragement has been hitherto given, to rescue from oblivion the mouldering relics of her ancient Literature (rude-ribus pretiosa suis) that may have survived the wreck of time, and escaped from the ruthless ravages of long-continued wars and commotions, ever since the primary scourge of Danish invasions. Much, however, has been effected of late years, by the generous exertions of meritorious individuals: such as that English settler, Lieutenant-General Vallancey, * deceased, by his zealous * Having long enjoyed the intimacy and correspondence of that distinguished Irish scholar, Lieutenant-General VALLANCEY, who has laboured more to promote the study of the Irish language and antiquities than any Irishman of the present age, Dr. Charles O'Conor excepted,—I cannot resist the melancholy gratification of transcribing part of a Letter, among the many I received from my old friend on subjects of Oriental, connected with Irish Literature, strongly expressive of the ardour of his pious and patriotic zeal for its cultivation.

“ My dear Doctor,         “ Dublin, October 10, 1802.

“ I am glad you feel your weakness in not being able to reply to your Cavalry Preacher* in the Irish tongue. How often did your late worthy friend Forsayeth† set forth the

* A certain description of Methodist Missionaries, of the Wesleyan connexion, so called in Ireland, from frequenting fairs and markets, and preaching there on horseback, with black scull caps on their heads, to attract notice, by the singularity of their appearance. They preached occasionally in Irish, especially in Connaught, among the Roman Catholics, but with little success, the Priests having vigorously opposed them.—See Hales's Methodism Inspected, two parts, 1803, 1805.

† JOHN FORSAYETH, D. D. Senior Fellow of Trinity College, Dublin, and Professor of Oriental Languages, the parental Tutor, and predecessor of the Author in that Chair.

and indefatigable researches into the Antiquities, Literature, and Astronomical Science of the Irish necessity of our Clergy understanding Irish? And Dr. O'Conor lately conversed with me on the subject. I tell you, it is time that at least we should put forth some publications in that language; for the College of Maynooth have appointed a Professor, and applied to me to print my Irish Dictionary, which I cannot refuse, if they will encourage the printer.—Address your Primate on this subject; bid him enquire for Irish books printed by the Roman Catholics, even in Armagh. I think I have some yet left, since my attack on the Primate Robinson. Let the Roman Catholics no longer attribute it to the Holy Virgin, and the Prayers of St. Patrick, that the Protestant Clergy are so blind to the interest of their religion as to neglect the study of the Irish Language. My dear Sir, it is time we look about us: you will lose your flocks, if you do not.—Adieu, my dear Doctor, “Yours very sincerely,

---

“CH. VALLANCEY.”

The valuable Irish Dictionary here mentioned, the labour of twenty or thirty years, unfortunately still remains in manuscript, and unpublished, for want of encouragement in IRELAND! — An interesting Prospectus of it, including a curious account of the Ogham Tree-Alphabet of the Irish, lately found in an ancient Arabic manuscript in EGYPT, was published in quarto, 1802, Dublin; but there it ended! The Prospectus was unheeded, and the Author lost his labour, and the expense of printing. Surely, the publication of this posthumous Dictionary, under the patronage of the Hierarchy, the University, and the Royal Irish Academy, would reflect honour on themselves, and on the Nation at large; while the neglect of it, for these seventeen years past, is a disgrace to all. May the recent example of WALES stimulate IRELAND “to go and do likewise!” nation, in his copious Collectanea de Rebus Hibernicis, and other tracts, published at his own

---

The following Extract of a Letter, lately received from Dr. O'Conor, cannot fail to be acceptable to the Friends and Patrons of Irish Literature :—

“ Dear Sir,                    “ Stowe House, April 14, 1819.

——— “ I have now the gratification to communicate to you the pleasing intelligence of one of the greatest acquisitions to Irish Literature that has been discovered in modern times. It is the Ancient Irish Liturgy, which was in use before the introduction of the Roman, by Cardinal Paparo, in 1152. It is written on vellum, bound in oak, fortified with plates of copper and brass, of curious workmanship, adorned with laminæ of silver, on which are inscribed in the Irish character and language, the name of Donnchad, the son of Brian Boroimh, and of other contemporary abbots, the scribes, and the artificers in gold and silver, by whom the cover was ornamented, at [the abbey of] Chuanmacnoise. These laminæ are ornamented with precious stones, such as were known in Ireland at that time. The gold and silver are of the purest quality. The whole of the MS. is in Latin; with the exception of those parts [or Rubrics] which prescribe the forms of some few ceremonies to be used in the Sunday's service, and in the administration of the Sacraments: these are in Old Irish. I have purchased this valuable manuscript for Lord Buckingham, and hope to have the honour of presenting it to the literary world with a version and notes. I give you leave to shew this letter to all who may feel interested therein.—I have the honour to be,

“ Dear Sir, most sincerely,

“ Your obliged humble servant,

“ Rev. Dr. Hales,
“ Killesandra.”

“ CHAS. O'CONOR.”

cost; and by which he was a considerable loser. And that other still profounder Irish scholar and antiquary, the Rev. Dr. Charles O'Conor, lineally descended from the Conchobars, ancient monarchs of Ireland: whose various publications, and especially the last, Rerum Hibernicarum Scriptores Veteres, under the munificent patronage of the Marquis of Buckingham, (to which this Essay is so largely indebted) richly entitle him to the gratitude and applause of the Irish nation, for his learned and successful exertions to raise and restore their ancient literary character from the low estate to which it had been so injuriously depressed, by sceptical ignorance and prepossession: — while his pious and charitable labours to open the eyes of his benighted fellow-countrymen of the Romish persuasion, by correcter editions of the genuine remains of their patron saint, Patrick,

Every friend to the discovery of the pure and primitive religion of IRELAND, must cordially wish that Dr. O'Conor's valuable life and health may be spared and prolonged by PROVIDENCE, for the accomplishment of his proposed publication of the Liturgy with a Version and Notes; for which no man in the British dominions, perhaps, is so competent as himself: and it is to be hoped that he will seize the earliest opportunity of undertaking this grande opus; — a work which he justly states “ belongs to Literature in general, to Europe, as well as to Ireland, as a venerable monument of that Christian piety which subsisted in Ireland long before any distinction of Sects; and which is not to be published from any party views. ” and his disciple and panegyrist Fiech; which prepared the way for the present attempt to develope the “pure and undefiled religion” of that illustrious apostle of Ireland; and his masterly proofs, under the assumed character of the intrepid Columbanus, to evince the original independence of the Irish Church upon the Church of Rome, by a most ungrateful retribution, have only drawn down upon him the unmerited resentment, and unremitting obloquy and persecution, of a bigoted and intolerant Popish Hierarchy, which has so shamefully and servilely apostatized from the primitive faith and gospel liberty of their learned and renowned ancestors!

May this “labour of love, or charity,” seconding and promoting his public-spirited views, though perhaps with equal thanklessness on their parts, tend ultimately, in “God’s own time and season,” to promote a RADICAL REFORM of their religious and political tenets; gradually removing those mists of prejudice, and shackles of papal bondage, under which these blind guides and their servile flocks have groped and groaned so long! This they would find a real “EMANCIPATION;” and the only effectual method to conciliate the confidence of their fellow-citizens and of a Protestant Government, then entitling themselves to be placed fully on a level with other Dissenters, when they shall, in a NATIONAL SYNOD, publicly renounce those errors, and formally abjure those obnoxious *tenets, so justly imputed to their Church by the Legislature, and thereby contribute, on their parts, to restore that public peace and tranquillity which they have disturbed ; and, with the DIVINE BLESSING, ensure “the permanence of the STATELY COLUMN” of the BRITISH EMPIRE; fortunate beyond compare, under the tutelar protection of a gracious PROVIDENCE: which has hitherto braved all the assaults of foreign foes; and is “frangible” only by civil discord and intestine warfare.*

———— Ne proruas [Domine,]

STANTEM COLUMNAM ; neu populus frequens,

*AD ARMA * — cessantes ad arma*

Concitet ; IMPERIUMQUE frangat.

———— ESTO PERPETUA !

* “AD ARMA !” [Clamando.]

POSTSCRIPT.

---

IN the fifth section of this Essay, shewing the Precautions of Foreign Nations to counteract the usurped Supremacy of the Church of Rome, an abridgment was introduced, p. 302, &c. of the voluminous Report of the Select Committee of the House of Commons on that subject, published in 1817; as containing much curious and important information, but too widely dispersed for general use, even of the legislators, for whom it was intended.

Although the industrious and intelligent framers of that Report seem well entitled to the thanks of the public, the drift of their labours appears to have been misapprehended by some readers. A correspondent, under the signature of Luther, who published five Letters in the Times newspaper, in March and April, 1817, gave the following Strictures thereon, which deserve to be examined, in justice to the reporters : —

He represents “ the main points sought to be established by this Report : 1, That the appointment of bishops by the crown is general throughout all foreign states; and 2, That the sanction of the crown to bulls sent by Rome before their publication in these states, is equally general.”

“The deduction,” says he, “obviously intended to be drawn from these facts is, that since the crown nominates to the episcopal Sees abroad, and permits or prevents the promulgation of Papal decrees, from the operation of which two provisions its own rights are saved, and its own security guaranteed, — so, if the same guards or cautions were only observed here, we might safely throw ourselves into the arms of the advocates of Catholic emancipation, and dismiss every foolish fear, as at once injurious to them, and unworthy of ourselves ; we might thenceforth dispense with the Act of Settlement, as functus officio, and regard the Bill of Rights as so much waste paper.

“The Roman Catholics themselves, who should best understand this Report, are at present assigning this interpretation to it ; and are contending, that having thus proved the security of foreign nations, in consequence of the appointment of prelates by foreign monarchs, and of the caution exercised by those monarchs over the publication of Papal bulls, they are fully entitled to expect, that if these points should be conceded by them in England, they have an undoubted right to share in all the privileges of Protestant subjects, and to become constituent parts of the legislative and executive government in this Protestant realm.”

But, on the other hand, we may well question, first, Whether these are “the main points sought to be established by this Report?” — and, secondly,

Whether this writer and the Roman Catholics are warranted in their assumed deductions?"

1. There is a third, and most important point of the Report, which appears to have been totally overlooked by both; namely, That in no Protestant state whatsoever, at the present day, are Roman Catholics admissible, either to the legislative or the executive government. This fact is ascertained in the most express and explicit terms, by the Report of the Regulations subsisting in Prussia, Denmark, Sweden, and Switzerland; and the deduction that obviously follows from this fact is, that as there is no precedent throughout Europe for the grant of political power in Protestant states, to their Roman Catholic subjects,—so it would be impolitic, and hazardous in the extreme, to try the experiment now, in the Protestant empire of Great Britain.

2. The reporters fairly and fully state facts: they discreetly leave the deductions from those facts to the wisdom of Parliament; but the deduction to be obviously drawn, from the nomination of bishoprics by the crown, and the inhibition of Papal bulls, without licence, which hold equally in all the states, Romish, Protestant, and Greek, so far from making any security against the Pope, or any confidence in the attachment of their Roman Catholic subjects, even where they profess the religion of the state, as in France, Spain, Portugal, &c. only furnish an unequivocal test of the extreme jealousy and apprehension with which all these states equally contemplate, and endeavour to guard against the encroachments and usurpations of the Papacy, and the seduction of their subjects.

How, or why, the Roman Catholics shall best understand this Report, remains for the objector to shew. They may indeed affect to understand it so, in order to compass the ambitious object for which they are so pertinaciously contending ; and there is no small reason to dread they will accomplish it at last, from the ignorance and apathy of those who profess and call themselves PROTESTANTS. Omnia vincit labor improbus !

There is one consideration, however, of infinite weight and moment, paramount to all others, merely of a political nature, which does not appear to have entered hitherto into the contemplation of the advocates of the Catholic claims in Parliament ; and which, if it had, must have produced their immediate and unanimous rejection :— “ What fellowship hath CHRIST with Belial ? ” — What coalition, beyond full toleration, should be suffered between the Members of the Reformed Church of England, and of the Unreformed Church of Rome ? The resemblance indeed between Popery and Paganism throughout, is frightful and tremendous. The religion of the Romish Church is only a modification of the ancient idolatry of Heathenism. The pontifex maximus of ancient and modern Rome perfectly resemble each other in their character and functions ; as shewn in the Introduction of this Essay, pp. 44—50. The analogy between the heathenism of Papal and of Pagan Rome formerly, has been ably exposed by the celebrated Dr. Middleton ; and the connexion between the heathenism of Papal Rome and of Pagan India, at the present day, has been lately traced with much ability, from various sources of information, and especially from the observations of an intelligent writer on Indian affairs, long resident in that country, Charles Grant, Esq. M. P. late Chairman of the Hon. East India Company, by an eminent Solicitor, we understand, in the Court of Chancery, in a series of Letters, published in the Times newspaper, in the conclusion of the year 1817, under the signature of Ignotus, and republished 1818, in a tract, entitled Popery the Religion of Heathenism, — where the connexion is shewn in a variety of instances :— 1. “The alliance between Heathen deification and Romish canonization; — 2, Between the image-worship of Heathenism and Popery; — 3, The similarity of the two priesthoods, and of the religious orders and fraternities of Heathenism and Popery; — 4, The alliance between the perpetual sacrifice of Heathenism and the perpetual sacrifice of the Mass; — 5, The conformity between Transmigration and Purgatory; — 6, The expiation of sins by money in the Heathen and Romish Churches; — 7, And the conformity between the supreme power of the respective priesthoods," &c.

————— Ubi passim

Palantes error, certo de tramite pellit;
Ille sinistrorum, hic dextrorum abit; unus utriusque
Error, sed variis illudit partibus.                  HORAT.

I shall close this Postscript with the awful warning of the illustrious Hilton, against the introduction of Popery in his days; which bear an ominous resemblance, in many respects, to the present turbulent times.

"When a nation becomes generally irreligious and corrupt, and will not take warning by the sore judgments of fire, sword, famine, and pestilence, designed for their good, for correction in mercy, God, in his wrath, takes up and inflicts his last and severest of punishments, hardness of heart, infatuation, and idolatry. Idolatry brought the Heathens into heinous transgressions (Levit. xviii.; Rom. i.); and heinous transgressions, in turn, often bring the slight, or superficial professors of true religion into gross idolatry. 'For this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lye; to the end that they might all be judged who believe not THE TRUTH, but have pleasure in unrighteousness' (2 Thess. ii. 11, 12); and Isaiah thus speaks of idolaters: — 'They have not known nor understood; for God hath shut their eyes that they cannot see, and their hearts that they cannot understand.' Isa. xliv. 18.—" Let us, therefore," concludes Milton, " AMEND OUR LIVES WITH ALL SPEED, lest, through impunitency, we run into that stupidity, which we have heretofore sought by all means so warily to avoid, — the worst of superstitions, and the heaviest of all God's judgments, — POPERY." *

. . . . . " Oh, my LORD GOD, defend this realme from Papistrie, and maintain THY TRUE RELIGION!" — Dying Prayer of King Edward the Sixth. See Holinshed.

* See Milton's Treatise on Toleration, 1673; republished by Baron Maseres in 1811; and abridged in Hales's Chronology, vol. ii. p. 1368, &c.; and Blair's Revival of Popery, lately published, 1819, shewing its intolerant character, political tendency, encroaching demands, and unceasing usurpations.

A P P E N D I X

TO THE ESSAY, &c.

CONTAINING

- I. PTOLOMY'S ANCIENT GEOGRAPHY OF IRELAND, AMENDED, AND MODERNIZED.
- II. ANCIENT PILLARS IN PALESTINE, AND ROUND TOWERS IN IRELAND.
- III. S. PATRICII CONFESSIO, SIVE EPISTOLA
AD HIBERNOS.
- IV. FIECH'S IRISH POEM; OR, PANEGYRIC ON SAINT PATRICK.
- V. ANTIQUE MEDALS OF OUR BLESSED SAVIOUR, FOUND IN THE BRITISH ISLES.

OCEANUS HYPERBOREUS

HEBRIDES

Ebudæ Insulae quinque

Epidium

Ridua

Alaudum

Barra

Henacea

Ebuda

Maleæ

Ridua

Alaudum

Barra

Henacea

Ebuda

Ridua

A P P E N D I X.

---

I. PTOLOMY'S ANCIENT GEOGRAPHY OF IRELAND, AMENDED, AND MODERNIZED.

IN the ESSAY, p. 117, it was stated, upon the authority of Tacitus, that “the coasts and harbours of Ireland were better known to [foreign] traders and merchants, than those of Britain.” And this statement is conformable to the reports of the ancient Geographers, who wrote before, and about his time.

Orpheus, of Crotona in Italy, the friend of the tyrant Pisistratus of Athens, who flourished about B. C. 576, in his Argonautics, describing the voyages of Hercules, says, Πλοξ νησον αγεισεν Ιεριδα—“He coasted along the Island Iernis;” and that he meant Ireland thereby, appears from Aristotle’s account of the British Isles, in his book de Mundo, dedicated to his royal pupil, Alexander the Great, about B. C. 330: speaking of the Atlantic or Western Ocean—Εν τούτῳ γε μεν νησοι μεγισται τε τυγχανουσιν, ουσαι δυο Βρετανικαι, λεγομέναι Αλβίον καὶ Ιερνη· τῶν προιστορικῶν μεῖζους, ὑπερ τοὺς Κελτας κείμεναι· οὐκ οἷςδι δε μικροὶ περὶ τὰς Βρετανικὰς καὶ τὴν ΙΈρων. “ In this ocean, there are two islands, the greatest, the British; called Albion and Ierne; greater than the forementioned, lying beyond the Celts (or Gauls), northward; and not a few small ones, (the Scilly Isles), between the British Isles and Iberia (or Spain), southward.” This is a remarkably accurate description of their site; much more so than that of Tacitus, noticed in the Essay.

Artemidorus of Ephesus, who flourished about B. C. 104, without naming Ireland, thus describes it, as well known at that time:—Ἐγειρεῖται νησον πρὸς τὴν Βρεττανικήν, καθ' ἣν ὁμοία τοῖς εν Σαμοθράκῃ, περὶ τὴν Δημητρίαν καὶ τὴν Κόρην, ιεροποιεῖται. “ He says, there is an island, adjacent to the British, where sacred rites are performed to Ceres and the virgin (Proserpine), similar to those in Samothrace. ”

And Marcianus, of Heraclea in Pontus, who wrote in the third century after Christ, and abridged the works of Artemidorus, professed to correct his errors, not from the modern Roman geographers, but from ancient authors, and of equal credit; thus describes Ireland:—“ The British Isle Juvernia, is bounded on the north by the Hyperborean ocean, on the east by the Hibernian, and on the south by the Virginian ocean. It contains sixteen nations, eleven remarkable cities, fifteen remarkable rivers, five remarkable promontories, and six remarkable islands."

Festus Avienus also, who wrote a geographical work, De Oris Maritimis, in the reign of the Emperor Theodosius, thus describes its sanctity, and its situation, from the Punic annals of Himilco, the Carthaginian :—

Ast hinc, duobus, in sacram—sic Insulam
Dixere prisci—solibus, cursus rati [seu navi] est.
 Hæc inter undas multum cespitem jacit;
 Eamque late gens Hibernorum colit:
 Propinqua rursus Insula Albionum patet.

And he thus states his ancient authority for the denomination of the sacred island.

Hæc olim, Himilco Pænus, oceano super,
 Spectasse semet et probasse, retulit.
 Hæc nos, ab imis Punicorum annalibus,
 Prolata longo tempore, edidimus tibi.

Himilco is represented by Pliny as contemporary with Hanno, who made a commercial voyage of discovery to the coast of Guinea, in Africa, about B.C. 570, some time after Pharaoh Nicho had caused Africa to be circumnavigated by the Phœnician mariners, as noticed by Herodotus, in the reign of Nikus.

These testimonies seem fully to establish the statement of Tacitus.

The completest description of the British Isles is furnished by the celebrated Alexandrian astronomer and geographer, Claudius Ptolomy, who wrote his great geographical work about A. D. 150. Of this, the Greek text alone was first published at Basil, in 1553, quarto. A second edition, with a Latin version, maps and notes, by Mercator, at Amsterdam, in 1605. The third, corrected and enlarged, with better maps, and geographical tables, by Bertius, 1618, folio; and republished at Altenburg, 1785.

Ptolomy appears to have derived his information respecting Britain, partly from the Roman Itinerary of Lollius Urbicus, formed about A.D. 144, after the conquest of Britain in Vespasian's reign. Hence the Roman names of places found therein, Londinium, Eboracum, Alata Castra, Victoria, &c.; whereas his geography of Ireland is taken from the Greeks, Carthaginians, and Phœnicians; Marinus Tyrius, Himilco, &c.

His geography of Britain has been excellently explained and modernized by the Reverend John Horsley, A.M., in his very learned work, entitled Britannia Romana, London, 1732, containing the original text of Ptolomy, Antoninus's Itinerary, the Notitia, and Ravenna's Peutingerian Tables, and appropriate Essays, Tables, and Indexes. Horsley's Map of Britain is published separately in Laurie and Whittle's edition of D'Anville's Maps, London, 1810.

Mercator's Map of Ireland, has been copied and explained by Ware, De Antiquitatibus Hiberniae, London, 1658, second edition ; who has given the modern names of places, but too often incorrectly, owing to the inaccuracy of his map. Bertius has considerably improved it. And from his improved map, O'Conor has corrected several mistakes in the modern names of places, assigned by his predecessors, Mercator, Ware, Camden, &c., and republished the original text of Ptolomy respecting Ireland, in his Rerum Hibernicarum, &c. Proleg. I. pp. 37—60. The Map of Bertius however, adopted by O'Conor, without any alteration, is incorrect in some places, and requires emendation, in consequence of inaccuracies in the original text of Ptolomy.

Geographical Merit and Defects of Ptolomy.

The illustrious Hipparchus, who flourished about B.C. 130, was the first who brought down Astronomy from the heavens to the earth, and made it subservient to the improvement of Geography, by ascertaining more critically the positions of places on the terrestrial globe : from their latitudes, or meridian distances from the equator, north or south ; and their longitudes, or distances of their meridians from the prime meridian, east or west. The longitudes of several remarkable places, he determined by the elevation of the pole above their respective horizons ; and their longitudes, by their horary distances from the first meridian, for every hour of difference in time, allowing fifteen degrees of longitude, or four minutes of time for one degree of longitude.

Ptolomy, indeed, had the great merit of reviving this prime invention of Hipparchus, after it had lain dormant above two centuries, and of applying it upon an extended scale to his scheme of geography, so far as astronomical observations in his time had determined the latitudes and longitudes of places. And where they failed, he endeavoured to supply their place, by the observations and reports of the early Phœnician, Carthaginian, and Grecian navigators, respecting the lengths of the longest days at the summer solstice, varying in proportion to their latitudes or climates ; and by the most correct itineraries, or distances of posts, stations, or places from each other, laid down by the Grecian and Roman historians and travellers. But from such coarse observations, and imperfect measurements, his geography was unavoidably incorrect, in the infancy of the science. He had the glory, however, of laying the foundation of the present scientific system. See Blair's learned and ingenious History of the Rise and Progress of Geography, 1784, 12mo.

Hence, we need not wonder, that he assigns too high a latitude to the British Isles, in general: Ireland, especially, lies between the parallels of latitude 51 deg. 15 min. and 55 deg. 15 min.; but Ptolemy raises it to 57 deg. and 62 deg., or six degrees too high. Of course, his latitudes and longitudes of particular places are necessarily inaccurate.*

* The following Tables may be useful in correcting Ptolemy's Geography :—

I. TABLE OF CLIMATES.

Climate.	Longest Day.	Latitude.	Ancient Positions.
	hor. min.	deg. min.
I. —	12. 0.	0. 0.	I. Meroe, Egypt.
Middle	12. 15.	4. 15.
II. —	12. 30.	8. 25.	II. Syene, Egypt.
Middle	12. 45.	12. 30.
III. —	13. 0.	16. 25.	III. Alexandria, Egypt.
Middle	13. 15.	20. 15.
IV. —	13. 30.	23. 50.	IV. Rhodes, Mediterranean.
Middle	13. 45.	27. 40.
V. —	14. 0.	30. 20.	V. Hellespont, or else Rome.
Middle	14. 15.	33. 40.
VI. —	14. 30.	36. 28.	VI. Borysthenes, or Dnieper.
Middle	14. 45.	39. 2.
VII. —	15. 0.	41. 22.	VII. Riphean M. at
Middle	15. 15.	43. 32.

Thus, he reckons the longest day at Ioveponiç, Juernis, the capital city of the south of Ireland,

		hor.	min.	deg.	min.
VIII.	—	15.	30.	45.	29.	the head of the Tandis or Don.
	Middle	15.	45.	47.	20.
IX.	—	16.	0.	49.	1.
	Middle	16.	15.	50.	33.	These seven climates
X.	—	16.	30.	51.	58.	(denominated from the Middle	16.	45.	53.	17.	chief places through
XI.	—	17.	0.	54.	27.	which the middle pa-
	Middle	17.	15.	55.	34.	rallels of northern lati-
XII.	—	17.	30.	56.	37.	tude ran ) alone, were
	Middle	17.	45.	57.	32.	noticed by the ancient
XIII.	—	18.	0.	58.	29.	geographers ; thinking
	Middle	18.	15.	59.	14.	that the rest were un-
XIV.	—	18.	30.	59.	58.	inhabitable, either from
	Middle	18.	45.	60.	40.	heat or from cold; or
XV.	—	19.	0.	61.	18.	else unknown in the
	Middle	19.	15.	61.	55.	southern latitudes.
XVI.	—	19.	30.	62.	25.	The twenty-four mod-
	Middle	19.	45.	62.	54.	ern climates begin at
XVII.	—	20.	0.	63.	22.	the equator , where the Middle	20.	15.	63.	40.	day is always 12 hours
XVIII.	—	20.	30.	64.	6.	long; and, increasing
	Middle	20.	45.	64.	30.	by half hours, end at
XIX.	—	21.	0.	64.	49.	the Arctic Circle ,
	Middle	21.	15.	65.	6.	where the longest day
XX.	—	21.	30.	65.	21.	is 24 hours. Six more
	Middle	21.	45.	65.	35.	climates are reckoned
XXI.	—	22.	0.	65.	47.	from thence to the
	Middle	22.	15.	65.	57.	North Pole ; in which
XXII.	—	22.	30.	66.	6.	the days increase from
	Middle	22.	45.	66.	14.	one month to six, or
XXIII.	—	23.	0.	66.	20.	half a-year , at the Pole

18 hours; and its horary distance from Alexandria  $3\frac{1}{4}$  hours; and thence collects its latitude,

	hor.	min.	deg.	min.
Middle	23.	15.	66.	25.	itself, in the Summer
XXIV. —	23.	30.	66.	28.	half-year; and the re-
Middle	23.	45.	66.	30.	verse in the Winter .
End	24.	0.	66.	31.	The twenty-four climates gradually de-
XXV. —	1 month		67.	30.	crease in breadth, to
XXVI. —	2 months		69.	30.	the Artic Circle ; but
XXVII. —	3 months		73.	20.	the six increase from
XXVIII. —	4 months		78.	20.	thence to the Pole .
XXIX. —	5 months		84.	0.
XXX. —	6 months		90.	0.

This first Table is compiled from Sir Isaac Newton's excellent edition of Varenii Geographia Generalis. Cantab. 1681. pp. 319—321.

II. TABLE OF DEGREES OF LONGITUDE.

Deg. Min. English Miles.	Deg. Min. English Miles.
0. Equator 69. 25.	45. — 49. 0.
1. — 69. 24.	47. 30 46. 78.
2. 30. 69. 18.	50. — 44. 51.
5. — 68. 99.	52. 30. 42. 15.
7. 30. 68. 65.	55. — 40. 0.
10. — 68. 2.	57. 30. 37. 21.
12. 30. 67. 61.	60. 34. 62.
15. — 66. 89.	62. 30. 31. 97.
17. 30. 66. 04.	65. — 29. 30.
20. — 65. 07.	67. 30. 26. 50.
22. 30. 63. 98.	70. — 23. 68.
25. — 62. 76.	72. 30. 20. 82.

58 deg. 10 min. ; and its longitude, 11 deg. west of Alexandria.

The longest day of 18 hours, actually corresponds to a latitude of 58 deg. 29 min. ; nearly agreeing with his ; but the horary distance of  $3\frac{1}{4}$  hours, would give 45 deg. 4 min. of longitude, instead of 11 degrees. But the pharos or lighthouse of Alexandria, according to Walsh's journal, lies in 29° 45' east longitude of Greenwich ;

Deg. Min.	English Miles.	Deg. Min.	English Miles.
27. 30.	61. 42.	75. —	18. —
30. —	59. 97.	77. 30.	14. 99.
32. 30.	58. 40.	80. —	12. 02.
35. —	56. 73.	82. 30.	9. 04.
37. 30.	54. 94.	85. —	6. 03.
40. —	53. 04.	87. 30.	3. 02.
42. 30.	51. 05.	90. —	0. 0.

This second Table is contracted from the fuller Table of that learned physician, Dr. William Falconer, of Bath, exhibiting the length of the degrees of Longitude, at every ten minutes of Latitude, reckoned from the Equator to the Pole, in English miles, and decimal parts, carried to five places of decimals ; computing a geographical degree of Longitude at the Equator itself, 69 $\frac{1}{4}$  English miles, according to the most accurate modern calculations. It is the fifth of the Tables of the Ancient Measures of Length, reduced to English Measures, subjoined to his excellent translation of Arrian's Periplus, or Circumnavigation of the Euxine Sea, with critical Geographical Dissertations and Maps, &c. Oxford, 1805. 4to. Anonymous ; the profound modesty of the Author suppressing his name.

and Juernis or Kilmalloch lies  $8^{\circ} 30'$  west of Greenwich. Ptolomy's longitude therefore, of 11 degrees, is doubly erroneous.

He also reckons the longest day at Rhæba, or Athlone,  $18\frac{1}{2}$  hours; and its horary distance from Alexandria  $3\frac{1}{5}$  hours; and thence collects its latitude 56 deg. 54 min., and its longitude 12 degrees. But the longest day of  $18\frac{1}{2}$  hours, gives the true latitude, 59 deg. 18 min.; and  $3\frac{1}{5}$  hours would give the longitude 45 deg. 3 min.; his latitudes and longitudes therefore are doubly erroneous.

Probably, however, there are mistakes in the numeral letters expressing these latitudes and longitudes. Of this, a material instance occurs in the latitudes assigned to the mouths of the rivers Αυσοβα, Ausoba, at Galway; and Σενος, Senus or Shannon, on the western coast. Both are marked with the same numerals, namely, ν θ —λ., 59 deg. 30 min. And this, we may presume, misled Bertius, to place the course of the river Shannon as having its mouth in the same latitude with the mouth of the Ausoba; and hence, to misplace the more southerly rivers—the Δορο, Dur, in the room of the Senus; the Ιερνος, Iernus, in the room of the Dur; and to omit Kenmare bay entirely, into which the Iernus actually runs. This mistake of Bertius is the more extraordinary, as his predecessor Mer- cator had avoided the error in Ptolomy's numbers, and assigned the Shannon, and the rivers below it, to their true positions; and he has been followed by the ablest geographers since, Cellarius, D'Anville, &c.

On the other hand, Mercator misplaced several towns, which were restored to their true sites by Bertius. He misplaced Juernis, “Kilmallock,” near the head of the Kenmare river, in Kerry; Ware miscalled it Dunkerrin, which is near Roscrea, in the county of Tipperary; and D'Anville miscalled it Cashel. Mercator misplaced Rhaea, on the river Birgus or “Barrow,” instead of high up on the Shannon, where stands Athlone: he misplaced Macolicum, also, in the interior of Connaught; whereas Ptolomy represents it as a “maritime city,” which corresponds with the site of Killaloe, on the Shannon, navigable for small craft up to the falls in its neighbourhood, and was formerly a place of considerable note, the residence of Brian Boroimhe, king of Munster, who defeated the Danes at Clontarf, near Dublin, A.D. 1002. It could not denote Mallow, (for which it has been mistaken, from the resemblance of names), seated on the Dabrona or “Blackwater.” Mercator also misplaced Regia, which, restored to its true site, represents Armagh, as judiciously noticed by D'Anville. Laberus, also, thus restored to its true site, denotes Killair, according to Camden, or Kildare; the letters l and d being frequently interchanged in Irish, as Gillas for Gildas. Here is a fine Round Tower, intimating that it was a place of note in the Druidical times.

Dunum, more southerly, is supposed by Ware to denote Dunamase, in the Queen's county; and by Camden, Dunleith-glass, or Downpatrick, in Ulster. But it seems rather to denote Kilkenny or Kil-Canice, “the temple of Canice,” its patron saint of old. The noble park of the Ormond family in its neighbourhood, still retains the name of Dun-more, the “great Down.” And adjoining the Cathedral, on the south side, there stands a fine Round Tower. And that the county of Kildare, indeed, was a principal residence of the Druids formerly, appears from its containing within its precincts, not less than five of these Round Towers; and also a holy well, still called Tubber na Draoid, “the Druids' well.”

I shall now proceed to trace Ptolomy's outline of the coasts and rivers of Ireland; the maritime and inland cities; and the several nations inhabiting the island; annexing their modern names, as far as they are discoverable.

NORTHERN COAST.

Ροβογδίου ακρον.	Rhobogdium promontorium.
Fair Head.
Αργιτε ποταμος εκβολαι.	Argitæ fluvii ostia.
Lough Foyle.
Ουιδσα ποτ. εκβ.	Viduæ fl. ost.
Lough Swilly.
Ουεννικηνον ακρον.	Vinicnium prom.
Ram's Head.
Βορειον ακρον.	Boreale prom.
St. Helen's, or Telling head.

WESTERN COAST.

Πασις ποτ. εκβ.	Ravii fl. ost.
Erne river, Donegal bay.
Λιβοις ποτ. εκβ.	Liboii fl. ost.
Sligo bay.
Αυσοβεα ποτ. εκβ.	Ausobæ fl. ost.
Suck river, Galway bay.
Σηνι ποτ. εκβ.	Seni fl. ost.
Shannon mouth.
Δερ. ποτ. εκβ.	Dur flu. ost.
Mang river, Dingle bay.
Ιερνι ποτ. εκβ.	Ierni fl. ost.
Kenmare river, Kenmare bay.
Νοτιον ακρον.	Australe prom.
Misen head.

SOUTHERN COAST.

Δαβρωνα ποτ. εκβ.	Dabronæ fl. ost.
Blackwater River, Youghall bay.
Βιργι [Βαργι.] ποτ. εκβ.	Birgi [Bargi] fl. ost.
Barrow river, Waterford bay.

Iερον ακρον.Sacrum. prom.

Carnsore point.

EASTERN COAST.

Μοδονις ποτ. εκε. Modoni fl. ost.

Slaney river, Wexford bay.

Οβοκα ποτ. εκε. Oboca fl. ost.

Avoca river, Arklow bay.

Βυνιδα ποτ. εκε. Buvinda fl. ost.

Boyne river, Drogheda bay.

Ισαμνιον ακρον. Isamnium prom.

St. John's foreland.

Ουινδερις ποτ. εκε. Vinderius fl. ost.

Strangford bay.

Λογια ποτ. εκε. Logia fl. ost.

Lagan river, Carrickfergus bay.

Ροβογδιον ακρον. Rhobogdium prom.

Fair head.

MARITIME CITIES.

Ναγνατα πολις επισημη. Nagnata urbs insignis.

Western coast.

Μαναπια πολις. Manapia urbs.

Wexford, Southern.

Εβλανα πολις. Eblana urbs.

Dublin, Eastern.

INLAND CITIES.

NORTHERN.

Ριγια, [Pηγια]. Regia.

Armagh.

WESTERN, ON THE SHANNON.

Ραΐζα πόλις επισημός.	Rhaeba urbs insignis. Athlone.
Μακολικον.	Macolicum.
Killaloe.
Ετερα Ριγια.	Altra Regia.
Limerick.

EASTERN.

Λαβέης.	Laberis.
Kildare.
Δυνον.	Dunum.
Kilkenny.

SOUTHERN.

Ιερνίς πόλις επισημός.	Jucnis urbs insignis. Kilmallock.

INHABITANTS.

NORTHERN TRIBES.

Ροβογδιοι.	ROBOGDII.
Ουεννικνιοι.	VENNICKII.

WESTERN TRIBES.

Ερδινοι, [Pal. addit. οἱ καὶ Ερπιτανοι].	ERDINI, et ERPI-
Ναγναται.	NAGNATÆ.	[TANI.]
Αυτηροι.	AUTERI.
Γαγγανοι.	GANGANI.
Ουελλαθεροι [Pal. add. οἱ δ' Ελλεθροι].	VELLABORI,
		[qui et ELLEBRI.]

SOUTHERN TRIBES.

Οὐτερνοι. [Pal. Ιβερνιοι].	UTERNI, [ Juerni ].
Ουοδιαι.	VODII, vel UDIÆ.
Βριγαντες.	BRIGANTES.

EASTERN TRIBES.

Κοριονδοι.	CORIONDI.
Μαναπιοι.	MANAPII.
Καυκοι.	CAUCI.
Βλανιοι. [Pal. Εθλανοι].	BLANII, [ seu EBLANI].
Ουολγντιοι.	VOLUNTII.
Δαρνιοι. [Pal. Δαρνιοι].	DARNII, [ seu DARINI].
Ροβογδιοι.	ROBOGDII.

ISLES ADJACENT.

ON THE NORTHERN COAST.

Eθεδζι.	Ebudæ.
	The Hebrides, or Western Isles.
Eθεδζα.	Ebuda , 1.
	Eust.
Eθεδζα.	Ebuda , 2.
	Lewis.
Pixivæ.	Richina .
	Rachline.
Μαλεος.	Maleos.
	Mull.
Eπιδιον.	Epidium.
	Yla.

ON THE EASTERN COAST.

Μοναχοδζ.	Monachæda .
	Menay, or Anglesey.

Mονα νησος.

Isle of Man.

Ἐδορυ ερημ<sup>Θ</sup>.

Mona Insula.

Edri deserta.

Lambay, or Howth promontory.

Λιμνη ερημ<sup>Θ</sup>.

Limni deserta.

Lymen.

Considerably northward, Ptolomy notices another remarkable Island, Θούλη, Thule, in which he reckons the longest day 20 hours; which corresponds to the latitude of 63 deg. and 22 min., and most probably denotes the isle of Shetland.

Pytheas of Maricilles reckoned it six days' sail from Britain, northwards, and placed it in a latitude higher than the Arctic circle, or about  $66\frac{1}{2}$  degrees, corresponding to Iceland!

Quicquid audet in Historia Græcia mendax.

Colonization of Ireland.

From the foregoing survey, Ireland appears to have been a populous and a flourishing country of old, furnished with numerous cities, and inhabited by various tribes. The primitive names of places, rivers, cities, and tribes, preserved by Ptolomy, from the Phœnician, Carthaginian, and Grecian records, furnish a satisfactory clue, if carefully and skilfully traced, according to the rules of etymological criticism, for developing and discovering their origin, amid the changes of languages, and of settlements, introduced in the lapse of ages by commerce or conquest.* For the lineage of every people is most accurately traced in their primitive language, and the primitive language most faithfully preserved in their topography.

From these “ancient landmarks,” connected with other historical and archæological documents, we may collect that Ireland was colonized from different quarters, by the Phenicians, the Iberians, and the Celts, as judiciously remarked by O'Conor:—Populi nempe origo, Iberica est, Celtica, et Phœnicia. Proleg. i. p. 58.

Of these various tribes, the Phenicians (including their Carthaginian and Iberian, or Spanish colonies,) appear to have settled principally on the southern and western coasts of Ireland; and the Celtic tribes, from Gaul to Scandinavia, northwards, on the eastern and northern coasts.

Thus we find Herculis promontorium, now “Hartland point,” on the coast of Cornwall in * Nova Urbium fundamenta jaciuntur, nova Gentium nomina, extinctis nominibus prioribus, aut in accessionem validioris conversis, oriuntur. Seneca.

Britain ;* so called from the celebrated navigator, the Tyrian Hercules; famous in Ireland also, under the title of Feni an fear saoidh, “the Phenician wise man.” He gave name likewise to the “Pillars of Hercules;” for so the mounts Calpe and Abila, on the European and African sides of the straits of Gibraltar, were early denominated. Of these pillars or mounts, Calpe seems to have taken its name from the promontory Calpe, near the city of Heraclea, not far from the Thracian Bosporus, or Dardanelles, on the Euxine sea, in Pontus; noticed by Arrian in his Periplous. See Falconer’s Translation and Dissertations, pp. 10, 11, 57; where it is observed, that “Xenophon’s description of the port of Calpe,† is an exact description of Gibrat-

* The name Britain, is compounded of Bruit, “Tin,” and Tan, “Country,” as abounding in this metal, especially in Cornwall.

† Xenophon thus describes it in his Anabasis, B. vii. p. 451. Hutchinson’s Edit.

“The port of Calpe is situated in Asiatic Thrace, in the midway between Byzantium (or Constantinople) and Heraclea, on the right-hand, as you sail from the former to the latter. A promontory runs out into the sea, of which that part, which lies contiguous to the sea, is a craggy rock; in height, where it is lowest, not less than twenty fathoms. The neck of land, by which this promontory is joined to the continent, is about four hundred feet in breadth, and the space within the tar, with the difference of the proportion of size in its respective parts."

Not far from Gibraltar, on the Atlantic, is Cape St. Vincent, formerly called Promontorium sacrum; and opposite to Herculis promontorium, on the Irish coast, is Promontorium sacrum, in Irish, Carne sore point, of the same import: for carne, derived evidently from the oriental קֶרֶן, keren or kern, signifying "a horn," is usually applied to those sacred mounts or high places, on which Druidical temples or altars are still found, both there and elsewhere. And soire neck is ample enough to afford habitation for ten thousand men. The port lies under the rock, on the western shore; and close to the sea flows a spring, plentifully supplied with fresh water; this spring is commanded by the rock. The place affords great plenty of timber, particularly such as is proper for shipbuilding, in great quantity and perfection, close to the sea."

The Greek word, Καλπη, is rendered by Hesychius, υδρια, σαμνος, "a water pot, a pitcher," probably from the resemblance of the shape of the port thereto. Steph. Byzant. says, there was both a city and a port of this name. The river is specified by Apollonius to be remarkable for its depth:—

Βαθυρειοντα τε Καλπην.

Argonaut. ii. 661.

In ancient times, the names of places were significant, or expressive of their qualities.

signifies “the rising sun,” or “the east,” in Irish; corresponding to Surya, of the same import in Sanscrit. Vallancey’s Essay, &c. p. 40.

The whole island indeed was called “sacred,” as we have seen, by the Carthaginians, from the Samothracian or Phenician rites celebrated there. And Kilmallock, the Irish name of the southern capital of Ireland, Juernia, “the temple of Maloch, or Moloch,” the sun; and Ath-lone, or Atha-luan, “the ford of the moon,” high up on the river Shannon, as explained before, (Essay, p. 157), afford evidence of this.

If we proceed westward, from Carnsore point to Kerry, we find, in the name of that country, the mercantile nation by whom it was colonized: for Ciaragh, its Irish name, is derived from Ciar, “a merchant;” whence Ciara-ban, “a company of merchants,” corresponding to the oriental caravan, of the same import, as remarked by Vallancey.

The river Dovρ, or Dur, in Kerry, most probably derived its name from the Douro or Durius, of Iberia or Spain, and both from Δωρα, Dora, an ancient and strong city of Phenicia, noticed by Joshua; which the Manassites, in whose lot it lay, were not able to subdue. Josh. xi. 2; xvii. 11, 12. Judg. i. 27. Josephus also remarks, that it is situate near mount Carmel. And we learn from TImagenes Syrus, cited by Ammianus Marcellinus, that it sent out colonies under the Tyrian Hercules, which settled on the European coasts of the (Atlantic) ocean; as observed, Rerum Hibernicarum, &c. Proleg. i. p. 51.

Northward of the Dur, lies the river  $\Sigma\eta\nuoc$ , Senus, the largest in Ireland; whose modern name, “Shannon,” seems to be compounded of the Irish, Scan Amhuin, “the aged river,” corresponding to the Latin, Senis Amnis. And it is remarkable, that Sennon, according to General Vallancey, is one of the names of the Ganges; whose divinity is called Durga, and her festival annually celebrated in Hindostan; corresponding to Derg, the divinity of the Shannon, whose name is preserved in the Irish, Dearg art, “the abode of Derg,” still retained by Lough Derg, the lower lake on the Shannon. There is no part of Ireland that abounds more in Druidical monuments and remains than this noble river, from its mouth to its source. On the island of Ennis Catty, commonly called Scattery,\* near Kilrush,

* On this island lived a celebrated Irish saint, Sennan; so denominated from the river, not the river from him, according to monkish tradition. He is said to have succeeded St. Patrick in the see of Armagh, according to his prophecy before the birth of Sennan.

Nascetur vobis parvulus
Futurus Dei famulus,

not far from its mouth, there stands a round tower, and the ruins of seven churches. A mystical number, in the diviner Balaam's days. Numb. xxiii. 1. The upper lake, above Killaloe, called Lough Rea, was dedicated to the moon. Ree, in Irish, signifying “queen,” and Righ, “king,” corresponding to the Latin, rex and regina; both, probably, of oriental descent. Thus, the Egyptian title of the patriarch Joseph, when appointed regent of Egypt, רַב בָּנָה. Ab-rach signifies “father of the king,” as understood by the Chaldee paraphrast, on Gen. xli. 43. And the idol of Sennacherib, Nis-roch, signified “king of flight.” 2 Kings xix. 37, corresponding to the Ζευς φύγος, “God of flight,” of the Greeks. Selden, Vol. II. p. 1491.

The primitive name of Athlone, preserved by Ptolomy, Ραιζα, Rhaea, bears a striking analogy to Ριζας, Rhebas, a river of Pontus, near the Thracian Bosporus, or Dardanelles, noticed by Arrian in his Periplous; and thus celebrated by Dionysius Periegetes, vers. 794—796 :

Qui est Sennanus nomine :
In meo stabit ordine,
Mihi, Deo propitio, Succedens Episcopo.

Harris's Ware. Vol. I. p. 34.

Ρηβας, ενθ' ερατεινον επιπροιηστι ρεεθρον,
 Ρηβας, ὃς Ποντοῦ παρὰ γοματεσσιν οδευει,
 Ρηβας, ἡ καλλισσον επι χθονι συρεται οὐδωρ.

“The Rhebas here discharges its pleasant stream,
 The Rhebas, which travels near the mouth of the Pontus (Euxine),
 The Rhebas, the fairest water that flows on earth.”

And nothing indeed can be more strikingly descriptive of the beautiful river Shannon, at Athlone; where, in size, clearness, and winding course, it resembles the Rhebas of Pontus: which Strabo represents as “a winding stream;” and Tournefort, when he passed it in summer, found no larger than a brook. See Falconer’s Arrian, pp. 10—55.

Northward of the Senus, lies the river Ausoba, which runs into Galway bay. Here the Irish annals place a settlement of Asob Gael-ibh, “the noble merchant-tribe,” as noticed in Obrien’s Dictionary: the first word, asob, “noble,” evidently corresponding to the name of the river; and Gael-ibh, “the merchant-tribe,” to Gallive, the Irish name of the town of Galway. Ibh, a tribe, bears a striking analogy to the Chaldee אַיִב, aib, of the same import, as remarked by Vallancey; and we may add, that the Lough Gorrib, from which the river Ausoba, or “Suck,” issues, is naturally derived from the Hebrew or Phenician, שָׁרֵב (Ereb), “evening, or western,” the first guttural letter y (ain) being frequently sounded like the letter G, as in the word Gomorrah.

Northward of the Ausoba, lay Nagnata, “a remarkable city” on the sea-coast; of which no traces are said to remain. However, with the prefix, cuon, signifying, in Irish, a “port or harbour,” it seems to have given name to the whole province of Con-naght, according to the ingenious conjecture of Camden. Hibernia, p. 665.

Of the several tribes inhabiting Ireland, according to Ptolomy, the Brigantes, on the southern coast, appear to have been descended from the Iberian or Spanish tribe of the same name, near Corunna, which was formerly called Flavia Brigantum; and with a fair southerly wind is not more than two days’ sail from the Irish coast. Here was a remarkable pharos or lighthouse, said to be built by Breogan, the son of Brath, the lineal descendant of Fenius, and the grandfather of that Milesius, whose sons, Heber and Heremon, led a colony to Ireland, where they were called Sleoght Breogan, “the race of Breogan.”

The Vellabori, on the south-west coast of Kerry, strongly resemble the Illiberi of Iberia or Spain, and are denominated in Irish, Siol

Ebir, marking their descent as “the seed of Eber.”

The Gangani also, on the western coast bordering on the Senus, appear to be descended from the Concani, a Spanish tribe of Scythian origin, who used to bleed their horses and drink their blood, according to the Latin poets:—

Et lætum equino sanguine Concani.
Horat.

Et qui Massagetum monstrans feritate parentem, Cornipedis fusâ satiaris, Concane, venâ.
Silius Italicus.

And the savage custom of bleeding their cattle, and mixing the blood with oatmeal in seasons of scarcity, is said to have been prevalent on the western coast of Ireland, not many years since.

The eastern coast of Ireland, above the Brigantes, northward, was inhabited by the Manapii; who were probably descended from the Menapii, a German tribe near Brabant; and Weysford, the old name of the town Manapia, or Wexford at present, indicates a Saxon origin, as recorded by the old poet Necham:

Ditat Enestorti flumen quod Slana vocatur,
Hunc cernit Weisford se sociare sibi.
Camden, 660;

where Slana denotes the river Slaney, which runs by Enniscorthy.

Above the Manapii were the Cauci, who likewise appear to have been descended from another distinguished German tribe, the Chauci, settled on the banks of the river Visurgis or Weser, and stretching southwards, from the Albis or Elbe, to the Rhenus or Rhine. Of whom Tacitus gives the following honourable description : Tam immensum terrarum spatium non tenent tantum Chauci, sed et implent : populus inter Germanos nobilissimus, quiue magnitudinem suam malit justitiâ tueri : sine cupiditate, sine impotentia, quieti secretique, nulla provocant bella, nullis raptibus aut latrociniis populantur. Idque præcipuum virtutis ac virium argumentum est, quod ut superiores agant, non per injurias adsequuntur. Prompta tamen omnibus arma, ac si res poscat, exercitus, plurimum virorum equorumque. Germania, § 35.

“ Such an immense tract of territory the Chauci not only occupy, but fill : a people the noblest among the Germans, who prefer, by justice, to support their greatness ; without ambition, without passion. Quiet and retired, they provoke no wars ; they lay waste no countries by rapine and robberies ; and the principal proof of their virtue and power is, that they have attained the pre-eminence not by violence. All, however, are ready to take arms, and, if necessary, to raise a numerous army of infantry and cavalry.”

And the maritime baronies of Bargy and Forth, in the county of Wexford, are still distinguished, for retaining their ancient Saxon dialect, and for their simplicity of manners and industry, from the adjoining districts.

The Blanii or Eblani, northward of the Cauci, were probably descended from the Saxons, or Danes of the Chersonesus Cimbrica, or Jutland; for Eblana, or Dublin, was the principal settlement of the Ostmen, afterwards, A.D. 807.

The northernmost tribes of the Voluntii, or Uluntii, in Irish Ullaigt; whence Ulidia, or the province of Ulster; and the Darnii, or Darini, whose original name is still preserved in the city of Derry, (or Darry, according to the broader pronunciation of the natives,) with the remaining tribes of the Robogdii and Veninicnii, were all probably descended from the parallel regions or climates of the continent. The Robogdii, perhaps, from Robodunum, or “Brin,” in Germany. And their origin appears to be marked by their broad accent, sandy hair, and fair complexions, which remarkably distinguish them from the natives of the south and the west of Ireland.

The high antiquity of the successive colonizations of Ireland, beginning with the celebrated Phenician navigator, who explored the southern coasts of Britain and Ireland, may be collected from the Irish annals, especially the valuable chronological poem of Gillas Coemhain, written in Irish, A. D. 1072, and first published, lately, with a Latin translation, by O'Conor. Prol. ii. pp. 31—42.

The Irish Milesians reckon twenty-three generations from Feni an fear soid, “the Phenician wise man,” their ancestor, to Heber and Hermemon, the sons of Milesius, who established the last settlement from Spain, as observed before; which, at the usual computation of three mean generations to a century, would give 766 years from Fenius to Heber. But we learn from Coemhain, that “the sons of Milesius were coeval with Solomon, and that the Gadelians came to Ireland in the middle of the reign of this illustrious prince,” B. C. 1002, according to the Irish chronology.* Counting backwards

* In order to determine this cardinal date of ancient Irish history, it is necessary to premise a synopsis of Coemhain's System of Chronology.

	Y.	B. C.
Creation . . . . .	1656	3952
Deluge . . . . .	292	2296
Abraham born . . . .	942	2004
David king . . . . .	473	1062
Babylonish Captivity . .	589	589
Christian era . . . . .	<hr/> 3952	1 therefore, from this date, 766 years, we get the time of Fenius about B.C. 1768. And this

---

In this table, the first column contains the years elapsed between the succeeding events: thus, from the Creation, 1656 years to the Deluge; from the Deluge, 292 years to the birth of Abraham, &c.; and their amount, 3952 years, gives the basis of the system, or the years elapsed from the Creation to the vulgar Christian era. The second column gives the dates of these events before the Christian era.

David began to reign B.C. 1062; from which subducting 60 years, for the amount of his whole reign, 40 years, and 20 years, the half of Solomon's, we get B.C. 1002, for the date of the expedition of Heber and Heremon to Ireland.

This same number has been noticed by two earlier chronologers, Marcus Anchoreta, A.D. 647; and Nennius, A.D. 858; who both date the arrival of the Scoti in Ireland, "1002 years after the passage of the Red Sea by the Israelites, in which the Egyptians were drowned." O'Conor, Proleg. ii. pp. 15, 45. The identity of the number, 1002, proves the mistake in the reference to the exode of the Israelites, instead of to the Christian era; which depresses the arrival of the Scoti five centuries too low. For Coemhain reckons the exode 502 years after the birth of Abraham, or B.C. 1502; from which subtracting 1002 years, the arrival of the Scoti would be reduced to B.C. 500; or, following Usher's date of the Deluge, B.C. 1491, O'Conor reduces it still lower, to B.C. 489.—Proleg. ii. p. 45. Upon the superior authority of Coemhain therefore, as a chronologer, we are warranted to rectify this important error of Nennius, and Marcus Anchoreta, which even Dr. O'Conor has failed to correct; not adverting to the foregoing inference from Coemhain. But he has happily furnished himself the materials for proving the error.

agrees with sacred and profane history: for Joshua, whose administration began B. C. 1608, according to Hales's chronology, notices "the strong city of Tyre," Josh. xix. 29, which maintained its independence even in David's days, 2 Sam. xxiv. 7; and in Solomon's, 1 Kings ix. 11—14. And Herodotus, that inquisitive traveller and intelligent historian, who visited Tyre about B.C. 448, saw there the temple of the Thasian Hercules; and another erected to him by the Phenicians at Thasus itself, an island on the coast of Thrace, while they were engaged in search of Europa, the daughter of Agenor, king of Tyre, who had been carried off by some Greeks. An event, says Herodotus, which happened five generations before the Grecian Heracles, the son of Amphitryon, B. ii. § 44; who flourished about 900 years before he wrote, § 145, or about B.C. 1348; to which, adding 166 years for the five generations, we get the

---

He states, that 118 kings of the Scoti reigned, till the arrival of St. Patrick, B.C. 489 + A.D. 432 = 921 years in all, which, divided by 118, would give too short an average of reigns, only  $7\frac{9}{11}$  years a-piece; whereas the true interval, B.C. 1002 + A.D. 432 = 1434 years, would give the average of reigns, above twelve years a-piece; which he justly represents as the standard, from Patrick to Malachy ii, viz. 48 reigns in 590 years.—Proleg. ii. p. 45.

rape of Europa about B.C. 1514. But the deification of the Thasian Hercules must have been after his death; which may make him the contemporary of Joshua, or even earlier. Herodotus relates, that the Tyrians themselves boasted of the remote antiquity of their city, founded, as they said, 2300 years before (B. ii. 44), which would carry it higher than the Deluge! The high antiquity, however, of Sidon and her daughter Tyre, was acknowledged by Xerxes king of Persia, when he invaded Greece, B. C. 480; and in a council of his naval commanders, gave precedence of rank to their kings. B. viii. § 67.

Waving the expeditions of Partholanus to Ireland in Abraham's days, and of Nemesius in Jacob's days, which O'Conor judiciously rejects as fabulous (Proleg. ii. p. 25), the third expedition was that of the Firbolgs (viri Belgæ) of the Irish annals, who established themselves in the south of Ireland, according to Coemhain, 200 years after the passage of the Red Sea, B.C. 1502—200 = B.C. 1302.

The fourth expedition of the Damnonians, Menapians, and Brigantes of Britain, accompanied by the Tuatha Du Danaan, “the diviners of Dedanim,” noticed Essay, p. 151, formed a settlement in Ireland, and conquered the Firbolgs, in the famous battle of Moy tura, or "field of the tower," in Connaught, 80 years after the arrival of the Firbolgs, or B.C. 1222.

These Tuatha Danaan appear to be described by Sir Isaac Newton, as "a sort of men skilled in the religious mysteries, arts, and sciences of Phœnicia; who accompanied the Phœnicians and Syrians, conquered by David, that fled from their country, and settled in Crete, Lybia, &c. and introduced letters, music, poetry, and the fabrication of metals, &c. under several leaders, Phoenix, Cadmus, &c.—Newton's Short Chronicle, An. B.C. 1045.

The fifth expedition of the Scoti, Gadelians, or Milesians, from Spain, under the conduct of Heber and Heremon, was in the middle of Solomon's reign, B.C. 1002,* according to Coemhain. They established themselves in Ireland, and drove the Damnonians into Connaught; a part of which was called Erros Damnoniorum by Adamnanus, in the sixth century, and still retains the name of the barony of Erris, bordering on the western ocean.

---

* "Kinea Scuit, the posterity of the Iberian Scoti, who settled in Spain, came to Ireland about a thousand years before Christ."—Charles O'Conor, Esq.—Vallancey's Essay, &c., p. 171.

A hundred years after this expedition, or B.C. 902, Tigernmach, king of Ireland, introduced the worship of idols, Crum Cruagh, &c. in addition to the former adoration of the heavenly host, or sabianism, of the primitive Druuids or Diviners.—Essay, p. 160.

The Irish annalists, Coemhain, Modudius, &c. reckoned 136 kings of Ireland to Loagaire, in the fourth year of whose reign St. Patrick came to Ireland, A. D. 432; of which number, 9 were Firbolgs, 9 Damnonians, and 118 Scoti, or Milesians. Whence it appears, that they reigned, on an average, only about twelve years a-piece (O'Conor, Proleg. ii. p. 45); and consequently, that the state of society was then unsettled and turbulent, from the shortness of their reigns, below the usual standard of 22 years.—See Hales' Chronology, Vol. I. pp. 302—305.

II.

ANCIENT PILLARS IN PALESTINE, AND ROUND
TOWERS IN IRELAND.

IN the ESSAY, p. 161, was given an account, extracted from the judicious Maundrel's Travels, of an ancient Phœnician temple, cut out of the solid rock, which he saw on the sea-coast, a little southward of Aradus, in the neighbourhood of Tripoli; and about half a mile to the southward of it, two round pillars, represented by A and B in the plate, with sepulchral monuments underneath each.

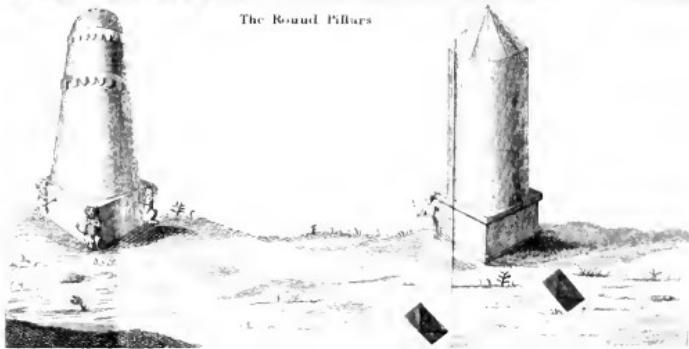

He describes the pillar (A) as thirty-three feet high. Its longest stone or pedestal was ten feet high, and fifteen square: the superstructure upon which was, first a tall stone in form of a cylinder, and then another stone cut in the shape of a pyramid.

The other pillar (B) was thirty feet two inches high. Its pedestal was in height six feet, and sixteen feet six inches square. It was supported by four lions carved one at each corner of the pedestal. The carving had been very rude at the best, but was now rendered by time much worn. The upper part reared upon the pedestal was all on the Coast of PALESTINE.

Pl. 2.

The Round Pillars

Catacombs under the Pillars.

one single stone, in fashion as is represented in the figure (B), Plate II.

Each of these pillars had under it several sepulchres, the entrances into which were on the south side. “ It cost us,” says he, “ some time and pains to get into them; the avenues being obstructed, first with briars and weeds, and then with dirt. But however we removed both these obstacles, encouraging ourselves with the hopes, or rather making ourselves merry with the fancy of hidden treasure. But as soon as we were entered into the vaults, we found that our golden imaginations ended (as all worldly hopes and projects do at last) in dust and putrifaction. But however, that we might not go away without some reward for our pains, we took as exact a survey as we could of those chambers of darkness; which were disposed in such manner as is expressed in the following figures.

“ The chambers under the pillar (A), lay as is represented in the figures (1, 2, 3, 4). Going down seven or eight steps, you come to the mouth of the sepulchre; when crawling in, you arrive in the chamber (1), which is nine feet two inches broad, and eleven feet long. Turning to the right hand, and going through a narrow passage, you come to the room (2), which is eight feet broad and ten long. In this chamber are seven cells for corpses; viz. two over against the entrance, four on the left-hand, and one unfinished on the right: these cells were hewn directly into the firm rock. We measured several of them, and found them eight feet and a half in length, and three feet three inches square. I would not infer from hence, that the corpses deposited here were of such gigantic size as to fill up such large coffins; though, at the same time, why should any men be so prodigal of their labour as to cut these caverns into so hard a rock as this was, much farther than necessity required?

"On the other side of the chamber (1) was a narrow passage seven feet long, leading into the room (3), whose dimensions were nine feet in breadth, and twelve in length. It had eleven cells of somewhat a less size than the former, lying at equal distances all round about it.

"Passing out of the room (1) foreright, you have two narrow entrances, each seven feet long, into the room (4.) This room was nine feet square: it had no cells in it like the others, nor any thing else remarkable, but only a bench cut all along its side on the left-hand. From the description of this sepulchre, it is easy to conceive the disposition of the other under the pillar (B), which is represented in the figures (5, 6). The heights of the rooms in both was about six feet; and the pillars were built each over the innermost room of the sepulchres to which it belonged ; namely, (A) over (4), and (B) over (6).

" At about the distance of a furlong from this place, we discerned another pillar, resembling this last described. It was erected likewise over a sepulchre, of which you have the delineation in the figures (7) and (8). There was this singularity observable in this last sepulchre, that its cells were cut into the rock, eighteen feet in length ; possibly to the intent, that two or three corpses might be deposited in each of them at the feet of one another. But having a long stage to Tripoli, we thought it not seasonable to spend any more time in this place, which might perhaps have afforded us several other antiquities.

" And yet for all our haste, we had not gone a mile, before our curiosity was again arrested by the observation of another tower, which appeared in a thicket not far from the way-side. It was thirty-three feet and a half high, and thirty-one feet square ; composed of huge square stones, and adorned with a handsome cornice all round at top. It contained only two rooms, one above another ; into both which there were entrances on the north side, through two square holes into the wall. The separation between both rooms, as also the covering at the top, was made not of arched work, but of vast flat stones ; in thickness four feet, and of so great an extent, that two of them in each place sufficed to spread over the whole fabric. This was a very ancient structure, and probably a place of sepulchre."—Maundrel's Journal, &c. pp. 21—23. An admirable work indeed, which well deserves the eulogy of Bishop Newton on Prophecy, Vol. I. p. 349. " Maundrel's Journal, though a little book, is yet worth a folio ; being so accurately and ingeniously written, that it may serve as a model for all writers of travels."

Curiosity is naturally led to inquiry : for what purpose, by whom, and at what time, were these extraordinary excavations made ?

I shall attempt to answer each inquiry in order.

1. That they were intended solely for human sepulchres, as imagined by Maundrel, may well be doubted. If the pillars placed over them were consecrated to the Baals, the sun and moon, as is highly probable, for the reasons mentioned in the Essay, pp. 162, 163, is it unlikely that the catacombs were destined for the sepulture of those animals whom the pagans considered as emblems of their divinities ; the bull and the heifer, the serpent, the dragon or crocodile, and the whole train of bestial gods, that disgraced the most polished nations of antiquity, the Egyptians, the Indians, &c.? The extraordinary size of some of the cells, which excited the wonder of Maundrel, so unnecessary, indeed, if designed only for the reception of human corpses, were well and adequately fitted for the sepulchres of their sacred bulls and heifers; and these, in the last catacomb especially, of eighteen feet in length, for the reception of dead crocodiles.

The Labyrinth of Egypt, which Herodotus saw and admired so highly, even more than the pyramids themselves, contained as he was told, in its subterranean chambers or vaults, which he was not permitted to enter, “the bodies of the kings who built the Labyrinth, and also of the sacred crocodiles.” B. ii. § 148. And Savary, in searching for the Labyrinth, remarks, that “amidst the ruins of the towns of Caroun, the attention is particularly fixed by several narrow, low, and very long cells, which seem to have had no other use than that of containing the bodies of the sacred crocodiles: these remains can only correspond with the labyrinth.” Beloe’s Herodot. Vol. II. p. 84, note. And it is now ascertained beyond a doubt, that the great pyramids of Geeza were the sepulchres, not merely of their kings, as Herodotus imagined, but principally of their sacred bulls, the Apis or Mnevis. The great, or first pyramid, attributed to Cheops, has been long opened, even before the time of Herodotus; but nothing is now found in the large sarcophagus of the great chamber, so unnecessarily large for the human figure. The second pyramid, attributed to Cephrenes, after having been closed for ages, and long supposed to be solid, ever since the Egyptian priests informed Herodotus, that only the pyramid of Cheops contained chambers in its interior, (B. ii. § 126), has been opened lately by M. Belzoni, an enterprizing Italian traveller, who found the great chamber, in the center of the pyramid, 46 feet 3 inches long, 16 feet 3 inches wide, and 23 feet 6 inches high; in the midst of which was a sarcophagus of granite, 8 feet long, 3 feet 6 inches wide, and 2 feet 3 inches deep, inside. The lid of it had been opened.* In it M. Belzoni observed a few bones of a human skeleton, as he supposed, belonging to Cephrenes, the reputed builder of this pyramid. Shortly after the opening of this pyramid, March 2, 1818, Major Fitzclarence, in his journey overland from India to Cairo, visited the central chamber, and brought away a few fragments of the bones in the sarcophagus; and among the rest, one, which proved to be the lower extremity of the thigh bone, where it comes in contact with the knee joint. This singular relic was presented by him to the Prince Regent, who submitted it to the inspection of that eminent surgeon, Sir Everard Home. Sir Everard, entertaining no doubt of its being part of a human skeleton, took it to the Museum of the College of Surgeons, that by adjusting it to the same part of different sized skeletons, he might be enabled to form some estimate of the comparative stature of the ancient Egyptians and modern Europeans. On a closer and more laborious inspection, however, the fragment was found to agree with none of them ; and it finally appeared, that instead of forming any part of the thigh bone of a human subject, it actually made part of that of a cow, [or bull].

---

* From M. Belzoni's researches it appears that this second pyramid had been opened, during the reign of the Sultan Ali Mahomet I. of the Saracen dynasty, from an Arabic inscription on the wall of the western side of the great chamber.

And to corroborate this curious evidence, M. Belzoni, in making researches among the ruins of Thebes in Upper Egypt, some time before, discovered a grand catacomb in the valley, known by the name of Biban el Moluk, “the tombs (or rather gates) of the king,” which extended 309 feet from the front entrance to the innermost chamber, the whole cut out of the living rock. The sides of the rock were as white as snow, and covered with paintings of well-shaped figures, al fresco, as fresh as if they had been laid on the day before the opening was made, and with hieroglyphics quite perfect. In one of the numerous chambers of this catacomb, he discovered an exquisitely beautiful sarcophagus of alabaster, nine feet five inches long by three feet nine inches wide, and two feet and an inch high, carved within and without with hieroglyphics and figures in intaglio, nearly in a perfect state, sounding like a bell, and as transparent as glass. From the extraordinary magnificence of this tomb, M. Belzoni conceives that it must be the depository of the remains of Apis; in which idea he is the more confirmed, by having found the carcass of a bull embalmed with asphaltum, in the innermost chamber.

From this, and other specimens at the temple of Ipsambul, in Nubia, above the second cataract of the Nile, this intelligent, enterprizing, and most meritorious traveller justly collected, that “the arts, as practised in Egypt, descended from Ethiopia: the style of the sculpture being in several respects superior to any thing that has yet been found in Egypt.” The whole of this interesting account is briefly extracted from the last number of the Quarterly Review, xxxvii, September 1818, in the article of Light's Travels in Egypt and Nubia, and its addendum, p. 230.

These luminous observations remove every shadow of doubt respecting the purpose for which the Palestine catacombs were made. And it is remarkable, that in the third catacomb, beside the lateral cells, 18 feet long, in the anti-chamber (7), there are two in the inner chamber (8), which appear to be twice as wide as the former. In the square tower also, noticed by him, with two chambers, an upper and a lower, cielered with enormous stones; these are of a size and cieling corresponding to the chambers of the great pyramids of Egypt; while the entrances of all placed on the north side, (which is observable also in the round towers in Ireland and elsewhere), furnish all together the strongest presumptive evidence, that all were the workmanship of some very ancient and polished people, or their colonies; declining in grandeur and magnificence, according as they diverged, in process of time, from their prime central establishment. And who that original people were, may be collected from the records of ancient nations still subsisting.

2. Herodotus observes, that though the priests attributed the building of the great pyramids to three Egyptian kings, Cheops, Cephrenes, and Mycerinus, yet the people ascribed them to a shepherd, Philitis, who, at that time, fed his cattle in those places." B. ii. § 128. And Menetho the Egyptian priest, in his dynasties, informs us, that the native Egyptians were conquered and enslaved by a nation coming from Arabia, called ΥΚ-ΣΩΣ (Uk-sōs), “King-Shepherds ;” who miserably oppressed the natives, under a dynasty of six kings of their race ; and from whom the isthmus of Suez, (Σως, or Σωες), by which they came, seem to have derived its name. And from the Vedas, or Sanscrit records of Hindustan, we learn that these invaders were the Pali, or Palli, signifying “Shepherds” in that language ; a powerful, warlike, and enterprizing Indian tribe, who invaded Egypt, and, during their dominion, are said to have raised three mountains, called Rucm-adri, “the mount of gold,” Rajat-adri, “the mount of silver,” and Retu-adri, the mount of gems ;” figuratively denoting these factitious mountains, and stupendous monuments of tyranny and ostentation, the pyramids of Geeza ; which were originally cased, or coated with yellow, white, and spotted marbles, brought from the quarries of Arabia ; until stripped by the rapacity of succeeding ages. The casing, however, of the upper part of the second pyramid, still remains entire, (as appears from M. Belzoni’s drawing of it,) about a third of the distance downwards from the summit to the base. See Wilford’s Dissertation on Egypt and the Nile, Asiatic Researches, Vol. III. p. 225, or Hales’s New Analysis of Chronology, Vol. III. p. 459.

The original settlement of this warlike, enterprizing, and roving race of “Shepherds,” may be traced to Shinaar, in Mesopotamia; whence they diverged, as from a common centre, in various directions, and formed settlements, by trade or conquest, throughout Asia, Africa, Europe, and even America; under the several denominations of Cushites or Cuthites, Indo-Scythæ, Pali, Pelasgi, Phenicians, &c. We find them in the Pali, or “Shepherds” of Asiatic Ethiopia; and the Berberi, or “Shepherds” of African Ethiopia or Abyssinia; in the plains of Sennaar in Nubia, evidently denominated from the original settlement; in the Uksos, or “King-Shepherds” of Egypt; in the Pali-sthan, or “Shepherd-land” of Palestine; in the town of Palibothra, or Pali-Putra, on the Hellespont; in the Pelasgi, of Greece and Italy; whom Homer describes as an Asiatic tribe, auxiliaries of the Trojans, coming from Larissa, on the Tigris, Iliad ii. 347; x. 429; (the site, probably, of “the great city Resen,” built by Nimrod, Gen. x. 12), and whom Virgil also represents of Lydian descent, the early colonists of Latium and Hetruria in Italy, Æneid vii. 479—602, who built the town of Philistia on the Po; and introduced the Palilia, or worship of Pales, the goddess of shepherds, Georg. iii. 1.

All these appear to have been descended from the primitive family of Cush, the eldest son of Ham, Gen. x. 6; whose descendant, Nimrod, “the rebel,” built the tower of Babel, Gen. x. 10;

the first temple consecrated to the Sabian idolatry, or worship of the “host” of heaven, the sun, moon, and stars; and the prototype, or original model, of the pyramids of Egypt, the primitive pagodas of Hindustan, and of Mexico, &c. as the primary Mithratic caves of Persia or Iran, formed by the primitive Magi, likewise appear to have given rise to the Labyrinth of Egypt, the stupendous subterranean temples of the Thebaid, and those of Elephanta, Ellore, &c. in Hindustan. See the rise and progress of the Sabian Idolatry, ingeniously traced, by that learned antiquary Faber, in his elaborate work on the Origin of Pagan Idolatry, 3 vols. 4to. 1816.

3. The Pali, Uk-sos, or ‘Shepherd-dynasty,’ conquered Egypt, about B.C. 2159, and held it 260 years; when, after a long and severe struggle, they were at length expelled by the native Egyptian powers, about B.C. 1899, and settled along the eastern coast of the Mediterranean sea; where they destroyed the native Avim, or Avites, “when they came out of Caphtor,” or lower Egypt, Deut. ii. 23; and became, and were called afterwards, “the Philistines, the remnant of the country of Caphtor,” Jer. xlvi. 4; thus preserving in their name, and in their new settlements, the remembrance of their Asiatic origin. See Hales’s Chronology, Vol. iii. pp. 448—462.

Hence we seem warranted to conclude, that these catacombs might have been formed by the Philistines, after the period of their expulsion from Egypt, B.C. 1899, if not of an earlier date.

II. The round pillars of Baal, most probably gave rise to the larger round towers, found in Ireland and elsewhere. The tower of Ardmore is here copied from a drawing by General Val lancey, in Collectanea, Vol. vi. Part I. pp. 136, 218. And I have cited in the Essay, p. 164, his decided opinion, that they were fire-towers, consecrated to the Sun, and built by the first Phoenician settlers in Ireland; of whom we may reckon the Feni an fear saoid, “the Phoenician wise man,” or Tyrian Hercules, to be the leader, about B.C. 1768, as stated in the foregoing number of this Appendix.

Some sceptics, with more pertinacity than proof, have disputed the high antiquity of these towers; and supposed that they were erected by the Danes, while they held possessions in Ireland, for two centuries, from their first piratical invasion, A.D. 797, to their final defeat at Clontarf, near Dublin, A.D. 1014.

But on the contrary, in all Scandinavia, the original country of the Danes and Ostmen, there is not a single vestige of these columnar towers. Nor do the Danish writers describe them as existing in the countries round the Baltic sea; nor state, that they were erected by Ostmen, in any of their foreign settlements or conquests. The Danes, surely, were longer in possession of a considerable portion of England than of Ireland; and yet nothing like them was ever seen therein. In Scotland, indeed, there are two: one at Brechin, and another at Abernethy: but they are smaller than the Irish, and seem to have been built after their model at a comparatively recent period.* In Ireland, at present, there are about ten of these towers to be seen, nearly entire; and the ruins and vestiges of forty more; beside others, which appear to be totally destroyed, and are only remembered to have existed. A very large and entire tower was removed, a few years ago, from the church of Downpatrick, as necessary to its enlargement and repairs: so that, in fact, these structures must have been numerously distributed over the whole island; more so, it seems, than in any other country of the same dimensions.

For these remarks we are indebted to the New Monthly Magazine, September 1818, p. 106.

---

* On the lintels of these towers there is a crucifixion sculptured, which proves that they were erected after the Christian era. But there are no signs of any such emblems on the ancient Irish towers.

III.

S. PATRICII CONFESSIO, SIVE EPISTOLA AD
HIBERNOS,

EX CODICE COTTONIANO, ANNORUM SALTEM 800,
CUM ARDMACHANO ANNORUM 1000,
COLLATA, ATQUE EDITA A CAROLO O'CONOR, S.T.D.

1. Ego Patricius peccator, rusticissimus et minimus omnium fidelium, et contemptibilissimus apud plurimos, patrem habui Calpurnium diaconum, filium quondam Potiti presbyteri, qui fuit in vico Banavan Taberniae: villulam enim prope habuit, ubi capturam dedi. Annorum eram tum fere xvi. DEUM vero ignorabam, et Hyperione in captivitate adductus sum, cum tot millibus hominum, secundum merita nostra, quia a DEO recessimus, et præcepta ejus non custodivimus, et sacerdotibus nostris inobedientes fuimus, qui nostram salutem admonebant: et DOMINUS induxit super nos iram animationis suæ, et dispersit nos in gentibus multis, etiam usque ad ultimum terræ; ubi nunc parvitas mea esse videtur inter alienigenas. Et ibi DOMINUS aperuit sensum incredulitatis meæ, ut vel sero rememorarem delicta mea; et, ut converterer toto corde ad DOMINUM DEUM meum: qui respexit humilitatem meam, et misertus est adulescentiæ* et ignorantiaæ meæ, et custodivit me antequam saperem, vel distinguerem inter bonum et malum; et munivit me et consolatus est me, ut pater filium.

2. Unde autem tacere non possum, neque expedit quidem, tanta beneficia, et tantam gratiam quam mihi (DOMINUS præstare)† dignatus est in terrâ captitatis meæ; quia hæc est retributio nostra, ut, post correptionem, ad agnitionem Domini exaltaremur, et confiteremur mirabilia ejus coram omni natione quæ est sub omni cœlo:— Quia non est alius Deus, nec unquam fuit, nec erit post hunc,‡ præter DEUM PATREM, ingenitum, sine principio, a quo est omne principium, omnia tenentem (ut diximus): et Hujus filium, JESUM CHRISTUM; quem, cum Patre scilicet, fuisse semper, testamur, ante originem seculi, spiritu-aliter apud Patrem; inenarrabiliter genitum ante omne principium; et per Ipsum facta sunt [omnia] visibilia et invisibilia; hominem factum; devictâ morte, in cœlos ad Patrem receptum; et * Adulescentiæ for adolescentiæ. In ancient MSS. before the close of the sixth century, the letter u was frequently substituted for o; epistula for epistola, &c.

† The words included between brackets, are wanting in the Cod. Armagh.

‡ Posthunc for posthac. See the translation of this Confession, SECT. VI.

*dedit Illi omnem potestatem super omne nomen, cælestium et terrestrium, et inferorum, ut omnis lingua confiteatur quia* Dominus et Deus est Jesus Christus: Quem credimus, et expectamus adventum ipsius, mox futurus Judex vivorum et mortuorum; qui reddet unicuique secundum facta sua: et infundit in nobis abunde SPIRITUS SANCTI donum, et pignus immortalitatis; qui facit credentes et obedientes ut sint filii Dei Patris, et cohæredes Christi: quem confitemur, et adoramus, UNUM DEUM IN TRINITATE SACRI NOMINIS.— Ipse enim dixit per prophetam, ‘Invoca Me in die tribulationis tuæ et liberabo te, et magnificabis Me.’ (Ps. l. 15.) Et iterum inquit, ‘Opera autem Dei revelare et confiteri, honorificum est.’ Tamen etsi in multis imperfectus sum, opto fratres et cognatos meos scire qualitatem meam, ut possint perspicere votum animæ meæ. Non ignoro testimonium Domini mei, qui in Psalmo testatur, ‘Perdes eos qui loquuntur mendacium,’ (Ps. v. 6.) et iterum, ‘Os quod mentitur occidit animam.’ (Wisd. i. 11.) Et idem Dominus in Evangelio inquit, ‘Verbum otiosum quod locuti sunt homines, reddent pro ea rationem in die judicii,’ (Matt. xii. 36.) unde autem vehementer [debueram] cum timore et tremore metuere hanc*

* Quia is generally used by Patrick in the sense of quod, “that.”

sententiam, in die illâ, ubi nemo poterit se subtrahere vel abscondere; sed omnes omnino reddituri sumus rationem, etiam minimorum peccatorum ante tribunal Christi Domini. (Job xxxiv. 22; Rom, xiv. 10. 12; 2 Cor. v. 10, 11.)

3. Quapropter, olim cogitavi [ad vos] scribere, sed usque nunc hæsitavi: Timui enim ne inciderem in linguam * hominum. Et qui non legi, sicut cæteri, qui optime, itaque jure [legerunt], et sacras literas utroque pari modo † combiberunt; et sermonem illorum ex infantia nunquam mutaverunt, sed magis ad perfectum, semper addiderunt. Nam sermo et loquela nostra [Hiberna] translata est in linguam alienam [scilicet Latinam]; sic ut facile potest probari ex salivâ † scripturæ meæ, qualiter § sum ego in sermonibus instructus, atque eruditus: quia, inquit Sapiens, ‘per linguam dignoscitur et sensus et scientia et doctrina varietatis.’ (Eccl. iv. 24.)

Sed quid prodest excusatio juxta veritatem, præsertim cum præsumptione? quatenus modo

* Linguam hominum, i. e. contumeliam, “reproach.”

† Utroque pari modo,—in the originals, as well as in the versions.

‡ Saliva scripturæ meæ—“the drivelling of my writing.”

§ Qualiter, &c.—“how little I am instructed and skilled in composition.”

ipse appeto in senectute mea, quod in juventute, quia obstiterunt (peccata mea) ut confirmarem quod ante non perlegeram. Sed quis me credit, etsi dixero? (quod ante præfatus sum) adulescens, imo pene puer imberbis, capturam dedi, antequam scirem quid peterem, vel quid vitare debueram. Unde ego hodie erubesco, et vehementer pertimeo, denudare imperitiam meam, quia disertis brevitate sermonis explicare nequeo. Sicut enim Spiritus gestit, et animus et sensus monstrat affectus. Sed si itaque datum mihi fuisset sicut cæteris, veruntamen non silerem propter retributionem: etsi forte videtar apud aliquantos, me in hoc præponere, cum mea inscitia et tardiori lingua. Sed scriptum est, ‘Linguæ balbutientes velocitir discent loqui pacem,’ (Isa. xxxii. 4.) quanto magis nos adpetere debemus, qui sumus, ut inquit, ‘epistola Christi; in salute, usque ad ultimum terræ: etsi non diserta [verba protuli] sed rata, et fortissime scripta in cordibus vestris, non atramento, sed Spiritu Dei vivi.’ (2 Cor. iii. 3.) Et iterum Spiritus testatur, ‘et rusticatio ab Altissimo creata est.’ (Ecclus. vii. 15.)

4. Unde ego primus, rusticus perfuga, indocitus scilicet, qui nescio in posterum providere:— sed scio illud certissime, quia utique priusquam humiliarer, ego eram velut lapis qui jacet in luto profundo, et venit qui POTENS EST, et in suâ misericordiâ sustulit me, et quidem scilicet sursum adlevavit, et collocavit me in summo pariete; et inde fortiter debueram exclamare, ad retribuendum quoque aliquid Domino pro tantis beneficiis ejus, hic et in æternum, quæ mens hominum æstimare non potest: unde autem admirmini, magni et pusilli, qui timetis DEUM; et vos ignari DOMINI, rhetorici ex Gallicis,* audite ergo et scrutamini. Quis me stultum excitavit de medio eorum qui videntur sapientes esse et legis periti, et potentes in sermone, et in omni re? et me quidem, detestabilem hujus mundi præ cæteris, inspiravit, si talis essem? Dummodo autem ut cum metu et reverentia, et sine querela fideliter prodessem Genti [Hibernæ] ad quam charitas CHRISTI transtulit et donavit me, in vita mea; si dignus fuero, denique, ut cum humilitate veraciter deservirem illis.

In mensura itaque fidei TRINITATIS, oportet distinguere sine reprehensione periculi, notum facere donum DEI et consolationem æternam sine timore, fiducialiter Dei nomen (nomine) ubique expandere; ut etiam post obitum meum, Gallicis relinquem fratribus,† et filiis meis [Hiber-

* These seem to be scoffers, whom he met in the course of his early travels, in Gaul.

† The Gallic monks, under Martin of Tours, and Germanus; with whom Patrick associated for many years.—See Essay, p. 148.

nis] quos ego in DOMINO baptizavi, tot millia hominum. Et non eram dignus, neque talis, ut hoc DOMINUS servulo suo concederet, post aerumnas, ac tantas moles, post captivitatem, post annos multos, in gentem illam tantam gratiam mihi donaret, quod ego aliquando in juventute mea, nunquam speravi nec cogitavi.

5. Sed postquam Hiberionem deveneram, quotidie (igitur) pecora pascebam, et frequens in die orabam; magis ac magis accedebat amor DEI et timor Ipsius, et fides augebatur, et spiritus augebatur, [adeo] ut in die una usque ad centum orationes [orabam], et in nocte, prope similiter: ut etiam in silvis et monte manebam, et ante lucem excitabar ad orationem per gelu, per pluviam, et nihil mali sentiebam, neque ulla pigritia erat in me, ut modò video, quia tunc in me SPIRITUS ferrebat.

6. Et ibi scilicet quadam nocte, in somno audivi vocem dicentem mihi, ‘Bene jejunas, cito iturus ad patriam tuam:’ Et iterum, post paululum tempus, ‘Ecce navis tua parata est.’ Et non erat prope, sed forte habebat ducenta milia passus.* Et ibi nunquam fueram, nec ibi notum quenquam de hominibus habebam.

* “Milia passus,” Irish phraseology, for millia passuum, “miles.”

Et deinde postmodum conversus sum in fugam, et intermisi hominem [Milchonem] cum quo fueram sex annis: Et veni in virtute DOMINI, qui vitam meam ad bonum dirigebat, et nihil metuebam, donec perveni ad navem illam. Et illa die quo perveni, profecta est navis de loco suo: et locutus sum, ‘ut [pecuniam non] habarem, unde navigarem cum illis:’ Et gubernatori displicuit, et acriter cum indignatione respondit, ‘Nequaquam tu nobiscum adpetas ire.’ Et cum hæc audissem, separavi me ab illis ut venirem ad tuguriolum ubi hospitabam: et in itinere cœpi orare; et antequam orationem consummarem, audivi unum ex illis fortiter exclamantem post me, ‘Veni citò, quia vocant te homines isti:’ et statim ad illos reversus sum; et cœperunt mihi dicere, ‘Veni, quia ex fide recipimus te; fac nobiscum amicitiam quo modo volueris.’ Et in illa die itaque repuli fugere, propter timorem DEI. Veruntamen, speravi ab illis ut mihi dicerunt, ‘Veni, in fide JESU CHRISTI;’ quia gentes erant.

7. Et hoc obtinui cum illis: (et protinus navigavimus). Et post triduum, terram cepimus,* et viginti octo dies, per desertum iter fecimus:

* These mariners were probably Picts, who returned to Caledonia, or the Highlands of Scotland; which were then, and are still, but thinly inhabited.—See Essay, p. 111.

et cibus defuit illis, et fames invaluit super eos. Et alia die, cœpit gubernator mihi dicere, ‘Quid, Christiane, dicis? Deus tuus magnus et omnipotens est: quare, ergo, non potes pro nobis orare, quia nos fame periclitamur? difficile est enim ut aliquem hominem unquam videamus.’ Ego enim evidenter dixi illis, ‘Convertimini ex fide, et ex toto corde, ad DOMINUM DEUM NOSTRUM, quia nihil est illi impossibile; [et orabo] ut hodie cibum mittat vobis in viam vestram, usque dum satiamini: quia ubique abundat ILLI.’ Et adjuvante Deo, ita factum est: ecce grex porcorum in viâ ante oculos nostros apparuit; et multos ex illis interfecerunt; et ibi duas noctes manserunt, bene refecti; et carne eorum relevati sunt; quia multi ex illis defecerunt, et secus viam semivivi derelicti sunt. Et post hæc, summas gratias egerunt Deo: Et ego honorificatus sum sub oculis eorum. (Et ex hoc die abundanter cibum habuerunt.) Etiam, mel silvestre invenerunt; et partem mihi obtulerunt: et unus ex illis dixit: ‘Hoc immolatitium est; Deo gratias [nostro]:’ Exinde, nihil gustavi.

8. Eadem vero nocte, eram dormiens; et fortiter temptavit me Satanas, cuius memor ero, quamdiu fuero in hoc corpore. Et cecidit super me velut saxum ingens, et nihil membrorum meorum prævalens. Sed unde mihi venit, ignoro, in spiritum, ut Heliam! vocarem: et inter hæc, vidi in cœlo solem oriri, et dum clamarem Heliam! Heliam!* [totis] viribus meis, ecce splendor solis decidit super me, et statim discussit a me omnem gravitudinem. Et credo quod a Christo Domino meo (subventus sum, et Spiritus ejus jam tunc) clamabat pro me: et spero quod sic erit in die pressuræ meæ; sicut in Evangelio inquit, (In illa die) Dominus (testatur) Non vos estis qui loquimini, sed Spiritus patris vestri qui loquitur in vobis. [Matt. x. 20.]

9. Et iterum post annos (non) multos, adhuc capturam dedi. Ea nocte prima, itaque, mansi cum illis: Responsum autem Divinum audivi, dicens mihi, ‘Duos menses eris cum illis.’ Quod ita factum est: Nocte illa sexagesima liberavit me DOMINUS de manibus eorum. Ecce in itinere providit nobis cibum, et ignem, et siccitatem, [seu lignum siccum] quotidie, donec quarto decimo die pervenimus ad homines; (sicut superius insinuavi, [cum] vigenti et octo dies per desertum iter fecimus) et ea nocte qua pervenimus ad homines, de cibo vero nil habuimus.

10. Et iterum, post paucos annos, in Britanniis eram cum parentibus meis; qui me ut filium suscepserunt ; et ex fide rogaverunt me ut vel modo, (ego post tantas tribulationes quas pertuli) nunquam ab illis discederem. Et ibi scilicet, vidi in visu, nocte, virum venientem, quasi de Hiberione, cui nomen VICTORIUS,* cum epistulis innumerabilibus : et dedit mihi unam ex illis, et legi principium epistulæ, continentem ‘ Vox Hiberionacum.’ Et dum recitabam principium epistolæ, putabam ipso momento audire vocem ipsorum qui erant juxta sylvam Focluti, quæ est prope mare occidentale : et sic exclamaverunt, quasi ex uno ore, ‘ Rogamus te, sancte puer, ut venias, et adhuc ambules inter nos.’ Et valde compunctus sum corde, et amplius non potui legere : et sic expergefactus sum. DEO gratias, quia post annos plurimos præstítit illis Dominus secundum clamorem eorum.

* Patrick seems, unconsciously perhaps, to imitate our Lord's exclamation in his agony on the cross, “Eli, Eli,” &c. which some of the by-standers mistook for Elias. Matt. xxvii. 46, 47.

Et alia nocte, nescio, DEUS scit, utrum in me, an juxta me, verbis peritissimis, quæ ego audivi et non potui intelligere, nisi ad postremum orationis, sic affatus est, qui dedit animam pro te, ipse est qui loquitur in te.† Et sic expergefactus sum gaudibundus.

* VICTORIUS appears to be used in the sense of VICTORIOSUS, “ Victorious;” corresponding to Fiech’s appellation of VICTOR ; denoting Jesus Christ.—See Essay, p. 148.

† This is the excellent reading of the Cod. Armach. The common, “ qui pro te animam posuit,” is incomplete in sense,

Et iterum vidi in me IPSUM orantem : Eteram quasi intra corpus meum : et audivi [Ipsum] super me, hoc est, super interiorem hominem, et ibi fortiter orabat gemitibus. Et inter hæc stupebam, et admirabar, et cogitabam quis esset qui in me orabat. Sed ad postremum orationis sic effatus est, ut sit SPIRITUS [cognoscere]. Et sic experrectus sum, et recordatus sum, apostolo [Paulo] dicente : ‘SPIRITUS adjuvat infirmitatem nostræ orationis : nam quid oremus sicut oportet, nescimus ; sed IPSE SPIRITUS postulat pro nobis gemitibus inenarrabilibus,’ quæ verbis exprimi non possunt. [Rom. viii. 26]. Et iterum, ‘Dominus advocatus noster, postulat pro nobis.’ [1 John ii. 1; Rom. viii. 34.]

11. Et quando temptatus sum ab aliquantis senioribus * meis, qui venerunt, et peccata mea, contra laboriosum episcopatum meum [reprobarunt] ; utique, in illo die fortiter impulsus sum ut caderem hic et in æternum. Sed DOMINUS pepercit proselyto et peregrino, propter nomen suum, benigne et valde mihi subvenit in hac conculcatione, quod in labem et in obprobrium non, male, deveni. Deum oro, ut non illis in peccatum reputetur [occasio] :† [Nam * “Senioribus,” these were, perhaps, the Scoffers, noticed § 4, or his Gallican brethren, the Monks.

† The common reading “occasioneum,” is ungrammatical and unintelligible.

post annos triginta invenerunt me, et adversus verbum [locuti sunt] quod confessus fueram, antequam essem Diaconus: [ubi,] propter anxietatem, mœsto animo insinuavi amicissimo meo,* quæ in pueritia mea, una die, gesseram, immo in una hora, quia nec dum prævalebam.—Nescio, Deus scit, si habebam tunc annos quindecim, et Deum vivum non credebam, neque ex infantia mea; sed in morte et in incredulitate mansi, donec valde castigatus sum, et in veritate humiliatus sum, a fame et nuditate; et [hoc] quotidie.—Contra, Hiberionem non sponte pergebam, donec prope deficiebam. Sed hoc potius bene mihi fuit; quia ex hoc emendatus sum a Domino: et aptavit me, ut hodie essem [id] quod aliquando longe a me erat; [nempe] ut ego curas haberem, aut satagerem, pro salute aliorum; quando tunc etiam de me ipso non cogitabam.

12. Igitur in illo die, quo reprobatus sum a memoratis supra dictis [senioribus], (ad noctem illam) vidi in visu noctis [quod] scriptum erat contra faciem meam sine honore. Et inter hæc, audivi responsum (Divinum) † dicens mihi:

* “Amicissimo meo,” probably Germanus; with whom he spent sixteen years.—Essay, p. 149.

† Responsum Divinum, &c. The obscurity of this oracular response seems to baffle all attempt at explanation. The original is probably corrupt.

‘Male vidimus faciem Dei signati nudato nomine, nec sic prædixit, male vidisti; sed male vidimus, quasi ibi se junxit, sicut dixit, ‘Qui vos tangit, tangit pupillam oculi mei.’ [Zech. ii. 8]. Idecirco gratias ago ei qui me in omnibus confortavit, ut non me impediret a profectione [in Hiberionem] quam statueram; et de meo opere quod a CHRISTO didiceram. Sed magis ex eo sensi in me virtutem non parvam; et fides mea probata est coram Deo et hominibus. Unde autem audenter dico, ‘Non me reprehendit conscientia mea, hic, et in futurum.’ [Job xxvii. 6.]

13. Testem DEUM habeo quia non sum mentitus in [his] sermonibus quos ego retuli vobis. Sed magis doleo pro amicissimo meo, cur hoc meruimus audire tale responsum, cui ego credidi etiam animam. Et comperi ab aliquantis fratribus [Gallicis] ante defensionem illam,—quòd ego non interfui, nec in Britanniis eram—nec a me orietur ut et ille in mea absentia pro me pulsat: etiam mihi ipse ore suo dixerat, ‘Ecce dandus tu es ad gradum episcopatus’—quòd non eram dignus. Sed unde venit illi postmodum, ut coram cunctis bonis et malis, et me publice dehonestaret, [ob id] quod ante, sponte et lætius indulserat? Et DOMINUS qui major omnibus est*— satis dico.

---

* There is a chasm here, which cannot be supplied.

Sed tamen non debo abscondere donum Dei,
quod largitus est nobis in terra captivitatis meæ.
Quia tunc fortiter inquisivi Eum, et ibi inveni
Illum, et servavit me ab omnibus iniquitatibus.
Sic credo, propter inhabitantem SPIRITUM EJUS;
qui operatus est usque in hanc diem in me auden- *ter rursus. Sed scit Deus, si mihi homo effatus* fuisset, forsitan tacuisse propter charitatem
CHRISTI. Unde ergo indefessam gratiam agam
DEO MEO, qui me fidelè servavit in die tempta- tionis meæ; ita ut hodie confidenter efferam illi sacrificium, ut hostiam viventem, animam meam
CHRISTO DOMINO MEO, qui me servavit ab om- nibus angustiis meis: ut et dicam, Quis ego sum,
DOMINE, vel quæ est vocatio mea, quia mihi tantam divinitatem cooperuisti? ita ut hodie in gentibus constanter exultarem, et magnificarem nomen tuum ubique fuero; necnon in secun- dis, sed etiam in pressuris: ut quiequid mihi evenerit, sive bonum sive malum, æqualiter debo suscipere, et DEO gratias semper agere, qui mihi
ostendit, ut indubitatem Eum sine fine crede- rem, et qui me audierit; [ita] ut ego inscius sim in novissimis diebus, hoc opus tam pium et tam
mirificum adire aggrederer; ita ut imitarer quo- piam illos, quos ante DOMINUS jam olim præ- *dixerat, prænunciatores* Evangelium suum in*

---

* The common reading “prænunciaturum,” as O’Conor observes, is ungrammatical; for which he judiciously substitutes testimonium omnibus gentibus ante finem mundi.

 [Matt. xxiv. 14.] Quod ita ergo (ut vidimus itaque) suppletum est. Ecce testes sumus, quia Evangelium prædicatum est usque ubi nemo ultra est.

14. Longum autem est per singula enarrare laborem meum, vel per partes. Breviter dicam qualiter piissimus DEUS de servitute [me] sæpe liberavit; ex duodecim periculis, quibus periclitata est anima mea, præter insidias multas: et quæ verbis exprimere non valeo, nec et injuriam legentibus faciam. Sed dum Authorem habeo qui novit omnia antequam fiunt, (ut me pauperculum pupillum) ideo tamen responsum Divinum creberrime admonuit, Unde mihi hæc sapientia quæ in me non erat, qui nec 'numerum dierum,' [Ps. xc. 12.] *noveram, neque DEUM sapiebam? *Unde mihi, postmodum, donum tam magnum, tam salubre, DEUM agnoscere, vel diligere?—sed ut patriam et parentes [non]* amitterem, et munera multa mihi offerebantur, prænunciatiros. The Irish transcribers of the Confession seem to have been ignorant of Latin.

* The insertion of non, is necessary to make sense of the passage: his parents were anxious that Patrick should not quit them and his country any more; as he mentioned before, § 10; and his mission to Ireland offended some of his older brethren (the Gallican monks,) as noticed § 11, 12.—aliquantos instead of aliquantis, the common reading.

cum fletu et lachrymis ; et offendit illos ; [scilicet parentes] necnon, contra votum, aliquantos de senioribus meis. Sed, gubernante D<sup>o</sup>o, nullo modo consensi, nec acquievi illis: non mea gratia [erat], sed D<sup>e</sup>us, qui vicit in me, et restitit illis omnibus, ut ego venirem ad Hibernas gentes evangelium prædicare et ab incredulis contumelias preferre ; ut haurirem opprobrium peregrinationis meæ, et persecutions multas usque ad vincula ; et ut darem ingenuitatem * meam pro utilitate aliorum :—et si dignus fuero, promptus sum ut etiam animam meam incunctanter et libentissime pro nomine E<sup>s</sup>us ; et ibi opto impendere eam usque ad mortem, si D<sup>ominus</sup> mihi indulgeret : quia valde debitor sum D<sup>eo</sup>, qui mihi tantam gratiam donavit, ut populi multi per me in Deum renascerentur, et postmodum consummarentur ; et, ut clerici ubique illis ordinarentur, ad plebem nuper venientem ad credulitatem,† quam sumpsit Dominus ab extremis terræ. Sicut olim promiserat per prophetas : ('Ad Te gentes venient ab extremis terræ, et dicent) Sicut falsa comparaverunt patres nostri idola, et non est utilitas in eis.' [Jer. xvi. 19.]

* Ingenuitatem meam, "my freedom, or liberty." Patrick says, 'ingenuus fui secundum carnem.'—Epist. ad Coroticum.

† Credulitatem—fidem Christianam, "the belief or faith of Christ."

Et iterum, “Posui Te lumen in Gentibus, ut sis in salutem, usque ad extremum terræ.” [Isa. xlix. 6.] Et ibi volo expectare promissum Ipsius, qui utique nunquam fallit; sicut in Evangelio pollicetur: ‘Venient ab oriente et occidente, (et) recumbent cum Abraham, et Isaac, et Jacob:’ [Matt. viii. 11.] sicut credimus ab omni mundo venturi sunt credentes.

15. Idcirco oportet bene et diligenter piscari; sicut Dominus præmonet, dicens, ‘Venite post me, et faciam vos fieri piscatores hominum.’ [Matt. iv. 19.] Et iterum dicit per prophetas, ‘Ecce Ego mittam piscatores et venatores multos,’ dicit DOMINUS, &c. [Jer. xvi. 16.] Unde autem valde oportebat retia nostra tendere, ita ut multitudo copiosa, et turba Deo caperetur; et ubique essent Clerici qui baptizarent populum indigentem et desiderantem: Sicut Dominus in Evangelio admonet, et docet; dicens, ‘Euntes ergo docete omnes gentes, baptizantes eos in nomine PATRIS, et FILII, et SPIRITUS SANCTI; (Docentes eos observare omnia quæcunque mandavi vobis: et ecce Ego vobiscum sum omnibus diebus, usque ad consummationem seculi.)’ [Matt. xxviii. 19, 20.] Et iterum dicit, ‘Euntes ergo in mundum universum prædicate evangelium omni creaturæ: qui crediderit et baptizatus fuerit, salvus erit; qui vero non crediderit, condemnabitur.’ [Mark. xvi. 15, 16.]

Et iterum, ‘Prædicabitur hoc evangelium regni in universo mundo, intestimonium omnibus gentibus, et tunc veniet finis.’ [Matt. xxiv. 14.] Et iterum Dominus per prophetam prænuncians, inquit: ‘Et erit in novissimis diebus, dicit Dominus, effundam de spiritu meo super omnem carnem; et prophetabunt filii vestri et filiæ vestræ; et filii vestri visiones videbunt, et seniores vestri somnia somniabunt: Et quidem super servos meos, et super ancillas meas in diebus illis effundam de Spiritu meo, et prophetabunt.’ [Joel ii. 28, 29.] Et in Hosea dicit, ‘*Vocabo non plebem meam, plebem meam, et non misericordiam consecutam, misericordiam consecutam; et erit in loco ubi dictum est, non plebs mea vos, ibi* vocabuntur filii Dei vivi.*’ [Hos. i. 10; ii. 23.]

16. Unde autem Hiberione, qui nunquam notitiam Dei habuerunt, nisi idola et immunda usque nunc coluerunt; quomodo, nuper facta est plebs DOMINI? et filii DEI nuncupantur?—Fili Scottorum, et filiæ regulorum, Monachi, et virginis CHRISTI esse videntur.—Et etiam una benedicta Scotta [Brigida]† genitiva nobilis, pulcherrima, adulta erat, quam ego baptizavi.

* Instead of the common reading ubi, the context requires ibi; as contrasted with the preceding ubi.

† St. Bridget is here understood, and described; as remarked by Mabillon, O'Conor, Rerum, &c. Proleg. i. p. 106.

Et post paucos dies, unâ causâ venit ad nos [Brigida], insinuavit nobis [se] responsum [Divinum] accepisse a Nuntio Dei; et monuit etiam, ut esset virgo Christi, et ipsa Deo proximaret: Deo gratias. Sexta ab hac die optime ac avidissime arripuit illud: [ex eo] quod etiam omnes virgines Dei ita hoc faciunt, non sponte patrum earum, sed persecutionem patiuntur, et inproperia* falsa a parentibus suis: et nihilo minus, plus augetur numerus, et de genere nostro qui ibi nati sunt, nescimus numerum eorum, præter viduas et continentes. Sed et illæ maxime laborant, quæ servitio† detinentur; usque ad terrores et minas assidue perseverant. Sed Dominus gratiam dedit multis ex ancillis meis, nam sive tantum [patiantur], tamen fortiter imitantur [cæteras].

Unde autem, etsi voluero, [possim] amittere illas? Et, ut pergere in Britannias, et libentissime, paratus eram, quasi ad patriam et parentes; non id solum, sed [paratus] eram, usque Gallias, visitare fratres; et, ut viderem faciem * Inproperia, an antiquated term, signifying “nick-names, reproaches.”—Plautus.

† He probably alludes to those of his Irish converts, who had been made captives by Coroticus, and his allies, the apostate Irish and Picts.

*Sanctorum* DOMINI MEI, [optabam]; scit Deus quod valde optabam: sed alligatus Spiritu [non possum omittere illas]; qui mihi protestatur, si hoc fecero, ut futurum reum me esse designat; et timeo perdere laborem quem inchoavi, [abeundo]. Et non Ego, [ita sentio], sed CHRISTUS DOMINUS; qui me imperavit, ut venirem [in Hiberionem; imperavit quoque, me futurum] esse cum illis residuum ætatis meæ: Si Dominus voluerit, et custodierit me ab omni via mala, ut non peccem coram Illo, [sicut sperare] † hoc debueram, sed memet ipsum non credo, quamdiu fuero ‘in hoc corpore mortis;’ [Rom. vii. 24.] quia fortis est [Satanas] qui cotidie‡ nititur subvertere me a fide, et a proposita castitate, usque in finem vitæ meæ, CHRISTO, Domino meo: Sed ‘caro inimica semper trahit ad mortem,’ [Rom. viii. 6.] id est ad illecebras illicite perficiendas. Et ‘scio ex parte,’ [1 Cor. xiii. 12.] quare vitam perfectam non egi, sicut et cæteri credentes. Sed confiteor DOMINO MEO, et non mentior, ex quo cognovi Eum, a* * Sanctorum scil. Romanorum, the Romish monks, with whom he resided in Italy.—See Epist. ad Coroticum and Fiech's Poem, stanza 6.

† This insertion of “sicut sperare,” instead of the common reading, “spero,” seems to be necessary, to reconcile the text to sense and grammar.

‡ Cotidie, frequently, for Quotidie.

juventute mea crevit in me amor DEI, et timor Ipsius ; [adeo] ut usque nunc, favente Domino, fidem servavi.

17. Rideat autem et insultet qui voluerit ; ego non silebo, neque abscondam signa et mirabilia quæ mihi a DOMINO ministrata sunt, ante multos annos quam fuerant quasi, ‘qui novit omnia,’ etiam ‘ante tempora secularia.’ [Rom. viii. 29 ; Matt. xxv. 34.] Unde autem debuero sine cessatione Deo gratias agere, qui sæpe indulxit insipientiæ meæ, et de loco non in uno quoque, ut non mihi vehementer irasceretur ; qui adjutor datus sum [Hibernis] et non cito adquievi, secundum quod mihi ostensum fuerat, et sicut SPIRITUS suggerebat. Et misertus est mihi DOMINUS in milia milium, quia vidit in me quod paratus eram, sed quod ego * pro his nesciebam de statu meo quid facerem : quia multi hanc legationem prohibebant ; et jam inter se ipsos, post tergum meum, narrabant et dicebant, ‘ iste, quare se mittit in periculum inter hostes, qui DOMINUM non noverunt ? ’ non ut causâ malitiæ, sed, non sapiebat illis, sicut (ego ipse testor) intellexi, propter rusticitatem meam. Et non cito agnovi gratiam quæ tunc erat in me ; nunc [autem] me capit, quod ante [capuisse] debueram. Nunc ergo, simpliciter insinuavi fratribus et conservis meis [Gallicis] ; qui mihi crediderunt. Propter quod, prædixi, et prædico, ad roborandam fidem vestram : Utinam et vos imitemini ! majora et potiora faciatis. Hæc erit gloria mea : quia ‘filius sapiens gloria patris est.’ [Prov. x. 1 ; xvii. 6.]

* Ego, here, seems preferable to the common reading mihi, which is ungrammatical.

18. Vos scitis, et DEUS, qualiter apud vos conversatus sum a juventute mea, et fide veritatis, et in sinceritate cordis : etiam ad gentes illas inter quas habito, ego fidem illis præstavi (præstiti) et præstabo. DEUS scit, [quod ego] neminem illorum circumveni, nec [circumvenire] cogito ; propter D<sup>B</sup>UM, et Ecclesiam Ipsius : ne excitem illis et nobis omnibus persecutionem, et ne per me blasphemaretur nomen DOMINI : quia scriptum est, ‘Væ homini, per quem nomen DOMINI blasphematur, [Matt. xxvi. 24 ; Rom. ii. 20.] Nam etsi imperitus sum in omnibus, tamen conatus sum quippiam servare me et fratribus Christianis, et virginibus Christi, et mulieribus religiosis, quæ mihi ultronea munuscula donabant, et super altare reddebat ex ornamentis suis ; et iterum reddebam illis : et adversus me scandalizabantur, cur hoc faciebam : sed ego, propter spem perennitatis, ut me in omnibus caute propterea conservarem, ita ut me in aliquo titulo infideli non caperent, vel ministerium servitutis meæ ; nec, etiam in minimo, incredulis locum darem infamare sive detrectare. Forte

autem,*—quando baptizavi tot milia hominum, speraverim ab aliquo illorum vel dimidium scriptulae? † dicite mihi et reddam vobis. Aut, quando ordinavit DOMINUS clericos, per modicitudinem meam et ministerium, [annon] gratis distribui illis? ‘Si poposci ab aliquo illorum vel pretium calceamenti mei, dicite adversus me, et reddam vobis.’ [Gen. xiv. 23; 1 Sam. xii. 32.]

19. Magis ergo impendi pro vobis [quam] ut me caperet. Et inter vos, et ubique, pergebam, causâ vestrâ, [non medâ] in multis periculis etiam usque ad extremas partes, ubi nemo ultra erat, et ubi nunquam aliquis pervenerat qui baptizaret, aut clericos ordinaret, aut populum consummareret; donante DOMINO, diligenter et libentissime pro salute vestra, omnia generavi. Interim præmia dabam Regibus, propter quod dabam mercedem [fidei] filiis ipsorum, qui mecum ambulant; et [primò] nihil comprehendenterunt me cum comitibus meis.‡—Et illa die avidissime cupiebant interficere me, sed tempus nondum venerat: Et omnia quæcunque nobis invenerunt, rapuerunt

* There seems to be a chasm here, referring to the objection, that Patrick was influenced by mercenary motives to undertake the mission to Ireland.

† Dimidium scriptulae, “the smallest remuneration.”

‡ Here seems to be a chasm—that they apprehended, or seized him, afterwards, though not at first.

*illa, et meipsum ferro vinxerunt. Et quarto decimo die absolvit me DOMINUS de potestate eorum, et quicquid nostrum fuit, redditum est nobis, propter DEUM, et necessarios amicos quos ante providimus. Vos autem experti estis quantum ego erogavi illis (Brehonibus),* qui judicabant per omnes regiones quas frequentius visitabam. Censeo enim non minimum pretium quindecim hominum distribui illis, ita ut me fruamini, et ego semper vobis fruar in DEUM: non me pœnitet, nec satis est mihi; adhuc impendo, et super impendam: Potens est DOMINUS, ut det mihi postmodum ut meipsum impendam pro animabus vestris—Ecce testem DEUM invoco in animam meam, quia non mentior; neque ut sit occasio adulationalis vel avaritiæ (scripsi) vobis, neque ut honorem sperarem vestram. Sufficit enim mihi honor qui non (videtur, sed corde creditur, fidelis autem qui promisit, nunquam) mentitur. Sed video jam in præsenti seculo me supra modum exaltatum a DOMINO: Et non, eram dignus neque talis ut hoc mihi præstaret, cum scio (certissime, quod mihi) melius convenit paupertas et calamitas quam deliciæ et divitiæ. Sed et*

* The Brehons were the Irish Judges, who dispensed justice, and imposed fines, which they called eric; and seems to be understood by pretium quindecim hominum, and præmia regibus, before.

'CHRISTUS DOMINUS pauper fuit pro nobis,'
 [2 Cor. viii. 9.]

20. Ego vero miser et infelix, et si opes voluero, jam non habeo ; neque meipsum judico, quia quotidie spero aut internacionem, aut circumveniri, aut redigi in servitutem, sive occasionem cujuslibet. Sed nihil horum vereor, propter promissa cœlorum ; quia jactavi meipsum in manus DEI OMNIPOTENTIS, qui ubique dominatur : sicut propheta dicit, 'Jacta cogitatum tuum in DEUM, et ipse te nutriet.' [Psal. Iv. 22 ; 1 Pet. v. 7.] Ecce nunc commendo animam meam fidelissimo Domino meo, pro quo, legatione fungor in ignorantia mea. Sed quia 'personam non accipit,' et elegit me ad hoc officium, ut unus sim de suis minimis minister : 'Unde autem retribuam illi, pro omnibus quæ retribuit mihi ?' [Ps. cxvi. 12.] Sed quid dicam vel quid promittam Domino meo ? Quia nihil video, nisi [quod] ipse mihi dederit : sed scrutabor corda et renes, quia satis et nimis cupio, et paratus eram ut donaret 'mihi bibere calicem ejus,' sicut indulxit cæteris amantibus se. [Matt. xx. 23.]

21. Quapropter non contingat mihi a Deo meo, ut unquam amittam plebem suam, quam adquisivi in ultimis terræ. Oro Deum ut det mihi perseverantium, et dignetur ut reddam [me] Illi testem fidelem, usque ad transitum meum, propter Deum meum. Et si aliquid boni unquam imitatus sum, propter Deum meum quem diligo, peto illum det mihi, ut cum illis proselitis, et captivis pro nomine suo, effundam sanguinem meum; etsi ipse etiam caream sepulturâ, aut miserrime cadaver per singula membra dividatur canibus, aut bestiis asperis, aut volucres cœli comedent illud! Certissime reor, si mihi hoc incurrisset, lucratus sum animam cum corpore meo; quia sine ulla dubitatione, in die illa, resurgemus in claritate Solis, [Daniel xii. 3; Matt. xiii. 43.] hoc est, in gloria Christi Jesu Redemptoris nostri, filii Dei vivi, [Rom. ix. 26.], ‘cohæredes Christi, et conformes futuræ imagini Ipsi⁹:’ [Rom. viii. 17, 29]. Quoniam ‘ex Ipso et per Ipsum, et in Ipso, regnaturi sumus.’ [Rom. xi. 36; 1 Cor. viii. 6; Rom. v. 17; 2 Tim. ii. 12; Rev. v. 12.] Nam sol iste quam videmus, Deo jubente, propter nos quotidie oriter; sed nunquam regnabit, neque permanebit splendor ejus: sed et omnes qui adorant eum, in pænam miserabilem devenient. Nos autem credimus et adoramus SOLEM VERUM CHRISTUM, [Mal. ix. 2.] qui nunquam interibit; neque [interibit] qui facilit voluntatem Ipsius, sed manebit in æternum, quo modo et CHRISTUS manebit in æternum: qui regnat cum DEO PATRE OMNIPOTENTE, et cum SPIRITU SANCTO ante secula, et nunc, et per omnia secula seculorum. AMEN.

[P.S.] Ecce iterum iterumque breviter expōnam verba confessionis meæ [§ 2.] Testificor in veritate, et in exultatione cordis, ‘coram Deo et sanctis Angelis ejus,’ [I Tim. v. 21.] quia nunquam habui aliquam occasionem, præter Evangelium et promissa illius, ut unquam *redderem ad Gentem illam** [Hibernam], unde prius vix evaseram.

Sed precor credentibus et timentibus Deum, quicunque dignatus fuerit inspicere vel recipere hanc scripturam, quam Patricius peccator, (inductus silicet) Hiberione conscripsit;—ut nemo unquam dicat, quod meā ignorantia [factum est], si aliquid pusillum ego vel demonstraverim secundum Dei placitum: sed arbitramini, et verissime credatur, quod donum Dei fuisse. Et hæc est Confessio mea, antequam moriar.

This curious and valuable “Epistle of St. Patrick” contains an admirable “Confession” of Faith in the HOLY TRINITY, drawn by the masterly hand of this illustrious Father in Christ (1 Cor. iv. 15.) with which it begins § 2, and ends § 21; and after an interesting account of the early occurrences of his life, it details the pious and disinterested motives of his mission to Ireland in obedience to a heavenly call; and concludes with an animated vindication of his conduct throughout. It was addressed “to his Irish” converts, and chiefly to those of the monastic orders, which he founded in Ireland. It was also addressed (§ 4) to his former associates, the Gallican Monks, under Germanus, with whom he spent much time, during his long travels of thirty years, before he could prevail on himself to undertake this arduous mission, or overcome their remonstrances. Upon their account, we may presume, it was written in Latin, because they did not understand the Irish tongue. It is very obscure; partly on account of his long disuse of Latin, during his entire residence of sixty years in Ireland;* as may be collected from his persuasion of Christ’s command, that “he should go thither, and spend the remainder of his life there,” (§ 16); and partly, from the ignorance of transcribers, unacquainted with Latin, who have in many places irretrievably injured the sense by their blunders. In some, * Joceline, therefore, and his other monkish historians, seem to be mistaken, in their accounts of St. Patrick’s travels to Rome, &c. during his mission, to make a report thereof to the Pope, and to visit his friends.

* The common text, “ut unquam redderem agentem illam,” is inexplicable. I have substituted O’Conor’s ingenious conjectural emendation; and dropped the superfluous word, autem, in the next clause

---

however, I have ventured to supply chasms, by inserting explanatory words from conjectural criticism, derived from the consideration of the argument, and of the context; which I have included between brackets [ ], to distinguish them from Dr. O'Conor's, which are marked, in his edition, by hooks ( ).

I have also noticed the numerous references to scripture throughout, with which our apostle was intimately conversant; quoting more, however, from the spirit, and general tenor of holy writ, than from the letter, either of the original, or of the Greek and Latin versions, current in his time: a latitude of quotation, which renders it difficult in some places to find out the particular passages he had in view; especially where he quotes from memory, and departs from the versions, and accommodates scripture, by way of illustration, to his argument:—as in Eccl. vii. 15, “Hate not laborious work, and husbandry, which the Most HIGH hath ordained;” instead of ‘husbandry, or rural labour,’ (which is the meaning of “rusticatio,” in the Latin Vulgate, and γεωργία, in the Greek text of the Septuagint version) he turns it into an apology for his own “rusticity,” want of learning, or homeliness of speech, and writing, (§ 3). Some additional light also, I trust, is thrown on the obscurity of the Epistle, by a correcter punctuation throughout;

and by marking the emphatic words and passages in italics; and dividing it into sections, for greater ease of reference. But a perfect elucidation is not to be looked for at the present day. Enough, however, has, I hope, been done, to rescue the spotless character of our illustrious apostle from the fabulous misrepresentations of his superstitious admirers, as well as the objections of his sceptical scoffers; the former disgracing his mission, the latter denying even his existence.

---

IV.

FIECH'S IRISH POEM;

OR,

PANEGLYRIC ON ST. PATRICK.

Republished by Dr. O'CONOR, Proleg. I. p. 90.From the very ancient Donegal MSS.

1.

GENAIR Patraic i Nemthur,
Asseadh adfet hi Scelaibh,
Macan se m-bliadhan decc,
An tan do breth fo dheraibh.

2.

Succat a ainm hi trubh rad :
Cid a athair ba fisse,
Mac Calpuirn, mic Otidhe,
Ho deochain Odisse.

3.

Bai se bliadhna hi foghnamh :
 (Maise doine nis tomledh).
Batar ile Ceathraighe,*
Ceathar trebbe dia forgnad.

* Cothraighe, Colgan: signifies, according to Lynch, a “supporter or protector;” and is so rendered by him, “They were all by him supported;” but the reading Ceathraighe is preferable, as immediately relating to Ceathar, “four.”

4.

As best VICTOR fri gniadh
Milcon : ‘ teseadh for tonna.’
 Forruibh a chois for sind leic,
 Maraiddh dia aes ni bronna.

5.

Do saidh tar Ealpa uile,
 De mhuir, ba hamhra reatha,
 Conid fargaibh la German,
 An deas an deisciort Leatha.

6.

An innsibh mhara Toirrian,
 Ainis indibh, ad rimhe,
 Legais Canoin la Gearman,
 Is eadh ad fiadhad line.

7.

Do cum n-Erenn dod fetis,
 Aingil De hi fithisi
 Menic it chithe ifisibh
 Dos nicef a rithisi.

8.

Ropo cobhair don d-Erinn,
 Tichta Patraic for Oclad ;
 Ro clos cian son angarma
 Macraidihi caille Fochlad.

9.

Gadhadar co tisseadh in noebl,
Ar a nimthisedh lethu,
Ar a tintarad o cloean
Tuatha h-Erenn do bheathu.

10.

Tuatha h-Erenn tairchantais :
 ‘ Dos nicfead sithlaith nua,
 Meraid coti aniartaige :—
 Bidh fas tir Temhrak.’

11.

A Druidh ar *Laoghaire
Tichta Patraic in Cheiltis ;
Ro firad ind aitsine,
Inna FLATHA as beirtis.

12.

Ba leir Patraic combebha,
Ba sabh innarba cloeni,
Ised tuargaib a eva
Suas de sech trebha doeani.

13.

Immuin, agas Apocalyps,
Na tri coicath nos canad,
Pritchad, batsed; arniged,
De molad DI’ ni anad.

14.

Ni con gebed ruact sine
 Do fess aidche h illinibh,
 For nim consena a righe,
 Pritcais fri DE in dindaib.

15.

Hi Slan, tuaith Benna Bairche,
 Nis Gebhedh tart na lia,
 Canadh ced Psalm, cech naidche,
 Do RIGH AINGEL fo gnia.

16.

Foidh for leic luim iaram
 Ochus culche fliuch imme,
 Ba coirthé a ritha dart,
 Ni leic a corp i timme.

17.

Pritcadh soscela do cach,
 Do gnith mor fearta i leathu,
 Iccaid luscu, la trusca,
 Mairbh dos fuisceadh do beathū.

18.

Padraic priotcais do Scotu-ibh,
 Ro cheas mor seath illeathu,
 Immi co tisat do brath,
 In each dos fuc do beathu.

19.

*Meic Eimhir, meic Erimoïn Lotar hiule la Cisel,
 Fos rolaic in t Armchosal,
 Isin mor cathe n isel.*

20.

*Conda tanic in t Apstal
 Do faith gid gaethe dene ;
 Pritchais tri fichte bliadhna
 Croich CRIST do tuatha-ibh Fene.*

21.

*For thuait h-Erenn bai temhèl, Tuatha adhorta Idhla ;
 Ni craitshed in fhir DEACHT, Inna TRINOITE fire.*

22.

*In Ardmacha fil righi,
 Is cian do reraght Emhain ;
 Is cell mor Dun-leith-glaisse,
 Nim dil cidh distrubh Temhair.*

23.

*Patraic dia m boi illobhra
 Ad cobhra dol do Mache ;
 Do lluidh Aingel ara cheann,
 For sed a meadhon laithe.*

24.

Do faith fa dheas do VICTOR,
 (Ba he arid ralastur.)
Lassais immuine imbai,
Asan teain ad galastar.

25.

As bert ordan de Mache
Do CRIST atlaigthe buide,
Do chum nimhe mor raga,
Ro ratha duit do guide.

26.

Immón do roeghu it biu
Bid luirech didin do chach,
Immut illathiu mesa,
Re gait fir h-Erend do brath.

27.

Anais Tasac dia aes,
An tan do bert Comain do
As bert mos n icfead Patraic,
Briathra Tasaigh nir bu go.

28.

Samh aigis crich fri aidhi,
Ar na cate les oca,
Co chenn bliadhna bai soilsi :
Ba he sithlaithe soda.

29.

In cath fechta im *Bethoron,
Fri tuaith Canan la mac *Nun,
Assuith in grian fri *Gabaon
Asseadh at fet *Littre duin.

30.

Huair assuith la *Hiessue
In grian, fri bas ina cloen
Ciasu threibrech be huisse
Soillse fri betsect na Noebh ?

31.

Clerich Erend dollotar
Dairi Patraic as cech set,
Son in ceatuil fos rolaic,
Con tuil cach uadhibh for set.

32.

Anim Patraic fria corp
Is iar saethaibh ro scarad,
Angeil *De i cet aidhce
Arid fethis cen anadh.

33.

In tan con hualai *Patraic,
Ad ella in *Patraic n aile,
Is malle connucc aibhset,
Do chum h Isu mac *Maire.

34.

*Patraic cen airde nuabhair
 Ba mor do maith ro meanuir,
 Bith in gellsine meic Maire
 Ba sen gaire in genuir.*

---

This Poem is ascribed to Fiech, the disciple of St. Patrick, by Colgan, Usher, Ware, Nicholson, &c. and affords internal evidence of its high antiquity, in the old terms found therein peculiar to Druidism, which became obsolete after the introduction of Christianity, and its establishment by our Apostle. Such terms as Cissel, “the Devil,” and Armchosal, “Satan,” stanz. 19: Noeb, “a saint,” or rather a prophet or diviner, from the Hebrew Nob, “prophecy,” or Nabi, a “prophet,” stanz. 9 and 30: Fuisceadh, he awaked, or restored to life, 17: mos n icfead, 27: Samh aigis, 28, &c. as remarked by Colgan, and Dr. O'Conor, Proleg. i. p. 89.

The text of the Donegal MSS. agrees nearly throughout with Colgan's. By the help of the latter, a few errata in O'Conor's edition are corrected: as Cris for Christ, 20; glaisso for glaisse, 22, &c.

The number of Latin words in this Poem are considerable, when disembarassed from their Irish orthography. Anim, anima; corp, corpus,

32 : bheatha, vita, 9 : nua, nova, 10 : De, Deus, son, sonus, 8 : mhara, mare ; righ Aingel, rex Angelorum, 15 : righe, regnum, 14 : luscu, lus-cus, 17 : fhir Deacht, vera Deitas, 21 : ordan, ordo, 25 : teainad, tenebant, 24 : cen, sine, 32 :
luirech, lorica, 26 : tri, tres, 20 : ceathar, qua-tuor, 3 : se, sex ; decc, decem, 1, &c.

---

FIECHI CARMEN VETUS HIBERNICUM, &amp;c.

*Ex Codice vetustissimo Dungallense Latine redditum
a CAROLO O'CONOR, S.T. D.*

1.

NATUS est Patricius Nemturri,
Ut refertur in narrationibus,
Juvenis fuit sex annorum decem
Quando ductus sub vincula.

2.

Succat ejus nomen in tribubus dictum,
Quis ejus pater, sit notum,
Filius fuit Calpurnii, filii Otidi, Nepos diaconi Odissi.

3.

Fuit sex annis in servitute,
( Escis hominum [Gentilium] non vescebat)
Fuit ei nomen adoptivum Ceathraighe,
Quatuor tribubus quia inserviit.

4.

Dixit VICTOR (ei) servo
Milconis, ‘ Iret trans fluctus,’ Posuit suos pedes supra saxum,
Manent exinde ejus vestigia.

5.

Profectus est trans Alpes omnes,
Trans maria; fuit felix expeditio;
Et remansit apud Germanum,
In Australi parti australis Lethaniæ.*

6.

Insulis maris Tyrrheni,
Mansit in iis, ut dixi :
Legit Canones apud Germanum :
Et ita testantur Ecclesiæ.

7.

In Hiberniam profectus est,
Angelis Dei vocantibus,
Sæpe videbat in somniis,
Quod veniret iterum.

* Colgan renders Leatha, “Latium,” or the southern part part of Italy bordering on the Tyrrhenian sea; the isles of which were then inhabited by several orders of Monks; among whom Patrick read the Canon of Scripture with Germanus; before Germanus was made bishop of Auxerre, in Armorican Gaul, A.D. 418. O’Conor Proleg. ii. p. 118, who cites Patrick himself as declaring, that “ he had traversed the Gauls, and Italy, and the Isles of the Tyrrhenian sea:” and there O’Conor concurs with Colgan in rendering the line, “ In australi parte Latii;” which seems a better rendering than this here, “ In australi parte Australis Lethaniæ;” supposing that Lethania,

8.

*Fuit salutaris Hiberniæ
Adventus Patricii ad Focladios,
Audivit a longe sonum vocantium
Infantum masculorum Sylvæ Fochlad.*

9.

*Rogabant ut veniret Sanctus, Quo cum discurrerent in dies,*
Quo abstraherentur ab erroribus Populi Hiberniæ † ad vitam.*

10.

*Populi Hiberniæ prophetizabant, ‘ Venturos pacis dies novos,
Qui durarent in perpetuum :
Fore desertam regionem Temoriæ.’*

---

beside Armorica, included western Gaul, as far as the see of Auxerre southward. Not. Proleg. i. 91; for as Colgan justly objects, Nisi Germanus dicatur degisse in eis, (insulis Tyrrheni maris) videtur hic præposterus ordo.

* In this, and the 18th stanza, Colgan has confounded the Irish term, Leathu, signifying “ daily,” with Leatha, “ Latium, or Italy;” and thereby inextricably embarrassed the sense. This is one of the happiest emendations of O’Conor, “ Leathu, indies.”

† The Irish phrase, Tuatha h-Erinn, seems to be mistranslated populi Hiberniæ, by Colgan and O’Conor, throughout ## 11.

*Sui Druidæ Laogario
Adventum Patricii non celabant,
Verificata sunt vaticinia
De REGE quem vaticinabant.*

12.

*Erat clarus Patricius usque ad obitum,
Erat strenuus in profligandis erroribus;
Hinc exaltata sunt ejus acta
Supra desuper omnes tribus populorum.*

13.

*Hymnos, et Apocalypsin,
Tres quinquagenas (Psalmorum) indies canebat.
Prædicabat, baptizabat, orabat,
A laudibus DEI non cessabat.*

14.

*Non impediebat algor
Quin maneret nocte in aquis,
Ad cœli obtinendum regnum, Prædicabat de DEO in collibus.*

the Poem : Tuatha rather signifies “Diviners.” See Essay, p. 151—156. And in this specific sense it is distinguished from the generic, decani, “peoples.” Stanz. 12.

15.

*In Slana populorum montis Boirch, (Fonte) qui nunquam sentit siccitatem, vel diminutionem,
 Canebat centum Psalmos omni nocte,
 REGI ANGELORUM ut serviret.*

16.

*Dormiebat supra saxum nudum postea,
 Et casula madida circumamictus,
 Fuit cortex* ejus quietis pulvinar,
 Non sinit corpus suum in superbiam.*

17.

*Prædicabat evangelium cuique,
 Operabat ingentia miracula,
 Sanabat cæcos, jejuniis
 Mortuos resuscitabat ad vitam.*

* Colgan renders coirthæ, “saxum;” but it is evidently derived from the Latin cortex, “the bark of a tree;” and was so understood by Mabillon:—Centenis, per diem, totidemque per noctem, genuflexionibus, DEI majestatem adorabat; et pro plumis et lectisterniis, tantum arborum corticibus utebatur. Annal. T. I. p. 150. Proleg. i. p. 93, note.

18.

*Patricius prædicabat Scotis,*
 Passus est magnas tribulationes indies,
 Ideo ut salvi fierent in æternum,
 Omnes quibus annunciat de vita.*

19.

*Filiī Emeri, filii Erimonii, Ierunt omnes cum Diabolo,
 Etiam eos dejecit Satanus
 In magna palearum ventilatione in infernum.*

20.

*Donec venit Apostolus
 Ad eos docendos, licet spiritus maligni vchementes,
 Prædicavit ter viginti annis,
 Crucem CHRISTI populis Feniorum.†*

21.

*Supra populos Hiberniæ erant umbræ,
 Populos adorantes idola,
 Non credebant in veram DIVINITATEM,
 In ejus TRINITATEM veram.*

---

* The Irish Scotu-ibh, should rather be rendered Scoti-genis, “the Scotian race;” for ibh signifies “a tribe.” See Appendix I.

† The original, Tuatha-ibh Fene, should rather be rendered Magis Fenigenarum, “the Diviners of Fenian, or Phenician descent.”

22.

In Ardmacha est imperium,
 Et diuturnum nascenti juventuti Eamaniæ,
 Et ecclesia celebris in Duno * —
 Non mea voluntas quod deserta Temoria.

23.

Patricius quando fuit in lepra,
 Ad medelam procedens Ardmacham,
 Invit angelus coram eo; †
 In via, in medio dici.

24.

Ivit ad austrum ad VICTOREM,
 (Fuit is idem qui vocavit)
 Exarsit rubus in quo erat,
 Ibi miscuerunt colloquium.

25.

Dixit (Angelus) regimen Ardmachæ ;
 CHRISTO iteratas laudes, gratias :
 Ad cœlos magna (tua) dilectio
 Prosperam reddidit tibi tuam petitionem.

* Colgan has rightly preserved the original compound, Dun-leithglas, denoting the town of Down-patrick, Ulster, where our saint was buried; as distinguished from Dunum simply, which probably denoted the town of Kilkenny, in Leinster. See Append. No. I.

† Lynch renders this line, “An angel came upon his head,” or appeared over him in the air. Cean, “head,” is omitted by Colgan and O’Conor.

26.

Hymnus te * laudans; te vivente,
 Erit lorica protectionis cuique;
 Ibunt in die judicii,
 Cum prudentibus in æternum, viri Hiberniæ.

27.

Remansit Tassachus post eum,
 Quando ministravit Communionem ei,
 Dixit quod non convalesceret Patricius,
 Verba Tassachi non falsa.

28.

Sol posuit finem nocti,
 Ita ut non deficeret lux eis,
Spatio unius anni fuit lux,
 Fuit is pacis dies diuturnus.

29.

In prælio gesto in Bethoron,
 Contra populum Canaan, per filium Nun,
 Stetit Sol contra Gabaon;
 Ut narrant literæ nobis.

* Lynch's translation, “A Hymn sung by thee, while living;” alluding, probably, to Stanza 13; seems preferable to Colgan and O'Conor's rendering here; both supposing that Fiech referred to Sechnal's Hymn in praise of St. Patrick; which was later than Fiech's time, and therefore could not be intended. Any other Hymn supposed to be written by St. Patrick (Epist. Nuncupat. p. 164.) would surely be irrelevant.

30.

Quoniam stetit pro Joshua,
Sol, ad cædendos peccatores,
Cur non trecies obedientior
Lux, propter beatitudinem Sanctorum ?

31.

Clerici Hiberniae confluunt
Ad exequias Patricii ex omni loco,
Sonus concentus superni
Afficit somno quemque eorum.

32.

Anima Patricii a corpore,
Post ærumnas, separata est ;
Angeli Dei prima nocte
Excubias fecerunt sine mora.

33.

Quando lugebant Patricium,
Ivit ad Patricium alterum :
Et simul cum gaudio abierunt
Ad JESUM, filium Mariæ.

34.

Patricius absque elevatione superbiæ,
Ingentia bona excogitavit :
Obiit in servitis Filii Mariæ,
Fuit [id] felix ejus nativitas.

This version, however, has great merit, in removing many obscurities in Colgan's, which rendered several parts of the poem unintelligible; partly by closer attention to the antiquated terms found therein; armchosal, "Satanas," 19, &c. and also to the derivations from the Latin, illobra, "in lepra," 23, &c.

---

TRANSLATION
OF
FIECH'S IRISH POEM;
OR,
PANEGYRIC ON ST. PATRICK.

Chiefly from O'Conor's Latin Version.

1.

*Patrick was born at Nemthur,
As related in stories ;
A youth of sixteen years
When carried into captivity.*

2.

*Succat, his name among his own tribes,
Who was his father be it known ;
He was son of Calphurnius * and Otide,
Grandson of the Deacon Odisse.*

* In his epistle to Coroticus, Patrick has recorded his father's family name : Ingenuus fui secundum carnem, Decorione patre nascor. His family name, latinized, Decorio, was changed to Calphurnius, at his ordination. There seems no ground for the supposed celibacy of Calphurnius, after he became a priest. This was a monkish fiction.

3.

He was six years in servitude,
 (The food of the Gentiles he ate not).
 His adoptive name was Caithraghe,
 Because he served ‘four’ tribes.

4.

VICTOR (CHRIST) said to the servant
 Of Milcho : ‘Depart over the waves,’
 HE set his feet upon the rock,
 There, his footsteps still remain.

5.

He travelled over the whole Alps,
 Over the seas ; his journey was prosperous.
 He resided with Germanus,
 In the southern part of Latium * (Italy).

6.

In the islands of the Tyrrhenian sea,
 In them he dwelt, as is related ;
 He read the Canon (of Scripture) with Germanus :
 And so the churches (abroad) assert.

* The coasts of Italy, and the islands of the Tuscan sea, in Jerome’s time, swarmed with convents of monks. See O’Conor, Proleg. ii. p. 118. Patrick calls them the “Roman Saints,” Confess. § 16.

7.

To Erin* he proceeded,
 (Warned by) the ANGEL OF GOD, in visions ; †
 Often he saw in dreams,
 That he ought to return thither.

8.

Most salutary to Erin
 Was the coming of Patrick to Foclad ;
 He heard from afar the sound of invitation
 From the sons of Foclad wood.

9.

They besought the Saint to come,
 To discourse with them daily ;
 To draw away from their errors
 The Diviners of Erin to life (eternal).

* I have retained the original proper name of Ireland ; compounded of Iar, or Er, signifying “western,” and In, the contraction of Innis, “Island.”

† Colgan’s version, “Admonitus Angelorum apparitionibus,” followed by Lynch, “Warned by God’s Angels in apparitions ;” seems preferable to O’Conor’s “Angelis Dei vocantibus :” for the Irish term, “fithisi,” is evidently the Latin visionibus, disguised by the orthography : thus, fir, in Irish, is vir, or viri, in Latin ; as Fir-bolgs, “Viri Belgæ.” But Fiech’s Aingil De, should rather be understood in the singular number, corresponding to VICTOR, in the preceding Stanza, 4.

10.

The Diviners of Erin predicted—
 “ New days of peace shall come,
 Which shall endure for ever :
 The country of Tenor shall be deserted.”

11.

His Druids from Loagaire
 The coming of Patrick concealed not ;
 The predictions were verified
 Concerning the Sovereign whom they foretold.

12.

Patrick was renowned till his death,
 He was zealous in abolishing errors ;
 Hence, his acts were celebrated
 Among all tribes of peoples.

13.

The Hymns and the Apocalypse,
 The three fifties (Psalms) he chaunted daily ;
 He preached, he baptized, he prayed,
 From the praises of GOD he ceased not.

14.

The cold prevented him not,
 From remaining at night in the rains ;
 To obtain the kingdom (of Heaven),
 He preached GOD on the hills

15.

In Slane, with the diviners of Mount Barcha,
Whose (river Boyne) is never dried nor diminished,
He chaunted a hundred psalms each night,
To serve the KING OF ANGELS.

16.

He slept upon the bare rock,
And a wet quilt over him.
The bark (of trees) was his pillow ;
He indulged not his body in luxury.

17.

He preached the Gospel to all,
He worked miracles * daily ;
He healed the blind ; with fasting,
The dead he restored to life.

18.

Patrick preached to the Scotian tribes ;
He underwent great labours daily ;
That all may be saved for ever,
Each whom he guided to life.

---

* See Strictures on these miracles, Essay, p. 166.

19.

The sons of Eber,* and the sons of Eremon,
 Were all going to the Devil ;
 Even Satan was casting them down to hell,
 In the great winnowing fan.

20.

Until the Apostle arrived,
 To preserve them from evil spirits :
 He preached for three-score years [descent.
 The cross of CHRIST, to the diviners of Fenian.

21.

Upon the diviners of Erin was darkness,
 The diviners adoring idols :
 They believed not in the true DEITY,
 In the true TRINITY.†

* The original Emir, is evidently a corruption of Eber, or Heber, the brother of Eremon or Heremon; these were the sons of Milesius, whose expedition from Spain to Ireland took place A.D. 1002. See Append. I.

† “St. Patrick is said to have made use of that species of trefoil, to which, in Ireland, we give the name of Shamrock, in explaining the doctrine of the TRINITY to the Pagan Irish. I do not know if there be any other reason for our adoption of this plant as a national emblem. HOPE, among the ancients, was “sometimes represented as a beautiful child, standing upon tiptoes, and a trefoil, or three-coloured grass, in her hand.” Moore’s Irish Melodies, No. V. p. 5.

22.

In Ardmagh is the seat of empire,
 And long shall be, to the citizens of Emania ;
 And the great church, at Down-patrick.
 I wish not that Temor be tribeless.

23.

When Patrick was in the leprosy,
 Going for cure to Ardmagh,
 An Angel came upon him,
 On the way, in the middle of the day.

24.

He went southwards to VICTOR,
 (He it was who called him)
 The bush in which he was burnt ;
 Then they held conference.

25.

(VICTOR) said, “authority is given to Ardmach ;
 To CHRIST repeated praises, thanks ;
 (Thy) great love to heaven,
 Hath prospered thy petition.”

26.

“ The hymn you chaunt, while living,
 Shall be a breast-plate to each ;
 The men of Erin, in the day of judgment,
 Shall be with the wise for ever.”

27.

Tassac * remained after him :
 When he gave him the Communion,
 He said that Patrick would not recover ;
 The words of Tassac were not false.

28.

The sun dispelled the night,
 So that the light forsook them not.
 For the space of a year there was sun-light : †
 That was the prolonged day.

29.

In the battle fought at Bethoron,
 Against the diviners of Canaan by the son of Nun,
 The sun stood still over Gibeon,
 As Scripture relates to us.

* Tassac was originally a brazier and silversmith, who ornamented the celebrated crozier for St. Patrick, called the Staff of Jesus. “ Tassac was afterwards a priest.” Lynch.

† I have ventured to render soilsi, “ sunlight,” supposing it to be derived from the Latin Sol. It occurs again, stanza 30. I suspect, however, that samh, in the first line of stanza 28, is the contraction of samhin; and if so, it denotes the moon, and not the sun. See Essay, p. 156.—And then, the rendering should be, “ The moon kept back the night;” as she actually did by “ standing still over the valley of Ajalon.” Joshua x. 12.

30.

Since the sun stood still for Joshua,
To slay the sinners (of Canaan),
Why should not the sun's light
Be three hundred times more obedient,
On account of the felicity of the Saints ?

31.

The clergy of Erin, they flocked
To the wake* of Patrick, from every side ;
The sound of celestial harmony
Set each of them to sleep.

32.

The soul of Patrick from his body
Was separated after his labours :
The Angels of God, the first night,
Kept watch, without delay.

---

* I have here followed Lynch's rendering of Dairi, “ to wake ;” alluding to the Irish custom of watching the corpses the first night after death. The watching was poetically celebrated by the Angels of God, who separated his soul from the body, and carried it to “ Father Abraham, in Paradise ;” who took it directly to JESUS in heaven, (not to purgatory), according to Fiech's doctrine.

33.

While they bewailed * Patrick, (in Erin,)
He went to the other Patrick, (father Abraham,)
And with joy they departed together,
To JESUS the Son of Mary.

34.

Patrick, not elated with pride,
Was the anchor of great blessings ;
He died in the service of the Son of Mary,
His birth was auspicious.

---

* The Irish hualai, resembles the Latin, ululo, to "howl," or "bewail."

I BRASS - Found at BREIN GWYN in the Isle of ANGLESEY
Rowlands Monn. Antiqu. p. 92. 308. 321

II SILVER - In the possession of the REV T SYMONDS Ersham - Oxfordshire

III SILVER - In the possession of M. G. CORLETT found at FRIENDS WALK near CORK Oct 1814

V.

ANTIQUE MEDALS OF OUR BLESSED SAVIOUR
FOUND IN THE BRITISH ISLES.

AMONG the various antiquities found in the British Isles from time to time, certain silver and brass Medals of our blessed Saviour, with his profile, and inscriptions in the Hebrew character, are entitled to attention; as furnishing collateral evidence, if genuine antiques, of the early introduction of Christianity into the places in which they were found.

I. The first of the series, noticed in the fac-similes of Plate III, is that of a Brass Medal found in the Isle of Anglesey, about A.D. 1702, among the rubbish of an old circular entrenchment, called Brein Gwyn, in the middle of the township of Tre'r Dryw: of which the learned Rowland published a fac-simile in his Mona Antiqua, p. 92; and an explanation of the inscription, in the Appendix, p. 318—321.

The Hebrew inscription appears to be this:

ישוע נבר: משיח הוה ואדם יהוד which may be thus literally translated:

"JESUS THE MIGHTY: THIS IS THE CHRIST AND THE MAN TOGETHER."

The first word in the inscription, יְשׁוּעָה "Jeshuah," in Hebrew, corresponds to the Greek, Ἰησοῦς, 'Jesus,' signifying a "Saviour;" as it is expressed in the Syriac version likewise, Luke i. 31; Matt. i. 21.

The second word, גָּבָר Gibōr, appears to be the contraction of גָּבֹור Gibour, signifying "Mighty; and referring probably to his Scriptural title, אל גָּבֹור, Al Gibour, "Mighty God," Isa. ix. 6.

The third word, מֶשִׁיחַ, Messiah, signifies the same as ὁ χριστός, "The Anointed," as Jesus was preeminently to be king, priest, and prophet.

The fourth, הַזֶּה, Ha-zeh, is the pronoun הָ, Zeh, "He, or This," and the emphatic article הַ, He, "The," prefixed; both connected with the preceding word, according to constant usage, לְעֵם הַזֶּה, le-am ha-zeh, "to this people," Isa. vi. 9; הַעֲם הַזֶּה, ha-am ha-zeh, "this people," Isa. viii. 6; xxix. 13, &c.

The fifth, אָבִם, Adam, is applied to "the first man," the progenitor of the human race; and also, to man or mankind in general, descended from him, throughout the Old Testament: And in the New, is also applied emphatically, to “the second man,” the LORD from Heaven;” so distinguished “from the first man Adam;” who became “a quickening Spirit” at his resurrection; for “as in Adam all die, even so in CHRIST shall all be made alive.” 1 Cor. xv. 22. 45—49.

The sixth, יְחִדָּה, Jahad, “together,” intimates the union of the divine and human nature in JESUS CHRIST. Such appears to be a simpler and more natural interpretation of the term, than “Mediator,” or “Reconciler,” proposed in the Appendix to the Mona Antiqua, p. 318.*

II. The second Medal is of Silver, and more elegantly engraved, in the possession of the Rev. Thomas Symonds, of Ensham, Oxfordshire. It was given to him by a parishioner, on her death-bed; who always carried it about her, having rather a superstitious veneration for it. Where she got it, he knows not. Its fac-simile is given No. II. in the Plate.

The following appears to be the Hebrew inscription:

FRONT. שׁוֹן — א

REVERSE.

מֶשִׁיחַ מֶלֶךְ בָּא בְּשָׁלוֹם: וְאֵר מְאֹדָם עֲשֹׂוי חַי

* The medal itself was unluckily lost, in the carriage from Anglesey to Oxford.

which may be thus literally translated :

FRONT.—“THE LORD JESU.”

REVERSE.—“CHRIST THE KING, CAME IN PEACE : AND THE LIGHT FROM THE MAN WAS MADE LIFE.”

The first letter of the inscription, א, Aleph, appears to be the contraction of אֱלֹהִים, Adōn, “Lord ;” rendered necessary, by the space occupied by the image or profile; as the second word, יֶשׁוּא, Jesu, for the same reason, is curtailed of its last letter, expressed in the first medal.

The first word of the Reverse, מלך, Melech, “the King,” was a usual epithet of Christ, as “the King of Israel,” John i. 50; or “the King of the Jews,” Matt. ii. 2; xxvii. 11; or specifically, “Christ the King,” Luke xxii. 2; namely, the spiritual, as distinguished from the temporal King, Herod, Matt. ii. 1—6; or Cæsar, John xviii. 36.

The third and fourth words, בָּשְׁלוֹם, Bashalom, “came in peace,” are descriptive of his peculiar character as “Prince of Peace,” Isa. ix. 6; who, in meek majesty, entered Jerusalem in humble triumph, like the Judges and Prophets of old, mounted upon an ass; fulfilling prophecy: “Tell ye the daughters of Sion, Behold, thy King cometh unto thee, meek, and sitting upon an ass, even a colt, the foal of an ass," Zech. ix. 9. Matt. xxi. 1—9; who "made peace by the blood of his cross." Col. i. 20.

The fifth word, וְאָרֶב, ve ar, appears to be compounded of the conjunction ו, "and," and אָרֶב, ar, the contraction of אַרְבָּה, aur, "light;" the middle letter, ו, vau, being dropt, for want of room for it in the line.

The sixth word, מִאָדָם, me adam, "from the man," is descriptive of "the second Adam," as observed before, on the first medal; who, at his incarnation, was "the light of the world," John viii. 12; "the true light, which enlighteneth every man coming into the world;" as "flesh, or man; and dwelling among us. John i. 9. 14. Philip. ii. 6—8.

The seventh and eighth words, חַיְשָׁעַ, Ashui hai, "was made life," aptly represent Him, in whom was life," John i. 4; "having life in himself," John v. 26; "the resurrection and the life; or the author of the resurrection to life eternal at the last day, to all them that believe in him, his name, or authority as Jesus, the Christ, the Son of God. John xi. 25; xx. 31. Phil. ii. 9—11.

III. The third Medal is of Brass, with a considerable alloy of silver, resembling the celebrated Corinthian brass, so much used in medals. This appears, from the clearness of its sound, when struck against a table, and from its perfect preservation, though worn a good deal, after having been buried so long. It was accidentally found, last October, 1818, in digging the ridge of a potatoe garden, contiguous to “Friars’ walk,” near the suburbs of the city of Cork, on the south side; where the name is the only memorial left of an ancient monastery, of which even the ruins have perished, being covered by the soil. Still, however, very extensive foundations were discovered not long since, near the spot where the medal was found, on opening a gravel pit; but this obstruction prevented the proprietor from proceeding; and the pit was filled up again. These foundations lie nearly midway between the ruins of two old abbeys; the one eastward, called Red Abbey, beyond which the city extends in every direction; the other westward, called Gill Abbey, near to which the suburbs extend. They are said to have belonged to the Augustine Friars; and are supposed to have been built by a Bishop Gill, about the sixth century. The monastery, which probably was older, from its more ruinous state, could not have been earlier than the fourth century, in the course of which monkery was imported into Europe from Egypt; and introduced by Eusebius of Vercelli into Italy, and by St. Martin of Tours into Gaul. The medal itself is in the possession of

Mr. George Corlett, of Cork; who, with a laudable zeal to promote the study of Sacred Antiquities, has caused a correct fac-simile of the medal to be engraved; and has widely circulated copies of it among the literati of Great Britain and Ireland; wishing to ascertain, as nearly as may be, the age and authenticity of the medal, and has recently published a pamphlet on the subject.

The inscription on it is the same as that on the second medal. And, fortunately, the second, which is more perfect, removes a doubt about two letters in this, which are either obliterated or imperfectly formed: It supplies the chasm of the fourth letter of the second line, in the Cork medal; by the letter ב, beth; and proves that the third letter of the fourth line, which has been mistaken for פ, Pe, is in reality א, Ain.

Several varieties in the inscriptions of these medals, are noticed by the German antiquaries.

The learned Surenhusius, in his magnificent edition of the Mischna, with Rabbinical comments, 6 Tom. fol. Amsterdam, 1260, Tom. iii. p. 239, has given, from Wagenseil, the fac-simile of a medal of the first class, which he saw at Vienna, with this inscription on the reverse:

ישוע נצרי משיח: יהוה ואדם יחד

“ JESUS OF NAZARETH THE CHRIST; THE LORD
AND THE MAN TOGETHER.”

This is a much more elegant engraving, and the letters better formed, than in the fac-simile of the Anglesey medal: and the inscription is probably more correct, because the meaning is fuller and plainer. Perhaps, by the ignorance of the engraver, the second word, נצְרִי, Natsri, might easily have been corrupted into גָּבָר, Gibor; and the fourth word, יְהֹוָה, Jahoh, into הַזֵּה, Hazez; dropping the small final and initial letter, ' , Jod, in both words.

Waserus, de nummis Hebræorum, p. 62, has given the fac-simile of a medal of the second class, with the same inscription, in the Hebrew character; in which the contracted fifth word, וְאֶרְ, Ve-Ar, is written fully, וְאָרְ, Ve-Aur; and to make room for the insertion of the letter וּ, Vau, the two last letters of the seventh word, וְשֻׁעָדָ, are transferred from the fourth, to the last line; coming before the last word, וְנָ.

He also cites Theseus Ambrosius, as having seen at Rome, in the pontificate of Julius II. A.D. 1503, and of Leo X. A.D. 1512, some brass medals with the same inscription in the Samaritan character. But that those in the Hebrew or Chaldee character were in more general circulation: vulgo circumferuntur.

Leusden also, in his Philologus Hebræus, Dissertat. xxvii. de nummis et ponderibus Hebræorum, p. 192, gives what he calls a "Jew*ish-Christian Shekel,"* made by Jews converted to the Christian faith ; of brass, in his own possession ; in which the inscription in Hebrew, is the same on the reverse, as in the foregoing, of Waserus ; with the exception of the first letter, נ, Aleph, wanting, on the front.

He also notices a variation in some other medals, of the four last words of the reverse ; instead of which, these three words are found, אלהים עשוּ, “God was made man,” dropping the last word, ח. And Hottinger, in his treatise De Nummis Orientalium, p. 149, remarks, that gold and silver medals were to be had in different places, with the same inscription.

Wagenseil, in his Sota, Tom. i. p. 579, gives another medal, with a variety of the same inscription ; instead of אלהים, substituting אדם, a second time, and rendering, “And man, by man, was made alive.” “This medal,” says he, “is in the hands of many ; and infants wear it about their neck.” It was therefore evidently used as an amulet. And the Anglesey medal likewise appears to have been used for the same purpose ; for there is a hole drilled through it, in the place marked in the fac-simile, with pricks, or dots.

From the multitude and variety of such medals, with inscriptions more or less perfect, current in Germany and Spain, Wagenseil rejects the whole of them as spurious, and of modern fabrication ; and not only the whole class relating to Christ, but also all coins, with or without Hebrew or Samaritan inscriptions, relating to Abraham, Moses, David, or Solomon, likewise. And he conjectures, that the medals of Christ, in particular, were fabricated by the Jews or Hebrew Christians, originally in Palestine, as a lucrative branch of traffic, for the accommodation of such pious pilgrims and curious travellers as went from Europe to visit the Holy Land, and naturally wished to bring home some reliques, or memorials of their journey : than which, none were apt to be regarded with greater veneration, than supposed antique medals of our blessed Saviour, in the sacred Hebrew character, procured in the country in which he lived.* And the opinion of Wagenscil has been generally adopted by succeeding antiquaries, Joubert, Pinkerton, &c. Dr. Barret, the learned librarian, and Vice Provost of Trinity College, Dublin, conjectures that such fabrication might have taken place, in the dark ages, about the time of the establishment of image worship, in the second Council of Nice, A.D. 787. See his Letter to Dr. Hales, in the pamphlet published by Mr. Corlett, p. 52. And that it was not of a much earlier date, the learned Welsh antiquary Roberts, in a private letter to Dr. H. on the subject, collects, from the silence of the Welsh and Irish records, respecting any such medals, in the frequent pilgrimages to the Holy Land, in the fifth and sixth centuries, by the Britons and Irish, Dewy, or St. David of Menevia, Padarn, and Teilo, &c., who are said to have brought home from thence appropriate gifts (see the foregoing Essay, p. 114,); but no notice is any where taken, of such precious relics, as antique medals of our blessed Lord would necessarily be esteemed, had they been then and there in circulation. And Mr. Roberts further conjectures, that the fabrication and traffic of such, was most prevalent during the Crusades for the recovery of the Holy Land from the Infidels, which lasted two centuries, from the close of the eleventh to the close of the thirteenth.

---

* De horum nummorum origine sic conjicio. Apud secula priora, pietatis aut curiositatis impulsu, Christianorum multi Palaestinam petebant, loca quæ præsentia Servatoris consecravit, suis contemplaturi oculis. Et ipsorum hoc studium fuit, ut quædam, pro itineris memoriâ, domum referrent. Occasionem hinc sumpsere Judei, qui in his partibus degunt, fingendi nummos ejusmodi, et ex illorum venditione faciendi quæstum.

Admitting, however, the fabrication and traffic of spurious antique medals, with Hebrew or Samaritan inscriptions in several cases, the indiscriminate rejection of all such, by Wagenseil and his followers, seems unwarrantable. All counterfeits necessarily presuppose some genuine prototypes ; and there are silver “shekels of Israel,” found in the rubbish of Jerusalem and Mount Sion, of the age of David, if not earlier,* prior to the separation of the ten tribes ; which are held in the highest veneration by the Jews ; and are allowed to be genuine by the most skilful christian antiquaries, Hottinger, &c. and are exquisitely beautiful, in the engraving and elegance of the sacred character ; of which the Samaritan was a ruder imitation. See fac-similes of a whole series of such coins in the learned Prolegomena of the first volume of the London Polyglott Bible, Brian Waltoni Supplementum de Siclorum formis et inscriptione, Pref. pp. 36—38 ; and Proleg. iii. De antiquis Hebraeorum Literis, § 29—37 ; vindicating the genuineness of the sacred character impressed on them ; which was afterwards superseded by the Chaldee, or present Hebrew character, after the Babylonish Captivity ; at the same time Walton rejects the foregoing medals of our Lord, described by Waserus, “quos fictos et recentiores esse, nemo non videt.” Proleg. iii. § 35, p. 20.

---

* The second silver medal is marked with the sacred letters S. and D., signifying, according to Morinus, the Shekel of David ; and the eighth is a quarter-shekel, corresponding to the fee of the fourth part of a shekel of silver, offered by Saul to the prophet Samuel. 1 Sam. ix. 8.

That all such medals, however, of our blessed Lord, are not to be condemned in the gross, as "spurious and more recent," in one general sweeping sentence of rejection, we have strong internal and presumptive evidence. Some of these medals are evidently superior in the elegance of their execution, and accuracy of their inscriptions, to others: and though we are warranted to reject the latter as counterfeits, the former may be genuine, as well as the shekels of Israel. Of the medals of the first class, the Vienna medal possesses superior elegance and accuracy of inscription; while the Anglesey medal is so deficient in both, that we may well doubt its genuineness, and antiquity; as far later than the early age assigned to it by Rowlands, about the time of the suppression of Druidism, or introduction of Christianity into Britain. And if we compare the medals of the second class, the Oxfordshire medal of Mr. Symonds shews much greater accuracy of inscription, than the Cork medal of Mr. Corlett, and is probably therefore of earlier date. That eminent Irish antiquary, Dr. O'Conor, to whom a fac-simile of the Cork medal was communicated, conjectured that it was of Spanish fabrication, and imported by some of the Spanish invaders of Ireland, or Hiberno-Spanish refugees, of Queen Elizabeth's reign. And upon inspection of the medal itself, with which I was favoured by Mr. Corlett, the possessor lately, I am inclined, on second thoughts, to think that it was a ruder imitation of some more perfect medal, struck at a much earlier period.

That all these medals, indeed, were copied from some original prototype, which might have been coeval with the age of Christ himself, is rendered probable by the remarkable likeness that prevails throughout all of them, respecting the visage of Christ. And a traditional description of the person of Christ, is ascribed to Publius Lentulus, the predecessor of Pilate in the government of Judea, in a letter written to the Roman senate, and preserved by Fabricius; which is so minutely circumstantial, that it might rather be attributed to Pilate himself, after our Lord's death. For Lentulus never was governor of Judea; nor was our Lord Jesus celebrated as a public character, until he entered upon his mission during Pilate's government. But it is highly probable, that Pilate accompanied his account of Christ with some description of his person, in his Acts sent to Tiberius, which might have led to that emperor's proposal to the senate, for the deification of Christ, and his enrolment among the Roman gods. See the foregoing Essay, p. 100. And accordingly Waserus, in his shorter account of the same traditional description, says that it was sent by Lentulus to the Roman emperor Tiberius; evidently confounding Lentulus with Pilate.

The shorter description furnished by Waserus, may be thus rendered.*

"The countenance (of CHRIST) was placid, handsome, and ruddy; so formed, however, as to inspire the beholders, not so much with love and reverence, as with terror. His locks were like the colour of a full-ripe filbert nut, [auburn,] straight, and entire down to the ears; from thence somewhat curled, down to the shoulders; but parted on the crown of the head, after the fashion of the Nazarites: his forehead was smooth and shining, his eyes blue and sparkling; his nose and mouth decorous and absolutely faultless; his beard, in colour like his locks, was forked and not long."

On this tradition, which might have been genuine, was evidently framed the other and more elaborate description, recorded by Fabricius,* which may be thus rendered :—

\* Waserus, p. 63, states it thus: "Neque hoc silentio transmitti debet, viz. Imaginem Domini quâ nummo illo nostro exprimitur, ad eam descriptionem esse designatam quam Lentulus, Civis Romanus, et Judæorum olim præses, ad imperatorem Tiberium misisse vulgo perhibetur; quam ait vultu placiido, venusto et subrubicundo fuisse; capillos habuisse colori bene maturæ nucis avellanæ similes; planos et integros ad aures usque; inde crisplos nonnihil ad humeros usque; vertici vero divisos Nazarenorum ritu: fronte fuisse planâ et fulgidâ; oculis glaucis et micantibus; naso et ore decoro et prorsus  $\alpha\mu\sigma\mu\omega$ ; barbâ capillis simili, haud prolixâ, ac bifidatâ."

---

* Fabricius, in his Codex Apocryphus Novi Testamenti, Hamburg, 1719, Vol. I. p. 298, after reciting two letters supposed to be written by Pilate to the emperor Tiberius, recites this, attributed to Lentulus, in the following terms :—

“ Alius ille, Lentulus nomine, qui ante Pilatum administrationem illius urbis (Hierosolymitanæ) habuit, Senatui scripsit :— Hoc tempore vir apparuit, et adhuc vivit, vir præditus potentia magna, nomen ejus Jesus Christus: Homines eum prophetam potentem dicunt, Discipuli ejus Filium Dei vocant. Mortuos vivificat, et ægros ab omnis generis ægritudinibus et morbis sanat. Vir est altæ staturæ, proportionatæ, et conspectus vultus ejus cum severitate et plenus efficacia, ut spectatores amare eum possint et rursus timere. Pili capitis ejus vinei coloris, usque ad fundamentum aurium, sine radiatione et erecti, et a fundamento aurium usque ad humeros contorti ac lucidi, et ab humeris deorsum pendentes, bifido vertice dispositi in morem Nazarænorum. Frons plana et pura, facies ejus sine macula, quam rubor quidam temperatus ornat. Aspectus ejus ingenuus et gratus: Nasus ejus et os ejus nullo modo reprehensibilia: barba ejus multa et colore pilorum capitinis bifurcata: Oculi ejus cœrulei et extreme lucidi. In reprehendendo et objurgando formidabilis, in docendo et exhortando blandæ linguae et amabilis: gratia miranda vultus, cum gravitate. Semel eum ridentem nemo videt, sed flentem — In loquendo ponderans et gravis, et parcus loquela. Pulcherrimus vultu inter homines satos.”

For this curious extract, and others from Hottinger, Waser, Wagenseil, &c. translated in the text, I am indebted to the learned Dr. Barret.

"At this time appeared a man, who is still living, a man endued with great power, his name Jesus Christ. The people say that he is a mighty prophet; his disciples call him the Son of God. He quickens the dead, and heals the sick of all manner of diseases and disorders. He is a man of tall stature, well proportioned, and the aspect of his countenance engaging, with severity, and full of expression, so as to induce the beholders to love, and then to fear him. The locks of his head are of the colour of a vine leaf, without curl, and straight to the bottom of his ears, but from thence down to his shoulders curled and glossy, and hanging below his shoulders. His hair on the crown of the head disparted, after the manner of the Nazarites. His forehead smooth and fair; his face without spot, and adorned with a certain tempered ruddiness. His aspect ingenuous and agreeable. His nose and his mouth in no wise reprehensible. His beard thick, and forked, of the same colour as the locks of his head. His eyes blue, and extremely bright. In reprehending and reproving, awful; in teaching and exhorting, courteous and engaging; a wonderful grace and gravity of countenance. None saw him laugh even once, but rather weep. In speaking, weighty and impressive, and sparing of speech: In countenance, the fairest among the children of men."

From this admirable description, which might be founded in the main, on truth, though embellished evidently in its present form, might have been framed some of the medals of our blessed Saviour. And from it, unquestionably, was drawn that inimitable picture by Carlo Dolci, representing our Saviour in the solemn act of blessing the cup at the Last Supper; so finely copied in needle-work, by Miss Linwood; which rivets the attention of every pious spectator, at her magnificent museum in Leicester Square, London.

FINIS.

PUBLICATIONS

BY THE AUTHOR.

---

1. Sonorum Doctrina rationalis et experimentalis, ex Newtoni optimorumque Physicorum Scriptis, methodo elementaria congesta. Cui præmittitur Disquisitio de Aere et Modificationibus Atmospherae. 1778, Dublin, 4to. pp. 151.

This tract was chiefly designed to explain and vindicate Sir Isaac Newton's abstruse Theory of Sounds, contained in his fundamental propositions, Principia, vol. ii. prop. 47, 48, 49, and to confirm it by the experiments of Durham, Condamine, &c.

2. De Motibus Planetarum in Orbibus excentricis secundum Theoriam Newtonianam Dissertation. 1782, Dublin, 8vo. pp. 32.

This was designed to explain Newton's fundamental proposition, Principia, lib. i. prop. 16, and its corollaries; and to deduce immediately from thence, his profound theory of the Revolutions of the Planets and Comets in Elliptical Orbits.

3. Analysis Equationum. 1784, Dublin, 4to. pp. 248.

Designed as a Comment on Newton's concise and difficult Arithmetica Universalis; including the principal improvements made in Algebra, since, by De Moivre, Simpson, Saunderson, Hutton, Waring, Landon, Clairaut, Euler, D'Alembert, Bertrand, La Grange, &c.

PUBLICATIONS BY THE AUTHOR.

4. Observations on the Political Influence of the Doctrine of the Pope's Supremacy. Dublin and London, part. i. 1787; part ii. 1788, 8vo.

These pamphlets were occasioned by the controversy in Ireland, between Bishop Woodward and Doctor Butler, titular Archbishop of Cashel, Mr. O'Leary, &c.

5. The Rights of Citizens. Dublin, 1793, 8vo.

6. The Scripture Doctrine of Political Government and Political Liberty. Dublin, 1794, 8vo.

These were designed to answer Paine's Rights of Man, the popular clamour for speedy and radical Reform of Parliament, and the revolutionary doctrines.

7. Observations on the present State of the Parochial Clergy of the Church of Ireland. Dublin, 1794, 8vo.—Reprinted in London, by Baron Maseres, along with his Moderate Reformer.

In this pamphlet, the profound political wisdom of the institution of Tythes is vindicated, as a provision for the Clergy, rising or falling with the times, rendering them dependant on the Laity, and excluding them from political power; and the inadequacy, and ruinous consequences exposed, of the crude and abortive schemes of Commutation for Tythe hitherto devised or suggested.

8. Irish Pursuits of Literature, 1793 and 1799. Dublin, 8vo. Containing Translations of the classical Greek and Latin mottos and citations in that celebrated Satire, the English Pursuits of Literature; and reflexions on the political state of Ireland, during the former Rebellion of 1798.

9. The Inspector. London, 1799, 8vo. Chiefly designed to expose the leading errors of French Philosophism, and of the Socinian and Unitarian Schools.

PUBLICATIONS BY THE AUTHOR.

10. An Answer to Dr. Stokes' Essay on the Nature and Import of Subscription to the Thirty-nine Articles, in Ireland. Dublin, 1800, 8vo.

Doctor S. endeavoured to shew a distinctness in the constitutions of the Established Churches of England and Ireland; that “the Irish Clergy received the Thirty-nine Articles merely as Articles of Peace, not like the English as Articles of Faith or Opinion.” But this is proved to be unfounded, from the Irish Canons “for establishing the Agreement of the Church of England and Ireland in the profession of the same Faith,” and for “avoiding diversities of opinions,” &c. and, 2. From the intention of the framers, Lord Strafford, &c. which was evidently to unite the two Churches.

11. Analysis Fluxionum, with Corrigenda and Addenda. London, 1800, 4to.

This was designed to explain Newton's concise and abstruse Theory of Fluxions, as stated in its original form, Principia, lib. ii. sect. ii. lemma 2, and its six cases; and to vindicate his title to the invention of Fluxions, from the misrepresentations of La Grange and the Monthly Review; and in the Appendix, to vindicate his Theory of Aërial Vibrations from the charge of Materialism, brought against it by Professor Robinson of Edinburgh.

This tract was printed by Baron Masères, and inserted also in the fifth volume of his Scriptores Logarithmici, p. 87—204; with the Corrigenda, &c. p. 149—259.

12. National Judgments. Dublin, 1803, 8vo. The substance of a Fast Sermon, on Isa. ix. 12, preached at Killesandra, Oct. 19, after the latter Rebellion of 1803.

13. Methodism Inspected. Dublin, 8vo. Part I. 1803;
Part II. 1805.

Part I. was designed to correct the irregularities of the West-leian Methodist Missionaries, who preached on horseback, with black caps, in fairs and markets; circulated printed libels against the Clergy of every denomination; and, though laymen, administered the ordinances; and to expose their fanciful and dangerous doctrines of immediate conversion, sinless perfection, &c.

PUBLICATIONS BY THE AUTHOR.

Part II.—To answer Mr. Joseph Benson's Inspector of Methodism inspected, and Christian Observer observed, in which he attempted to vindicate the Missionaries, &c.

14. A Series of Essays on Sacred Criticism, in twenty-one numbers, published in the Orthodox Churchman's Magazine, from February, 1803, to December, 1804, under the signature of Inspector.

15. Ten Letters to Dr. Troy, titular Archbishop of Dublin, in consequence of his Pastoral Letter, on the breaking out of the Rebellion of 1803, published in the Antijacobin Review, from July 1807, to the end of that year.—
A second edition of those Letters, 8vo. has been published (1813) by Stockdale, Pall Mall.

16. Dissertations on the Prophecies expressing the Divine and Human Character of our LORD JESUS CHRIST. London, 1808, 8vo. Rivingtons.

17. A New Analysis of Chronology. London, 3 vols. 4to. Rivingtons; vol. i. 1809; vol. ii. 1811; vol. iii. 1814.

The first Volume contains an Explanation of the New System of Chronology, introduced therein; to which are added, 1. The Elements of Technical Chronology, and 2. The Elements of Sacred Geography, illustrated with Six Copper-plates.

The second Volume, consisting of two Books, each larger than the first Volume, contains a Chronological History of the Old Testament, Apocrypha, and New Testament, and of the whole range of Prophecy; immediately translated from the Original Scriptures.

The third Volume contains a Chronological History of the Assyrians, Babylonians, Medes, Persians, Lydians, Egyptians, &c. adjusted to Sacred Chronology throughout; and also a copious and general Index to the whole Work.

PUBLICATIONS BY THE AUTHOR.

18. A Synopsis of the Signs of the Times, humbly attempted to be traced from the Chronological Prophecies, chiefly drawn from the New Analysis, with improvements. 8vo. 1817, Dublin, Grierson; London, Rivingtons.
  19. Faith in the Holy Trinity, the Doctrine of the Gospel; and Sabellian Unitarianism, shewn to be the God-denying Apostacy, 2 vols. 8vo. 1818, Rivingtons.
  20. A Sermon on the Lord's Prayer. 1818.
  21. Abridgment of a Correspondence between the Courts of Rome and Baden, in the year 1817, respecting the appointment of Baron Wessenberg, Vicar Capitular of the Diocese of Constance. 1819.
  22. An Essay on the Origin and Purity of the Primitive Church of the British Isles, and its Independence upon the Church of Rome. 1819.
-

ERRATA.

ESSAY,

- p. 7, l. 16, for "our," read—and.
p. 12, note, l. 17, for "Cotelirius Patris," r. Cotelerius Patres.
— l. 2 à fine, for "εκλπσια," r. εκλησια.
p. 17, l. 14, 17, } for "Octian," r. Ostian.
p. 19, l. 3. }
p. 19, l. 5, for "Illyrium," r. Illyricum.
p. 25, l. 3, for "Caesaria," r. Caesarea.
p. 27, l. 17, for "what," r. whom.
p. 31, note, l. 8, for "such," r. used.
p. 32, l. 15, for "רַבָּ," r. רַבָּ.
p. 34, note, l. 18, for "for stone," r. שׁוֹאָה (Shuah).
p. 37, l. 6 à fine, for "Judaizers," r. Judaizers.
p. 59, l. 12, for "1509," r. 1609.
p. 81, l. ult. for "republished," r. reprinted.
p. 95, l. 22, for "indpendent," r. independent.
p. 111, l. 7, for "Historiegen des," r. Historie gens des.
p. 114, l. 15, for "530," r. 430.
p. 132, l. 10, for "stain," r. contagion.
p. 141, l. 6, for "570," r. 470.
p. 147, l. 12, for "or," r. on.
p. 149, l. 7, dele "Southern" before "Latium."
p. 150, stanza 19, for "Emir," r. Eber.
p. 161, l. 22, for "a furlong," r. ten yards.
— l. 23, for "northward," r. southward.
p. 179, l. 2, for "Kiernan," r. Kieran.
p. 182, note, l. 3, for "Logidis," r. Lagidis.
p. 190, stanza 31, for "funeral," r. wake.
— ibid. for "source," r. sound.
p. 257, l. ult. for "1558," r. 1588.
p. 262, l. 19, for "1624," r. 1654.
p. 286, l. 3 à fine, insert,

(signed) L. Cardinal Antonelli, Prefect.

A. Archbishop of Arden, Secretary.

- p. 301, l. 10, dele "not."

APPENDIX,

- p. 15, l. 16, for "Kildare," r. Kilkenny.
p. 37, l. 8, for "Loagaire," r. Laogaire.
p. 42, l. 12, for "enquiry," r. enquire.
p. 57, l. 16, for "velsciter," r. velociter.
— l. 13, for "videtar," r. videar.
p. 64, l. 7, for "cognoscerim," r. cognoscerem.
p. 67, l. 11, for "efforam," r. offeram.
p. 73, l. 3, for "omittere," r. amittere.
p. 79, l. 7 à fine, for "ix," r. iv.
p. 80, l. 12, for "silicet," r. scilicet.
p. 88, stanza 22, for "distrubh," r. ditrubb.
p. 89, stanza 24, for "ralastur," r. relastur.
p. 90, stanza 30, for "be," r. ba.
p. 91, l. 5 à fine for "Christ, r. Crist.
p. 93, l. 2, for "reddita," r. redditum.

BW5008 .H16
An essay on the origin and purity of the

Princeton Theological Seminary-Speer Library

1 1012 00037 9208

